Council of the University

Declaration of approval of nomination of external member of Council

No request for a ballot having been received, the proposal to appoint Ms Jayne Almond as a member of Council for four years from Michaelmas Term 2011 was deemed to have been approved on 19 August.

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations

Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 8 October.

Explanatory Note

The following change provides a definition of scrutiny in the regulations concerning the Audit and Scrutiny Committee, to clarify the scope of this aspect of the committee's work.

Text of Regulations

1 In Council Regulations 15 of 2002 concerning the Audit and Scrutiny Committee (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, amended on 8 May 2003, 1 June 2006, 21 January 2010 and 18 March 2010, Gazette, Vol. 133, p. 1212; Vol. 136, pp. 1152–3; Vol. 140, pp. 444, 746), delete existing regulation 3.11 (2) and substitute (new text underlined):

‘(2) pursuant to regulation 3.12, call for any investigation that it considers necessary and to call any individual or call for any document or documents relevant to any such investigation that it considers necessary;’

2 Ibid., insert new regulation 3.12 as follows and renumber existing 3.12–3.134:

‘3.12. Scrutiny is the process of structured inquiry or investigation using the committee's formal resources into failures, alleged failures, or risks of failure, of operations and of process in the University at large, as determined by the committee.’

CORRECTIONS TO BE MADE UNDER THE SLIP RULE

Regulation 1.17 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Regulations of Congregation for the Conduct of Business in Congregation) gives the Vice-Chancellor the power, after consultation with the Registrar and the Proctors, to correct any clerical error, slip or omission in the text of a legislative proposal which has been made.

After consultation, the Vice-Chancellor has agreed to the amendment of the legislative proposal concerning the Michael Davys Professor of Neuroscience (Gazette, Vol. 140, approved by Congregation on 1 June, p. 1123, text of proposal on pp. 946–7, 6 May 2010), to delete references to regulations that should have been removed. This amendment shall be effective from the date of approval by Her Majesty in Council.

In the Schedule to the Statutes (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, pp. 133–59), after Part 70, insert the following new Part 71 (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

Part 71: Michael Davys Professor of Neuroscience

71.1. The benefaction of £1,997,000 from the Davys Family Trust for Neuroscience Fund, together with any further donations for this purpose, shall be used to establish and maintain the Michael Davys Professorship of Neuroscience.

71.2. The University shall retain all of the benefaction as permanent endowment and shall apply the net income towards the salary and expenses of the holder of the professorship, and associated overheads. If the salary of the professor is wholly or partly covered from other sources, there shall be discretion to apply the net income directly to support the professor's research.

71.3. The administration of the benefaction, and the application of its income, shall be the responsibility of the Medical Sciences Board.

71.4. The Michael Davys Professor of Neuroscience shall undertake research in neuroscience with a special interest in mental illnesses and shall lecture and give instruction in this subject. In the event there is sufficient income, this shall be applied to an annual Michael Davys Lecture in Neuroscience on a topic of relevance to mental illness.

71.5. The professor shall be elected by an electoral board consisting of:

(1) the Vice-Chancellor, or, if the head of the college specified in paragraph (2) below is Vice-Chancellor, a person appointed by Council on the occurrence of a vacancy to act as an elector on this occasion;

(2) the head of the college to which the professorship shall be for the time being allocated by Council under any regulation in that behalf, or, if the head is unable or unwilling to act, a person appointed by the governing body of the college on the occurrence of a vacancy to act as an elector on that occasion;

(3) a person appointed by the governing body of the college specified in paragraph (2) above;

(4), (5) two persons appointed by Council;

(6)–(9) four persons appointed by the Medical Sciences Board.

~~6. The professor shall be subject to the General Provisions of the regulations concerning the duties of professors and to those Particular Provisions of the same regulations which are applicable to this chair.~~

~~7. Regulations 1–2 shall be deemed as Trust Regulations under the provisions of Part D of Statute XVI.~~

~~71.68. Regulations Sections 71.3–71.56 may be amended by Council.~~

¶ The Oration by the Vice-Chancellor and the admission of the Pro-Vice-Chancellors and Clerks of the Market will take place in Convocation House.

Congregation 12 October 2 p.m.

¶ Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 4 October, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose the legislative proposals at 1 and 2, or the space resolution at 3, below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the legislative proposals and resolution shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

1 Voting on Legislative Proposal: establishment of degree of Master of Computer Science and Philosophy Explanatory Note

The following Legislative Proposal establishes the new degree of Master of Computer Science and Philosophy. This degree is on the model of existing four-year courses that lead to master's awards, such as the Master of Computer Science (MCompSci), and the Master of Mathematics and Philosophy (MMathPhil). A consequential change is also being made to the Congregation Regulations concerning the conduct of ceremonies and the opportunity is being taken to add to these regulations forms of presentation and admission for other degrees.

WHEREAS it is expedient to establish the degree of Master of Computer Science and Philosophy, THE UNIVERSITY ENACTS AS FOLLOWS.

1 In section 1 of Statute X (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 110, amended with effect from 14 June 2005, 11 October 2005 and 2 June 2009, Vol. 135, p. 1174, 16 June 2005; Vol. 136, p. 184, 13 October 2005; Vol. 139, p. 1164), after 'Master of Computer Science', insert 'Master of Computer Science and Philosophy'.

2 In regulation 4.2 of Congregation Regulations 3 of 2002 concerning the conduct of ceremonies in Congregation, and certain other ceremonies (made by Congregation on 5 March 2002, Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4612, 13 February 2002, p. 771, as amended on 11 February 2003, 11 March 2003, 2 November 2004, 11 October 2005 and 13 June 2006, Vol. 133, p. 781, 13 February 2003, p. 948, 13 March 2003; Vol. 135, p. 297, 4 November 2004; Vol. 136, p. 184, 13 October 2005, p. 1241, 15 June 2006) delete existing paragraph (21) and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

'(21) Master of Biochemistry, Chemistry, Computer Science, Earth Sciences, Engineering, Mathematics, Physics, Mathematics and Computer Science, Mathematics and Philosophy, Physics and Philosophy, and Computer Science and Philosophy

Insignissime, etc., praesento vobis hos meos scholares in facultate Artium, ut admittantur ad gradum Magistri in Biochimia, vel Chimia, vel Scientia Computatoria, vel Scientiis Terrenis, vel Ingeniaria, vel Mathematicis, vel Physica, vel Mathematica et Scientia Computatoria, vel Mathematica et Philosophia, vel Physica et Philosophia, vel Scientia Computatoria et Philosophia prout in schedula a Registrario scriptum est.'

3 Ibid., in regulation 4.2 insert new paragraph (25) below:

'(25) Doctor of Engineering

Insignissime, etc., praesento vobis hunc meum scholarem in Ingeniaria (or hunc Baccalaureum or Magistrum) ut admittatur ad gradum Doctoris in Ingeniaria.'

4 Ibid., in regulation 4.3 delete paragraph (16) and substitute:

'(16) Master of Biochemistry, Chemistry, Computer Science, Earth Sciences, Engineering, Mathematics, Physics, Mathematics and Computer Science, Mathematics and Philosophy, Physics and Philosophy, and Computer Science and Philosophy

Domini, ego admitto vos ad gradum Magistri in Biochimia, vel Chimia, vel Scientia Computatoria, vel Scientiis Terrenis, vel Ingeniaria, vel Mathematicis, vel Physica, vel Mathematica et Scientia Computatoria, vel Mathematica et Philosophia, vel Physica et Philosophia, vel Scientia Computatoria et Philosophia prout in schedula a Registrario scriptum est; insuper auctoritate mea et totius Universitatis, do vobis potestatem legendi, et reliqua omnia faciendi quae ad eundem gradum spectant.'

5 Ibid., in regulation 4.3 insert new paragraph (20) below and renumber existing paragraph (20) as (21):

'(20) Doctor of Engineering

Domine or Magister (or Domini or Magistri), ego admitto te (or vos) ad gradum Doctoris in Ingeniaria.'

Regulations to be made by Council if the Statute is approved

1 In regulation 2.1 of Council Regulations 22 of 2002 concerning academic precedence and standing (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended on 14 June 2005 and 11 October 2005, Vol. 135, p. 1174, 16 June 2005; Vol. 139, p. 1004, 30 April 2009), after 'Master of Arts, or Master of Biochemistry or Chemistry or Computer Science' insert 'or Computer Science and Philosophy'.

2 Ibid., after 'Bachelor of Arts, or Master of Biochemistry or Chemistry or Computer Science' insert 'or Computer Science and Philosophy'.

2 Voting on Legislative Proposal: Statute V concerning Greyfriars Explanatory Note

The following Legislative Proposal, submitted by Council under Part 2 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 161, as amended on 12 October 2004, 7 March 2006 and 14 October 2008 (Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; Vol. 137, p. 669; Vol. 139, pp. 4–8), removes a reference to Greyfriars in a list of Permanent Private Halls licensed by the University.

WHEREAS it is expedient to remove a reference to Greyfriars in Statute V, THE UNIVERSITY ENACTS AS FOLLOWS.

In section 11 of Statute V, concerning the Permanent Private Halls licensed by the University (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, as amended on 17 July 2003, Vol. 133, p. 1536), delete 'Greyfriars'.

Regulations to be made by Council if the Statute is approved

In regulation 4 (1) of Council Regulations 12 of 2002, concerning the establishment and maintenance of Permanent Private Halls (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended on 17 July 2003, Vol. 133, p. 1536), delete 'Greyfriars 30'.

3 Voting on resolution authorising use of space in the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter

Explanatory Note

Principles and process for space allocations in the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter

The Radcliffe Observatory Quarter (ROQ) was acquired by the University in 2003 with the intention of developing an integrated campus, capable of phased development, which offers expansion space for the collegiate University over the next twenty years. The overall principles for the development of the site are set out in the ROQ Masterplan developed over a three-year period and endorsed by Council in December 2008.

In the case of the ROQ development, all space allocations are considered in the first instance by the ROQ Project Board, a committee established in 2005 by the Planning and Resources Allocation Committee (PRAC) to provide further oversight for the project. Its members are the Proctors and Assessor, the Pro-Vice-Chancellors for Planning and Resources, Education, and Research, the Heads of Division (except Medical Sciences), the Chief Executive of Oxford University Press, Bodley's Librarian, the Chair of the Buildings and Estates Subcommittee (BESC), and the heads of Estates, Development and Planning. Allocations recommended by the ROQ Project Board are then considered through the normal space approvals process: consideration by BESC, which may authorise an allocation of up to 300 sq.m. Any allocation above that size is referred onwards to PRAC and, if the proposed site exceeds 1000 sq.m. or a building is over 600 sq.m., PRAC asks Council to recommend it to Congregation.

The Blavatnik School of Government

The establishment of the Blavatnik School of Government promises to be an important milestone in the University's centuries-long tradition of varied contribution to government and public policy around the world. A major philanthropic donation provides an opportunity to bring together the knowledge borne of this rich tradition, and new and exciting strands of thinking. The emerging vision for the School is one characterised by the following key objectives. The Blavatnik School of Government will:

- (a) train future leaders through a pioneering multi-disciplinary approach which prepares them to innovate, to think globally, and to deliver public goods that aim to ensure growth, opportunity, security and social harmony;

(b) forge partnerships and collaboration between the world's best thinkers and practitioners;

(c) inject cutting-edge academic research into policy-making;

(d) create a global network of public policy-makers who can continue to learn from one another for the future.

The School has been the prime capital project for the Social Sciences Division for some time and the conclusion of negotiations with the donor now enables this project to become a reality. It is the first major capital development project since the building of the Centre for Advanced Study in the Social Sciences in 2004 (the Manor Road building) that now houses the departments of Economics, Sociology and Politics and International Relations as well as two research centres of the Faculty of Law.

The location of the School on the ROQ site provides an important opportunity to produce a high-quality landmark building fit for the purpose of establishing the School as the first of its kind outside North America. It is a founding aim for the School to have a strong and well-grounded multi-disciplinary approach spanning all divisions of the University. The School's presence on the ROQ site will bring it into close proximity with the Humanities Division, which will be centring its activities on the site, enabling the development of strong links with the division through the School.

The new building will house the School's academic and support staff, provide purpose-built facilities for academic and practitioner visitors, provide teaching accommodation for a new graduate cohort to be established (120 students at maturity), as well as space and facilities for individual research centres coming under the School's remit and for the provision of outreach/third-leg activities associated with the School's academic aims.

Text of resolution authorising the use of space in the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter

That approximately 6,300 sq.m. in the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter be allocated as the site of the new Blavatnik School of Government.

Note on procedures in Congregation

¶ Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 160, as amended on 12 October 2004, Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to (Registrar) Elections Office (email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

General Notices

Magdalen College: revised statutes

The Committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the revised Statutes of Magdalen College, approved by the Governing Body at meetings on 11 March 2009, 29 April 2009, 17 June 2009 and 16 June 2010, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7(2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendments to the Statutes will be effective 11 days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least 20 members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Tuesday, 5 October. The effects of the amendments are to update the existing statutes of the college to ensure compatibility with recent changes in the Law relating to Charities, including to make amended provision for the objects of the college, and to bring the existing statutes more fully in accord with present operative practice and accounting rules.

Committee on Animal Care and Ethical Review: Annual Report 2009

Ref. No. APA/1/5

The University's local ethical review process, set up under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act, is required to report annually to Council and, through it, to Congregation. The process became operational on 1 April 1999, and reports as follows on its eleventh year of operation.

The University is committed to the principles of local ethical review. The process, agreed by Council on the advice of the then Committee on Animal Care, has received the necessary Home Office endorsement. It is designed to provide ethical advice with respect to project licence applications; to provide support and advice on animal welfare and ethical issues; to promote the use of ethical analysis to increase awareness of animal welfare issues; and to develop initiatives leading to the widest possible application of reduction, refinement, and replacement strategies (the 3Rs). It reviews applications, amendments, and current licences, relevant management and training issues, care and accommodation standards, and promotes the uptake of the 3Rs through the provision of information, training, and a forum for discussion.

The Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act requires that research with animals is properly justified, that any alternatives are fully considered, and that any animal suffering is minimised. The University's policy on the use of animals in scientific research requires that all those involved in animal-based research are pro-active in pursuing the 3Rs and engage fully in the ethical review process. It also commits the University to providing standards of accommodation and care that exceed, wherever possible, the minimum standards required by legislation.

The Director of Biomedical Services has continued to work with animal care staff and researchers to ensure that animal facilities are managed and maintained as efficiently and to as high a standard as possible. The Biomedical Sciences Building, which was completed in 2008–9, has helped to raise standards of animal welfare by providing better facilities for animals previously accommodated in older facilities scattered throughout the University's Science Area.

The University's Veterinary Surgeons are involved in the local ethical review process at all stages and are in regular contact with the Director of Biomedical Services, animal care staff, and researchers themselves, ensuring that all aspects of animal health and welfare are properly considered and any viable alternatives explored. A website and email list allow for opportunities to share resources and therefore to reduce the number of animals used. Technical and veterinary staff meet regularly to discuss training needs, opportunities for welfare enhancement, and to share experience.

The ethical review process has reviewed project licence applications, amendments, and ongoing work under licence, in addition to considering a range of more general issues. In each case, careful consideration is given to the balance of costs and benefits and the extent to which the principles of the 3Rs have been applied to proposals. The process itself is kept under review and aims to be as flexible as possible in order to ensure optimum effectiveness. The Committee on Animal Care and Ethical Review has set up a sub-committee to develop proposals for improving the effectiveness and efficiency of the process, in the light of the new project licence form introduced by the Home Office in November 2009, as part of its Better Regulation initiative.

The process requires that, in addition to the statutory training required for new applicants, those already granted licences undertake training where necessary. Refresher courses have been developed by Veterinary Services to ensure that researchers are kept informed of new developments, improvements in techniques, and emerging best practice. The department's statutory courses have been reaccredited for a further five years, and have also achieved accreditation from the Federation of European Laboratory Animal Science Associations, the first UK courses to do so.

At the University of Oxford, animals are only used where there is no satisfactory alternative available, and where the Secretary of State has licensed the work after weighing its potential benefits against the adverse effects on the animals concerned. The University is a centre of expertise in a number of non-animal methods such as computer modelling, tissue culture, cell and molecular biology, and research with human subjects; but animal experimentation remains necessary in certain circumstances—these include the prevention and treatment of human diseases (including cancer, HIV, tuberculosis, Parkinson's, diabetes, and heart failure); the study of host-parasite interactions (for example in malaria); where it is necessary to understand the interaction between systems (including the effects which chemical or neural changes may have on the circulation, respiration, or other functions); or where it is necessary to study behaviour or complex brain functions, for example, transplantation and musculoskeletal research. The involvement of a broad range of individuals in the ethical review process, including lay members and animal care staff, ensures that it remains proactive in pursuing the adoption of best practice, promoting a culture of care and encouraging education and training to enhance staff skills and raise awareness of ethical issues.

Examinations and Boards: Changes to Regulations

1. CONTINUING EDUCATION BOARD

Proposal to introduce a Master of Studies in the History of Design: communication from the Continuing Education Board

To take effect 1 October 2011

1 In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 598 after line 9 insert

'History of Design Continuing Education'

2 In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 628 after line 19 insert:

'History of Design

1. Candidates must follow a course of instruction in the History of Design. The course will be taken on a part-time basis over a period of not fewer than two years and not more than three years within a maximum period of five years.

2. The examination will consist of the following parts:

A Mandatory Course Papers

Every candidate must submit a written assignment for each of the three mandatory course papers taught in Year 1:

I. Techniques and Materials (Object Case Study: 2,500 words)

II. Historical Methods (Methodology and Critical Sources Review: 3,000 words)

III. Research Project (Extended Essay: 5,000 words)

B Advanced Papers

Every candidate must follow two Advanced Papers courses from the options listed in the Schedule below, and submit one written assignment of no more than 5,000 words in length for each paper. Candidates will select two Advanced Papers in Year 2 of the MSt from a list of available options.

C Dissertation

Every candidate must produce a dissertation of not more than 15,000 words, including appendices but excluding bibliography and endnotes, on a topic approved by the Course

Director. The dissertation must be delivered not later than noon on the last Monday in September of the second year of the course to the Chairman of Examiners for the Degree of MSt in the History of Design, c/o Clerk of the Schools, High Street, Oxford.

3. Each candidate must attend a viva voce examination when required to do so by the examiners.

4. The examiners may award a distinction for excellence in the whole examination.

5. A candidate who fails a core topic or advanced paper, or whose dissertation fails to satisfy the examiners, may be permitted to retake the paper, or resubmit the dissertation, on one further occasion only, not later than one year after the initial attempt.

Schedule

Advanced Papers are available in the following areas:

- Decoration in Modern France
- The Arts and Crafts Tradition in Modern Britain
- Design in the Machine Age
- Design, Body, Environment
- Nationhood, Empire and Conflict
- Academic Writing and Contemporary Practice*
- Medieval Period or Early Modern Paper Option (shared with the proposed MSt Architectural History)
- Papers available to be shared with the existing MSc English Local History:

A.7 The social history of English architecture, 1870–1940

A.8 The English suburb, 1800–1939

A.4 English architecture 1500–1640

* This Advanced Paper will be assessed by means of two written assignments: a Documentation Project and a Critical Sources Review; each 1,500 words in length

Not all advanced papers will be available in any one year and the definitive list of advanced papers available in any one year will be circulated to candidates and their supervisors during the second week of Michaelmas Term

A Postgraduate Diploma will be available only to those registered as MSt students but who for whatever reason are not continuing to complete the full MSt. To be awarded the Postgraduate Diploma in the History of Design students must successfully complete the Core papers in 2a(I-III) and the Advanced Papers in 2b.

2. HUMANITIES BOARD

(a) Special Regulations for Doctor of Philosophy in English

Subject to the approval of the Humanities Divisional Board and Education Committee, the following changes in special regulations are proposed:

With effect from 1 October 2010

1 In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 851, after l. 12, insert: 'For students admitted to the D.Phil. in English before 1 October 2010:'.

2 Ibid., after l. 47, insert: 'For students admitted to the D.Phil. in English from 1 October 2010:'.

(i) Application for confirmation of D.Phil. status, with endorsements by the candidate's society and supervisor, shall normally be presented to the English Faculty's Graduate Office not later than Monday of third week in the eighth term after admission to the D. Phil. programme. In exceptional cases the Graduate Studies Committee may permit the candidate to postpone submission by up to one term: candidates seeking such postponement should apply to the Committee through the Director of Graduate Studies well in advance.

(ii) Application for confirmation of D.Phil. status shall be accompanied by: (1) a full outline of chapters (c.100 words per chapters), summarising the scope of individual chapters and their state of completion, including a timetable for completion of the work which remains to be done before submission of the thesis; (2) a draft abstract of the thesis as a whole, of approximately 1,000 words; (3) a sample chapter, of between 6,000 and 10,000 words; (4) a confidential report from the supervisor which should be sent direct to the English Faculty's Graduate Office. The English Graduate Office will send the written work and the confidential report as well as any previous reports on transfer to the interviewer appointed by the English Graduate Studies Committee on behalf of the English Faculty Board.

(iii) The interviewer shall examine the candidate orally. If the interviewer considers it necessary, a second assessor may be appointed in consultation with the Director of Graduate Studies.

(iv) The interviewer(s) shall report to the English Graduate Studies Committee in writing whether the candidate's subject is satisfactory and whether he or she is competent to tackle it. If confirmation is not recommended the interviewer may 1) recommend reapplication after a further period of study or 2) recommend transfer to M.Litt. status.

(v) Any candidate whose first application for confirmation is refused may reapply on one (only) further occasion, normally within two terms of the first. The material required will be the same as (ii) above.

(b) Master of Philosophy in Oriental Studies (iv) Modern Middle Eastern Studies

Subject to approval on behalf of the divisional board, which is now sought, and by Education Committee, the following changes in special regulations have been made:

With effect from 1 October 2011 (for first examination in 2012)

In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 559, after l. 45, insert new line: '(14) History and anthropology in the Sahara.'

(c) Master of Studies in General Linguistics and Comparative Philology

Subject to approval on behalf of the divisional board, which is now sought, and by Education Committee, the following changes in special regulations have been made:

With immediate effect

1 In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 618, ll. 7-8, delete '(excluding references and appendices)'.

2 Ibid., l. 8, after 'M.St.', insert 'The word limit excludes the bibliography, appendices consisting of a catalogue of data, any extensive text which is specifically the object of a commentary or linguistic analysis, and any translation of that text, but includes quotations and footnotes.'

(d) Master of Philosophy in General Linguistics and Comparative Philology

Subject to approval on behalf of the divisional board, which is now sought, and by Education Committee, the following changes in regulations have been made:

1 In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 515, delete l. 10.

2 Ibid., l. 11, after 'regulation 5', delete 'below;', and substitute 'below. The word limit excludes the bibliography, appendices consisting of a catalogue of data, any extensive text which is specifically the object of a commentary or linguistic analysis, and any translation of that text, but includes quotations and footnotes;'.

(e) Special Regulations of Divisional and Faculty Boards concerning the Status of Probationer Research Student – MLitt in General Linguistics and Comparative Philology

With immediate effect

In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 848, ll. 20-23, after '50,000', delete 'words, exclusive of bibliographical references... to exceed this limit.' and substitute 'words. The word limit excludes the bibliography, appendices consisting of a catalogue of data, any extensive text which is specifically the object of a commentary or linguistic analysis, and any translation of that text, but includes quotations and footnotes;'.

(f) Special Regulations of Divisional and Faculty Boards concerning the Status of Probationer Research Student – DPhil in General Linguistics and Comparative Philology

With immediate effect

In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 848, ll. 24-26, delete 'words, exclusive of bibliographical references... to exceed this limit.' and substitute 'words. The word limit excludes the bibliography, appendices consisting of a catalogue of data, any extensive text which is specifically the object of a commentary or linguistic analysis, and any translation of that text, but includes quotations and footnotes;'.

(g) Preliminary Examination in Theology

Subject to approval on behalf of the divisional board, which is now sought, and by Education Committee, the following changes in regulations have been made:

With effect from 1 October 2010 (for first examination in 2011)

1 In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 155, after l. 15, insert: '(11) Sanskrit'.

2 Ibid., l. 17, delete 'and'.

3 Ibid., after '(10)', insert 'and (11)'.

3. MATHEMATICAL, PHYSICAL AND LIFE SCIENCES BOARD

Master of Science by Coursework – Mathematical and Computational Finance

With effect from 1 October 2010 (for first examination in 2011)

In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 737 as amended by the University Gazette no. 4890 Vol 139 dated 30 July 2009, page 1405 col. 2 reg. 1, delete:

‘(iii) One course in Financial Computing which will be assessed by practical examination arranged within the Department. The practical examination will normally be held in, or shortly after, Trinity Term. The details will be specified by the Examiners.’

and replace with:

‘(iii) Two courses in Financial Computing which will be assessed by two practical examinations arranged within the Department. One practical examination will normally be held in, or shortly after, Hilary Term; one practical examination will normally be held in, or shortly after Trinity Term. The details will be specified by the Examiners.’

4. MATHEMATICAL, PHYSICAL AND LIFE SCIENCES BOARD AND BOARD OF THE FACULTY OF PHILOSOPHY

To be made if the Legislative Proposal detailed in the section Congregation 12 October above is approved.

(a) Honour Moderations in Computer Science and Philosophy

With effect from 1 October 2012 (for first examination in 2013)

1 In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 57, l. 14, insert:

‘Computer Science and Philosophy	Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division and Faculty of Philosophy’

2 Ibid., p. 94, after l. 33 insert:

‘Special Regulations for the Honour Moderations in Computer Science and Philosophy

A

1. The subjects of Honour Moderations in Computer Science and Philosophy shall be (a) Computer Science, (b) Philosophy.
2. All candidates must offer both (a) and (b).
3. The examination shall be under the joint supervision of the Divisional Board of Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences and the Board of the Faculty of Philosophy, which shall appoint a joint supervisory committee to make regulations concerning it, subject always to the preceding clauses of this subsection.
4. The Moderators shall indicate on the pass list each candidate who has not passed this examination but has passed in one subject, and shall indicate in which subject the candidate has passed.

B

1. Each candidate shall offer six papers as follows:

CS1 Functional Programming, and Design and Analysis of Algorithms;

CS2 Imperative Programming;

CS3(CS and P) Discrete Mathematics;

M1(CS and P) Applied Mathematics;

P1 Introduction to Philosophy;

P2 Elements of Deductive Logic.

Papers CS1, CS2, P1 and P2 will be of three hours’ duration; paper CS3(MS and P) will be of two hours’ duration; paper M1(CS and P) will be of one and a quarter hours’ duration.

2. The syllabus for each paper will be published by the joint supervisory committee in a handbook for candidates by the beginning of the Michaelmas Full Term in the academic year of the examination, after consultation with the Faculty of Computer Science (for papers CS1, CS2, CS3(CSandP)), the Faculty of Mathematics (for paper M1(CSandP)), and the Faculty of Philosophy (for papers P1 and P2).

3. Each of papers CS1, CS2, CS3(CSandP) and M1(CSandP) will contain questions of a straightforward character.

4. The use of calculators is generally not permitted but certain kinds may be allowed for certain papers. Specifications of which papers and which types of calculators are permitted for those exceptional papers will be announced by the Examiners in the Hilary Term preceding the examination.

5. All candidates will be assessed as to their practical ability in Computer Science under the following provisions:

(a) The Director of the Computing Laboratory, or a deputy, shall make available to the Examiners evidence showing the extent to which each candidate has pursued an adequate course of practical work. Only that work completed and marked by noon on Monday of the fifth week of the Trinity Term in which the candidate takes the examination shall be included in these records.

(b) Candidates shall submit to the Chairman of the Moderators, Honour Moderations in Computer Science and Philosophy, c/o the Academic Administrator, Oxford University Computing Laboratory, Oxford, by noon on Monday of the fifth week of the Trinity Term in which the examination is being held, their reports of practical exercises completed during their course of study. For a report on a practical exercise to be considered by the moderators, it must have been marked by a demonstrator and must be accompanied by a statement that it is the candidate’s own work except where otherwise indicated.

(c) The moderators shall take the evidence (a) and the reports (b) into account in assessing a candidate’s performance. Candidates whose overall performance on practical work is not satisfactory may be deemed to have failed the examination.’

(b) Preliminary Examination in Computer Science and Philosophy

With effect from 1 October 2012 (for first examination in 2013)

1 In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 58, l. 9, insert:

‘Computer Science and Philosophy	Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division and Faculty of Philosophy’

2 Ibid., p. 61, l. 37, insert:

‘Computer Science and Philosophy	3rd’

3 Ibid., p. 111, after l. 38, insert: ‘Special Regulations for the Preliminary Examination in Computer Science and Philosophy

A

1. The subjects of the Preliminary Examination in Computer Science and Philosophy shall be (a) Computer Science, (b) Philosophy.

2. All candidates must offer both (a) and (b).

3. The examination shall be under the joint supervision of the Divisional Board of Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences and the Board of the Faculty of Philosophy, which shall appoint a joint supervisory committee to make regulations concerning it, subject always to the preceding clauses of this subsection.

1. Two papers shall be set in the examination, one on each of the subjects: (a) Computer Science, (b) Philosophy. Each candidate shall take both papers, provided that no candidate may take a paper on a subject previously passed in Honour Moderations in Computer Science and Philosophy or in the Preliminary Examination in Computer Science and Philosophy.

2. All questions set shall be of a straightforward nature.

3. Paper (a) Computer Science: topics shall be as prescribed for papers CS1, CS2, CS3(CSandP) and M1 (CSandP) of the Honour Moderations in Computer Science and Philosophy.

4. Paper (b) Philosophy: topics shall be as prescribed for papers P1 and P2 of the Honour Moderations in Computer Science and Philosophy.

(c) Honour School of Computer Science and Philosophy

With effect from 1 October 2013 (for first Part A examination in 2014, first Part B examination in 2015, and first Part C examination in 2016)

1 In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 55, l. 16, first column, insert: 'Master of Computer Science and Philosophy'

2 Ibid., p. 63, l. 28, insert:

'Computer Science and Philosophy (three-year and four-year)	Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division and Faculty of Philosophy'

3 Ibid., p. 70, l. 6, insert:

'Master of Computer Science and Philosophy	Computer Science and Philosophy (four-year course)'

4 Ibid., p. 205, after l. 46, insert on a new page:

'SPECIAL REGULATIONS FOR THE HONOUR SCHOOL OF COMPUTER SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY

In the following, 'the Course Handbook' refers to the Computer Science and Philosophy Undergraduate Course Handbook and supplements to this published by the joint supervisory committee and also posted on the web-site at <http://web.comlab.ox.ac.uk/teaching>.

1. All candidates shall be examined in Computer Science and in Philosophy.

2. No candidate shall be admitted to the examination in this School unless he or she has either passed or been exempted from the First Public Examination.

3. The examinations in this school shall be under the joint supervision of the Divisional Board of Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences and the Board of the Faculty of Philosophy, which shall appoint a joint supervisory committee to make regulations concerning it, subject in all cases to the preceding clauses of this subsection.

4. (a) The examination in Computer Science and Philosophy shall consist of three parts (A, B, C) for the four-year course, and of two parts (A, B) for the three-year course.

(b) Parts A, B and C shall be taken at times not less than three, six, and nine terms, respectively, after passing or being exempted from the First Public Examination.

5. The Examiners shall classify and publish the combined results of the examinations in Part A and Part B, and in respect of candidates taking the four-year course shall separately classify and publish results in Part C.

6. (a) Part A shall be taken on one occasion only.

(b) In order to proceed to Part C, a candidate must achieve second class Honours or higher in Parts A and B together.

(c) A candidate on the three-year course who obtains only a Pass or fails to satisfy the Examiners in Part B may retake Part B on at most one subsequent occasion; a candidate on the four-year course who obtains only a Pass or fails to satisfy the Examiners in Part C may retake Part C on at most one subsequent occasion. A candidate on the four-year course shall take Part B on one occasion only.

7. A candidate adjudged worthy of Honours on both Parts A and B together, and on Part C may supplicate for the degree of Master of Computer Science and Philosophy provided that the candidate has fulfilled all the conditions for admission to a degree of the University.

8. A candidate in the final year of the four-year course, adjudged worthy of Honours in both Parts A and B together, but who does not enter Part C, or who fails to obtain Honours in Part C, is permitted to supplicate for the Honours degree of Bachelor of Arts in Computer Science and Philosophy with the classification obtained in Parts A and B together; provided that no such candidate may later enter or re-enter the Part C year or supplicate for the degree of Master of Computer Science and Philosophy; and provided in each case that the candidate has fulfilled all the conditions for admission to a degree of the University.

B

1. In Part A of the examination, candidates shall be required to offer four Computer Science subjects from Schedule A(CSandP) in the Course Handbook, to include Models of Computation.

2. The examination for Part B shall consist of subjects in Computer Science and Philosophy.

The subjects in Computer Science shall be published in three schedules, B1(CSandP), B2(CSandP) and B4(CSandP), in a supplement to the Course Handbook by the beginning of the Michaelmas Full Term in the academic year of the examination concerned. Each Computer Science subject shall be examined by a written paper or by a mini-project.

The subjects in Philosophy shall be subjects 101-120, 122, 124 and 125 from the list given in Special Regulations for All Honour Schools Including Philosophy, and subject to the regulations therein. Each subject in Philosophy shall be assessed by a 3-hour written examination.

Each candidate shall offer:

(a) two, four or six Computer Science subjects, and

(b) five, four or three Philosophy subjects, respectively, subject to the following constraints:

(i) No candidate shall offer any subject from Schedule B1(CSandP) that he or she has already offered in Part A(CSandP) of the examination;

(ii) Each candidate shall offer no more than two subjects from Schedule B1(CSandP);

(iii) Each candidate shall offer no more than two subjects from Schedule B4(CSandP);

(iv) Each candidate shall offer at least two Philosophy subjects from 101, 102, 104, 108, 119, 122, 124 and 125.

3. In Part C each candidate shall offer a total of three units chosen in any combination from the lists of taught courses for Computer Science and for Philosophy, a Computer Science project or a Philosophy thesis.

The taught subjects in Computer Science shall be published in a schedule, C(CSandP), in a supplement to the Course Handbook by the beginning of the Michaelmas Full Term in the academic year of the examination concerned. Each such subject shall be examined by a written paper or by a mini-project and shall count as a half unit.

Each taught Philosophy subject shall be one of the subjects 101-120, 122, 124 and 125 from the list given in Special Regulations for All Honour Schools Including Philosophy, and subject to the regulations therein, or Paper 180, the Rise of Modern Logic, as specified in the Regulations for the Degree of Bachelor of Philosophy. Each such subject shall be assessed by a 3-hour written examination together with an essay of at most 5,000 words, conforming to the rules given in the Course Handbook. Each such subject shall count as a full unit. No candidate shall offer any taught subject that he or she has already offered in Part B of the examination.

A Computer Science project shall be as specified for the Honour School of Computer Science, and shall count as a full unit. A Philosophy thesis shall be as specified in the Regulations for Philosophy in all Honour Schools including Philosophy (subject 199) except that the thesis shall not exceed 20,000 words, and shall count as a full unit. No candidate may offer both a Computer Science project and a Philosophy thesis.

4. The use of calculators is generally not permitted but certain kinds may be allowed for certain papers. Specifications of which papers and which types of calculators are permitted for those exceptional papers will be announced by the Examiners in the Hilary Term preceding the examination.

5. All candidates will be assessed as to their practical ability in Computer Science under the following provisions:

(a) The Director of the Computing Laboratory, or a deputy, shall make available to the Examiners evidence showing the extent to which each candidate has pursued an adequate course of practical work. Only that work completed and marked by noon on Monday of the fifth week of the Trinity Term in which the candidate takes the examination shall be included in these records.

(b) Candidates for each part of the examination shall submit to the Chairman of the Examiners, Honour School of Computer Science and Philosophy, c/o the Academic Administrator, Oxford University Computing Laboratory, Oxford, by noon on Monday of the fifth week of the Trinity Term in which the examination is being held, their reports of practical exercises completed during their course of study. For a report on a practical exercise to be considered by the Examiners, it must have been marked by a demonstrator and must be accompanied by a statement that it is the candidate's own work except where otherwise indicated.

(c) The Examiners shall take the evidence (a) and the report (b) into account in assessing a candidate's performance. Candidates whose overall performance on practical work is not satisfactory may be deemed to have failed the examination or may have their overall classification reduced.'

(d) Special Regulations for Philosophy in All Honour Schools Including Philosophy

With effect from 1 October 2013 (for first Part B examination in 2015 and first Part C examination in 2016)

1 In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 400, l. 24, after 'Mathematics and Philosophy' insert 'and Computer Science and Philosophy'.

2 Ibid., l. 39, insert new section: 'Computer Science and Philosophy In Part B candidates are required to take at least three subjects in Philosophy from subjects 101–120, 122, 124 and 125, and including at least two from 101, 102, 104, 108, 119, 122, 124 and 125.

In Part C each candidate shall offer a total of three units chosen in any combination from the lists for Computer Science and for Philosophy. A unit in Philosophy consists of one of the subjects 101–120, 122, 124 and 125 as specified above, or the Rise of Modern Logic as specified in the Regulations for the Degree of Bachelor of Philosophy, or a Thesis as specified in 199 above except that the thesis shall not exceed 20,000 words. No subject in Philosophy may be offered in both Part B and Part C. Each unit in Philosophy other than a Thesis shall be examined by a three-hour written paper together with an essay of at most 5,000 words conforming to the rules given in the Course Handbook.'

Gazette Supplement

Recognition of Distinction (2010–11)

This paper sets out the arrangements for the 2010–11 round of the recognition of distinction exercise, in which applications are invited by 31 October 2010 for the conferment of the title of professor.

1. Introduction

Following successive consultation exercises over the period since 2005, the Task Force on Academic Employment put definitive proposals to Council for future arrangements for the conferment of titles on academics and for merit pay for lecturers.

Council commended these proposals to Congregation in April 2010, stating however that it would not be possible in 2010–11 to devote any funding to the new arrangements. In the absence of any opposition or amendments, the proposals were declared approved in full by the Vice-Chancellor in May 2010. The details of the new arrangements may be seen at http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/2009-10/supps/1_4915.pdf.

The consequence of Congregation's approval of these new arrangements is that in 2010–11 an exercise will be held to consider applications for the conferment of the title of professor. No applications will be accepted or considered for the conferment of the title of reader, or for merit pay for lecturers. There will also be no exercise to consider new or enhanced distinction awards for substantive professors and readers.

Individuals working in an academic capacity in the collegiate University are therefore now invited to apply for the conferment of the title of professor: applications must be received by 31 October 2010.

The duties and stipends of successful applicants will not change; nor will successful application in itself have any implications for the outcome of any future exercise for merit pay for lecturers: any such exercise will be run independently.

2. Timetable and eligibility

Individuals are now invited to submit themselves for consideration in this exercise. Applications should be submitted via the online form available at: <https://secure.admin.ox.ac.uk/distinction> by 31 October 2010. Applications received after this date will not be considered. Section 5(c) below details the required format for applications. All applications will then be sent forward for consideration by divisional Recognition of Distinction Committees, on behalf of the relevant divisional board. Divisional comments should be sent to Personnel Services by 31 March 2011. The central Recognition of Distinction Committee will then consider all the material and make final decisions on each application in Trinity Term 2011. Titles will be awarded retrospectively, to take effect from 1 October 2010.

Individuals who retire on or before 30 September 2010 will not be eligible to apply.

It is essential for exercises such as this to be conducted as openly as possible. Divisional boards are asked to send this circular to all eligible academic staff on their establishment, together with covering information about the composition of the divisional Recognition of Distinction Committee which will comment on the applications. If such covering information is not yet available, this circular should be sent on now with a covering note to that effect; a further circulation about the actual composition of the committee should be sent as soon as that is known.

All employees of the University and also persons not employed by the University who are making a significant and sustained contribution to it in an academic capacity are eligible to apply. Separate circulars are being sent to heads of departments and equivalent (who are asked to draw the exercise to the attention of their academic and related staff) and to colleges. Divisional boards are also asked themselves to ensure that eligible persons in their subject area who are not members of the academic staff are aware of the exercise.

3. Previous applicants

Applicants who were unsuccessful in previous rounds may of course apply again, although they should note that reconsideration by the Recognition of Distinction Committee of the same material would result in the same outcome: there is no sense in which the committee will in any year take a more lenient line than in previous years, since there was and remains no 'quota' of successful candidates. Applicants from previous rounds who wish to apply again must submit new applications via the online system (see section 5 below).

4. Criteria

The criteria by which applications for the conferment of the title of professor will be considered cover three areas: research, teaching and good citizenship.

The thresholds for award of the title of professor (all of which must be met) are as follows:

*Research

A research record of a high order, the quality of which is comparable in distinction with that expected of professors appointed on the grounds of research achievement at other major research universities.

* 'Research' is to be understood as original investigation undertaken in order to gain knowledge and understanding, including work of direct relevance to the needs of commerce and industry, as well as to the public and voluntary sectors; scholarship; the invention and generation of ideas, images, performances, and artefacts, including design, where these lead to new or substantially improved insights; and the use of existing knowledge in experimental development to produce new or substantially improved materials, devices, products, and processes, including design and construction.

Teaching

A record of effective teaching* for the University and for colleges concomitant with the duties of the university post and the college fellowship (where one is held).

* Either undergraduate or graduate teaching, or both.

Good citizenship*

A record of involvement in University and/or college administration and demonstrable competence in such administration.

*This may include activities connected to enterprise, links with industry and business etc. in appropriate cases.

5. Detailed procedures

(a) General points

(i) Potential applicants are encouraged to take advice on their applications from their head of department, faculty board chairman, or equivalent, should they wish to do so.

(ii) All employees of the University (i.e. not merely academic staff), and also persons not employed by the University but who are making a significant and sustained contribution to it in an academic capacity, are eligible to apply for the conferment of the title of professor, save that among lecturers normally only those with tenure may apply for the title.

(iii) Lecturers in their initial period of office at Oxford and who have a very distinguished prior record of achievement may apply for the conferment of the title of professor, but before doing so may wish to reflect and take informal advice on whether they would yet be likely to meet the precise Oxford criteria.

(iv) Only those who apply by the closing date will be considered.

(b) The application process

(i) The exercise is publicised widely to all eligible academics and other eligible potential applicants, to heads of department/faculty board chairmen, to heads of house and to divisional offices, and on the Personnel Services website and in the Gazette. Divisional offices are asked to send personal copies of the exercise details to all eligible lecturers in their areas.

(ii) Applicants complete an online application form and attach the body of their application.

(iii) Personnel Services makes all applications available electronically to the relevant divisional offices.

(iv) Applicants arrange for references to be provided from heads of department/faculty board chairmen and heads of house, and these are received and collated by Personnel Services and passed to divisional offices.

(v) Divisional Recognition of Distinction Committees seek nominated and independent research references and make recommendations to the central Recognition of Distinction Committee.

(vi) The central Recognition of Distinction Committee receives the reports from divisional committees and makes final decisions.

(vii) Applicants are notified of the outcome of their applications by the Vice-Chancellor.

(c) Application details

Applicants are asked to complete the online application form at: <https://secure.admin.ox.ac.uk/distinction> with their personal details and details of their referees. Note, for security reasons this form can only be accessed from a computer connected to the University data network (i.e. whose identity ends in 'ox.ac.uk'); any applicants who do not have access to such a computer are asked to contact Dr David Dongworth in Personnel Services for advice (recognition.distinction@admin.ox.ac.uk).

Please complete the details as requested, noting the points detailed below.

University employee number: applicants who are University employees are asked to complete this to enable their details to be cross-checked automatically. Note that this number is printed on payslips: it is NOT the same as your University card number. Applicants who are not University employees (e.g. NHS staff, college-only staff) should leave this box blank.

Preferred title: please specify your preferred title if awarded, e.g. Professor of English Literature, Professor of Engineering Science. Applicants are asked to propose as concise a title as possible. Note that this preference will be taken into consideration by the divisional and central Recognition of Distinction Committees, but there is no guarantee that if the title of professor is awarded by the University the applicant's preferred title will also be approved.

Academic degrees: please list in the format 'BA Toronto, PhD Leeds'.

Continuing Education or ASUC unit: if, and only if, your primary department/unit is Continuing Education or an Academic Services and University Collections (ASUC) unit (e.g. Ashmolean Museum, Bodleian Library etc.) please select this from the drop-down list, and then also select from the lists below the academic division and department with which you are most closely associated.

If your primary department/unit is not Continuing Education or an ASUC unit, leave the selection in this box as the default 'Not Applicable'.

Division: applicants who work in more than one division should select one division from the list here, and use the text field labelled 'Sub-unit' to indicate the other division.

Sub-unit: use this field if your department or unit does not feature in the drop-down list; if you work in a sub-unit within a larger department e.g. the Laboratory of Molecular Biophysics in the Department of Biochemistry; or if you work in more than one department or division.

Contact address: the address of the department you selected from the drop-down list will appear here automatically. Please amend if you prefer to be contacted at an alternative address (e.g. at college).

Applicants must supply the names of referees as follows:

(i) Head of department or chairman of faculty board (who may however delegate the writing of the reference). Applicants who are not University employees should give the head of the department/chairman of the faculty board with which they are most closely associated;

(ii) Head of house (who may however delegate the writing of the reference) in all cases where applicants have a college attachment.

In addition, applicants from Continuing Education or an ASUC unit (e.g. Ashmolean Museum, Bodleian Library etc.) must also provide details of the head of that department/unit (who may however delegate the writing of the reference).

In all cases, the online form will default to the head of department/unit or faculty and head of house selected from the drop-down lists on Page 1; if this person has delegated the writing of the reference to another person, please give the other person's details as prompted.

The heads should assess the applicant against the criteria for teaching and 'good citizenship', and may also address the research criteria, providing evidence to support their judgement.

Applicants are responsible for ensuring that these referees send their references, without further request, direct to recognition.distinction@admin.ox.ac.uk, or to Dr David Dongworth in Personnel Services, by 30 November 2010.

Applicants who are based in more than one department should ensure that the heads of both departments are asked to provide references, and must provide the name of the second referee as prompted on the online application form.

Applicants should, however, NOT themselves ask their research referees to submit references (see (iii) below).

(iii) In addition, applicants must also list four research referees in order of preference, who should ideally be outside Oxford, and who would be willing to assess the applicant against the criteria for research (and may also address the teaching and/or the good citizenship criteria if they are qualified to do so), providing evidence to support their judgement.

The divisional Recognition of Distinction Committee will select at least two of these research referees to approach for their comments. In addition, the divisional committee will identify and approach at least two further independent research referees.

Finally, attach a Word file or PDF with a curriculum vitae arranged in order under the headings listed below. Applicants are encouraged to make this document as concise as possible. Applications should comprise no more than 12 sides of A4 in total, including lists of publications etc.

All of those who put themselves forward should feel free to mention any factors (domestic or otherwise, including unusually high loads of teaching and/or administration) which may have led, for instance, to academic achievements appearing more limited than they would otherwise have been.

(1)	Any relevant information such as might normally appear in a curriculum vitae , including employment history and current post
(2)	Advanced study and research, including publications, grants, etc., applicants marking with an asterisk the six most significant publications
(3)	University lectures and classes given, including any participation in curriculum development, syllabus design etc.
(4)	Graduate supervision and other graduate teaching undertaken	over the last three years or such period as may be required to demonstrate fulfilment of the criteria
(5)	University examining
(6)	University administration, academic leadership, contribution to the subject outside the University, any enterprise activities or links to industry or business in appropriate cases
(7)	Undergraduate teaching for college(s)
(8)	College administration
(9)	Future plans for research

Click on 'Register' to send the form and attachment.

All applications must be received by 31 October 2010.

All data supplied by applicants will be used only for the purposes of assessing their application for a title of distinction and will be held in accordance with the principles of the Data Protection Act 1998 and the University's Data Protection Policy.

6. The divisional Recognition of Distinction Committees

(a) It is not open to divisional boards or their committees to invite individuals who have not put themselves forward to consider doing so.

(b) Each divisional board should delegate the consideration of the applications to a single Recognition of Distinction Committee, chaired by the head of the division. Divisional committees should be broadly based, covering as far as possible the major disciplines or broad areas of study under the aegis of the particular board. Boards may, if they wish, arrange for departmental/faculty board scrutiny of applications before consideration by the divisional committee; in such cases the divisional board should provide any necessary guidance to the department/faculty board.

(c) Divisional committees (including any local departmental/faculty committees) should not contain anyone who is a member of the central Recognition of Distinction Committee. Provided suitably qualified individuals exist, each committee must have an appropriate gender balance and mix of internal and external members. If it is not possible for external members to attend the meeting(s) of the committee, external advice should be obtained by correspondence. The internal members of the divisional committees should comprise only statutory or ad hominem (but not e.g. titular) professors.

(d) Divisional committees should obtain at least two research references for each applicant from the names supplied, and at least two further research references from individuals not nominated by the applicant and usually from outside Oxford.

(e) Divisional committees must assess all of the applicants in the light of the material they have submitted and all of the references received, including the external ones, and strictly by reference to the criteria in section 4 above. The committee must seek whatever supplementary information it may need, beyond the referees' comments, in order to assess fairly and consistently whether the applicant meets these criteria.

(f) Divisional committees should send to Personnel Services, by 31 March 2011, the research references they have obtained and any other relevant material, together with a report for consideration by the central Recognition of Distinction Committee setting out their final recommendation in relation to each applicant. The divisional committee is expected to provide a reasoned statement which addresses explicitly in each case, including the most straightforward ones, the question whether in its opinion the individual meets each of the criteria.

(g) In their reports to the central Recognition of Distinction Committee, divisional committees are also asked to comment on the suitability of the full title (e.g. Professor of Engineering Science) proposed by the applicant and, if appropriate, to recommend an alternative title.

(h) In making their comments to the central Recognition of Distinction Committee, chairmen or secretaries of divisional committees should state expressly that these bodies have observed the following elements of the above procedure: composition of divisional committees, circulation of all information to all eligible academic staff, consideration of factors affecting academic performance, and consideration of all information against the criteria, and in particular whether they interpreted the criteria in any specific way.

(i) Divisional committees must consult between themselves in cases where an individual has asked for consideration by more than one board.

7. The central Recognition of Distinction Committee

(a) The central Recognition of Distinction Committee is a sub-committee of Council's Personnel Committee, and has delegated authority from Council to confer the title of professor in this exercise. It is chaired by the Vice-Chancellor and is composed of the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Personnel and Equality) ex officio, five statutory or ad hominem professors covering the MPLS and Medical Sciences divisions plus one external member representing those subject areas, and five statutory or ad hominem professors covering the Humanities and Social Sciences areas plus one external member representing those subject areas. The full membership of the central committee for the 2010-11 exercise will be published in the Gazette as soon as possible.

(b) The central Recognition of Distinction Committee considers the complete dossier for each applicant, including the divisional recommendation, and makes decisions, by reference to evidence relating to the criteria, on whether the title of professor should be conferred. In doing so, it may seek any further information which it requires in order to assess the applicants fairly and consistently against the criteria, including further external references and clarification from divisional committees of any points of doubt.

(c) The Vice-Chancellor will inform applicants of the outcome individually. The names of successful applicants for the conferment of the title will be published in the Gazette.

8. Title of visiting professor

Note that divisional boards may confer the title of visiting professor on an applicant who is not a University employee if the divisional and central Recognition of Distinction Committees consider that the applicant more appropriately fits that category.

9. Feedback

(a) Unsuccessful applicants will have the opportunity to receive feedback; this will normally be from a named member of the divisional committee, but in some cases it may be more appropriate for feedback to be given by the chairman or another member of the central committee.

(b) Those who are not satisfied with the outcome after having received feedback may appeal against the decision.

10. Appeals process

(a) Appeals will be considered by an appeals committee chaired by a suitable Pro-Vice-Chancellor (functional or ceremonial), with four other members, one from each of the academic divisions. None of the members will have been involved with the case previously, either as referees or committee members.

(b) Appellants must appeal in writing to the secretary of the appeals committee within the specified deadline.

(c) The appeals committee will receive the appellant's appeal submission and the full dossier that was presented to the central committee.

(d) The appeals committee will ask the chairmen of the divisional and central committees to respond in writing to the grounds of the appeal and to justify their previous assessment of the appellant; the chairmen may consult their committee members as required before responding. The appeals committee may seek any further information which it requires, including holding a meeting with the appellant and/or seeking written clarification from him/her.

(e) The appeals committee's decision is final and there is no further possibility of appeal.

11. Analysis of outcomes and future procedures

The Personnel Committee will consider, and forward to Council, a report on the outcomes of each exercise. This will include an analysis of patterns of application and of success by gender, ethnicity, etc.

If significant evidence emerges of patterns of under-application by suitably qualified academics, the Personnel Committee will make proposals to Council to try to address this.

Foreword by the Chair of the Review Group

The health and safety (H&S) of its staff and students and of members of the public and others within its premises are of paramount importance to the University. The complexity of its operations and the hazardous nature of some of its activities make the highest standards of H&S leadership an imperative for the University's Governing Body, the Council.

The Review Group, which I have had the privilege to Chair, has taken evidence extensively from a wide range of constituencies within the University in order to determine, as required by our terms of reference, whether the University is showing, at its highest level, effective leadership in the area of H&S.

From the earliest stages of the review it became apparent to us how far the University had come, over recent years, in its management and leadership of H&S. It was also notable that, even as our review progressed, further improvements were being made. For example, proposals from the Health and Safety Management Committee (HSMC) that elements of its termly reports to Council should be taken 'above the line' and that there should be collaborative H&S reviews of Divisions on 4-yearly rotating basis, were immediately supported by the Vice-Chancellor. Council also took the important decision to include high-level H&S risks in the University's Strategic Risk Register.

Such improvements, at least partly stimulated by the Review process itself, clearly indicate the value of conducting such periodic H&S reviews at the whole-University level, in addition to holding similar regular reviews at divisional, departmental and unit levels, in line with the recommended best practice of the Universities and Colleges Employers' Association (UCEA).

The Group found much to commend in the leadership and management of H&S in the University and our recommendations for improvements are intended to make an already good situation even better. Just as in all its academic endeavours Oxford aspires to lead the field, so in its approach to H&S the University should aspire to set the best possible example to the 'Leaders of Tomorrow', who are the students and researchers of today.

Dr Diana Walford CBE
Chair, H&S Review Group
July 2010

Foreword by the Chair of the UK Health and Safety Executive

To the best of my knowledge, Oxford University is the first to carry out an in-depth review of its leadership on health and safety using The Universities and Colleges Employers' Association good practice guidance. I was delighted, therefore, to be invited to act as the independent member of the panel and it has been a fascinating and enlightening process to participate in over the last few months.

I have noted that the process of carrying out the review has itself stimulated some new thinking about health and safety with one of the visible results already being the raising of its profile at senior levels. As well as identifying good practice in many parts, the review has also highlighted areas which need to be addressed; some of which will require further development that will take time to implement. Consequently, a further review of this type to assess progress would be very worthwhile. My view is that this could be most meaningfully carried out in around five years' time.

I would very much hope that Oxford University will take the opportunity to communicate the positive benefits which have been gained from this review to other Universities and Colleges. HSE's strategy for health and safety in Great Britain in the 21st Century makes leadership a central pillar in building the right culture and I believe that others should seek to follow your example and demonstrate similar levels of leadership in health and safety.

Judith Hackitt CBE
Chair of HSE
July 2010

Executive Summary

The Review Group, using the publication Leading Health and Safety at Work, published by the Universities and Colleges Employers' Association (UCEA) and the Universities Safety and Health Association (USHA), together with UCEA's Health and Safety Management Code of Best Practice, has identified the following issues in relation to the University's leadership of health and safety, which it wishes to draw to Council's attention.

- (i) The Review Group is impressed by the overall standard of H&S leadership within the University, but feels that this could be further demonstrated by raising the profile of H&S in Council and at divisional boards.
- (ii) Although there is a suitable H&S Policy statement, H&S objectives are absent from the University's strategic plan, from its strategic Risk Register and from the five-yearly divisional plans - issues that can be readily rectified.

(iii) The links between Council and the Health and Safety Management Committee (HSMC) need to be strengthened; the authority of the HSMC should be enhanced and its working relationship with the Consultative Committee on Health and Safety (CCHS) improved.

(iv) The respective roles of heads of divisions and heads of departments in the leadership and management of H&S are not well understood and need to be clarified.

(v) There is an issue of resource in relation to some divisions' ability to deliver their oversight role; but resources directly available to the University Safety Office and to the Occupational Health Service are deemed adequate, by their respective directors, for planned service delivery.

(vi) There is a multiplicity of differing roles, job descriptions and grades for safety officers across the University and, in the absence of a Head of Profession for safety officers, no uniform way of quality-assuring their performance.

(vii) There is difficulty, stemming from the increasing use of short-term contract employment, in ensuring continuity and experience in safety-related appointments within departments; the naturally high level of turnover of personnel within the University increases the challenge of ensuring that good health and safety practice is truly embedded in a sustainable way in the organisation.

(viii) There is poor uptake of the available H&S training and no training plan designed to ensure that the training offered meets the specific requirements of each division and Academic Services and University Collections (ASUC) and the needs of all those with H&S responsibilities, including members of Council.

(ix) As yet, an effective system of central monitoring of sickness absence and work-related illness, including stress, is not in operation, but is under development; such a system is essential if Council is to have adequate assurance of the health and wellbeing of employees.

(x) The University's research is at the cutting edge of science and a system of 'horizon scanning' is needed to ensure new or novel risks are identified and managed proactively.

Overall the Review Group concludes that the University performs well against the benchmark University Health and Safety Management Code of Best Practice and, by implementing the recommendations in this report, should be able to achieve an even better level of performance, without undue difficulty or significant additional resource. Progress should be monitored by repeating similar reviews of the leadership of H&S at suitable intervals. Recommendations to address all the above issues are set out in Section 8.

SECTION 1

Introduction

1.1. Background to the Review

At its meeting in February 2009, Council asked that a review be carried out of the leadership of Health and Safety (H&S) within the University. Council's decision was taken on the basis of a recommendation from the Health and Safety Management Committee (HSMC) and also in light of recently published guidance from the Universities and Colleges Employers' Association (UCEA), Leading Health and Safety at Work. A Health and Safety Review Group was subsequently established to conduct the review.

1.2. Terms of Reference

The Terms of Reference (ToRs) of the Review Group, set by the Registrar, were as follows:

'To investigate, using the Universities and Colleges Employers' Association and the Universities Safety and Health Association publication Leading Health and Safety at Work as a basis for its work, whether the University is showing, at its highest level, effective leadership in the area of health and safety; and to include, in that examination, the role and function of Council and the Health and Safety Management Committee.'

1.3. Composition of the Review Group

Membership of the Review Group comprised Dr Diana Walford CBE (Principal (Mansfield College) (Chair)), Professor Susan Cooper (MPLS), Dr Adrian Allsop (Social Sciences), Mrs Ruth Davies (Bodleian Libraries), Professor Derrick Crooke (Medical Sciences) and the External Member, Ms Judith Hackitt CBE (Chair, UK Health and Safety Executive). Mr Chris Thompson (Council Secretariat) was appointed as Secretary.

SECTION 2

2.1. The basis for the work of the Review Group

The Review Group used, as its prime sources of reference:

(a) the document Leading Health and Safety at Work, published by the UCEA and the USHA.

(b) the University Health and Safety Management Code of Best Practice, published by the UCEA.

2.2. Statement – Leading H&S at Work

Leading H&S at Work states that 'Protecting the health and safety of employees or members of the public who may be affected by your activities is an essential part of risk management and must be led by the governing body. Failure to include health and safety as a key business risk in board decisions can have catastrophic results. Many high-profile safety cases over the years have been rooted in failures of leadership. Health and safety law places duties on organisations and employers, and senior management can be personally liable when these duties are breached: members of the governing body have both collective and individual responsibility for health and safety. By following this guidance and the recommendations made by UCEA in its Code of Best Practice on University Health and Safety Management you will help your institution find the best ways to promote a health and safety culture and therefore meet its legal obligations.'

Leading Health and Safety at Work defines the essential principles of H&S management as:

(a) strong and active leadership from the top:

- (1) visible, active commitment from the governing body;
- (2) establishing effective 'downward' communication systems and management structures;
- (3) integration of good health and safety management with business decisions;

(b) worker involvement:

- (1) engaging the workforce in the promotion and achievement of safe and healthy conditions;
- (2) effective 'upward' communication;
- (3) providing high quality training;

(c) assessment and review:

- (1) identifying and managing health and safety risks;
- (2) accessing (and following) competent advice;
- (3) monitoring, reporting and reviewing performance.

It then outlines a number of questions as being key to the assessment of performance. The Review Group utilised these elements, statement, principles and questions as the basis of its work.

2.3. Further considerations

2.3.1. The Review Group noted that its ToRs limited its investigations to the leadership of H&S within the University and that such scope precluded any investigation of operational H&S matters, unless they were of particular relevance to the leadership issue.

2.3.2. The Review Group, whilst wishing to assure itself that the current management structure for H&S was in conformity with that prescribed in the University's H&S Policy (Annex A), was cognisant that management structures were for the University to determine and that the Group should confine itself to assessing whether these structures were operating effectively.

2.3.3. The Review Group kept constantly in mind the need to give as much weight to issues of the health of employees as to those of safety.

2.3.4. From the outset, the Review Group recognised the importance of the University setting a good H&S example to its students and researchers who are the 'Leaders of Tomorrow'.

2.3.5. The Review Group also placed considerable emphasis on the reputational standing of the University and the risk to it of poor performance in the area of H&S.

3.1. Conduct of the review

The Review Group consulted with the senior management of the University including the Vice-Chancellor, the Registrar and Heads of Division (HoDivs) and the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (PVC) (Academic Services and University Collections (ASUC)), all of whom gave oral evidence, supplemented, in some cases, by written response to a questionnaire. At the Committee level, detailed discussions with the Chairman of the HSMC and his recently demitted predecessor took place and, at their meetings in early 2010, the views of members of the Consultative Committee for Health and Safety (CCHS) and of the HSMC were also obtained. The Directors of the University Safety Office (DUSO) and of the Occupational Health Service (DOHS) were interviewed and responded to a list of detailed questions and the scope of consultation was later broadened to include Heads of Department (HoDepts); the Unite Union, UNISON, the Universities and Colleges Union and the Oxford University Students' Union (OUSU) plus, through the Gazette, individual members of Congregation.

3.1.1. The people, committees and organisations consulted by the Review Group are listed at Annex B.

3.1.2. The minutes of oral evidence and written responses can be found on the University intranet.

3.2. Issues arising from the consultation

The consultations revealed that appropriate H&S principles were being followed within the University but that H&S was not fully integrated into the University's planning and priority-setting mechanisms. This was exemplified by the absence from the University's Strategic Plan of any reference to an H&S strategy. In turn this meant that H&S did not feature in the five-year divisional plans. Although H&S policy was well developed within the University, there was no obvious strategic framework within which such policy development took place.

3.2.1. Whilst Council was kept generally well informed on H&S within the University, through, inter alia, the receipt of termly reports from the HSMC, annual reports from the University Safety Office (USO) and Occupational Health Service (OHS) and also discussed, as appropriate, any reported serious untoward incidents or other important H&S issues, Council's approach to H&S appeared somewhat reactive, rather than pro-active. It was felt that the link between Council and its HSMC needed to be strengthened if the former were to be able to exhibit more visible leadership of H&S in the University.

3.2.2. In his evidence to the Review Group, the Chair of the HSMC proposed that there should be regular reviews by his Committee of H&S in divisions, on a four-yearly rotating basis. Such reviews would be conducted collaboratively with the USO. The resultant report, with commentary by his Committee, would be considered by Council at a meeting at which he would be in attendance. This would help to raise the profile of H&S within Council and help to spread good practice between divisions.

3.2.3. A number of suggestions were also received about strengthening the composition and enhancing the authority of the HSMC; see paragraph 4.2.

3.2.4. Divisions were found to have a variable approach to the leadership and management of H&S and, from the HoDivs' oral evidence and the questionnaire responses from HoDepts it was apparent that divisional roles and responsibilities for H&S needed to be clarified and a framework adopted for the oversight of H&S at divisional level that was best suited to each division's needs. This issue is described in greater detail in paragraphs 4.2 to 4.3.5.

3.2.5. Variability of roles and reporting lines also appeared to exist in all divisions amongst the cadre of staff with formal H&S responsibilities, the Area (ASO), Departmental (DSO) and Unit Safety Officers (UnSO), with varying job descriptions, qualifications and levels of authority existing within and between departments and divisions. It was unclear how this group of staff was performance managed and, hence, how the University leadership could satisfy itself that their H&S work was quality-assured; see paragraph 4.3.6.

3.2.6. A recurrent theme from the evidence was the relatively poor uptake of the abundant H&S training opportunities that were available. This applied to academic supervisors of graduate students and researchers, as well as to others with formally designated H&S responsibilities. A particular area of concern was over the take-up of training relating to the H&S aspects of field studies. There seemed to be no executive route (or little willingness to use existing managerial structures) to ensure that essential training was, in fact, taken up. The Review Group was of the view that the University needed to ensure that all those with executive responsibilities undertook requisite training including refresher training as deemed necessary. It was also very evident that training programmes should include obligatory face-to-face induction briefing of those in positions of responsibility for H&S, including academic supervisors, HoDepts, Units, HoDivs and Members of Council.

3.2.7. The Review Group was informed of the development of an online H&S training course 'Leading and managing Health and Safety', an Oxford Learning initiative aimed at middle to senior managers. The Review Group understood that this package would be rolled out over the course of the next few months and hoped it might be possible to develop it to meet the needs of HoDivs and HoDepts.

3.2.8. Overall there was a need for H&S training to move to being driven by needs analysis rather than courses available for people to choose whether or not to attend.

3.2.9. With regard to work-related illness, it was noted that, although the OHS had comprehensive and complete data on the numbers of staff and the types of illness presenting to the OHS, there was no effective and reliable university-wide system for the routine monitoring of such illness. It was, however, understood that Personnel Services hoped to introduce new software in the future that would make it easier to collect data on sickness absence and to monitor this centrally, with due regard to confidentiality. It is expected that work in this area, to be conducted in close cooperation with OHS, will commence as part of the Human Resources Information Systems programme in early 2011.

3.2.10. The issue of work-related stress was one about which there was a paucity of University-wide information, but, anecdotally, considerable concern. It was felt that heavy workloads were contributing factors to stress levels in some areas. This situation would not be helped by anticipated reductions in resources across the University. This was not an issue that had been included within risk registers and yet, unless properly recorded, monitored and reported to Council so that appropriate action could be taken, increasing overall levels of stress could result in a rise in 'chronicity', whereby personnel failed to return to work at all after lengthy periods of sickness. It could also lead to increasing levels of 'presenteeism', where members of staff who were unwell continued to work at much reduced levels of effectiveness. The latter, and the under-reporting of illness, was already an acknowledged challenge amongst academic staff.

3.2.11. It was noted that the University had recently revised its stress-management policy (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/ps/staff/stress/annexc.shtml) to reflect best practice and that much guidance was available to assist managers and to support individuals who felt under stress.

4.1. Current structure of H&S leadership and management

The structure is defined in the University's Statement of Health and Safety Policy (2009) – see Annex A, extracts of which appear in the box below, to set the context for issues which have arisen in relation to the current arrangements. The H&S committee structure is illustrated in Fig 1.

The University has established the Health and Safety Management Committee as a committee of Council with the responsibility to determine the health and safety management strategy and policies necessary for the University to discharge its legal obligations regarding health and safety. There is also a Consultative Committee for Health and Safety, which includes representatives of the recognised trades unions together with others representing a wide spectrum of interest in the University. The Consultative Committee will advise the Health and Safety Management Committee on all new health and safety policies and is expected to determine the appropriate health and safety culture for the University.

The Chairman of the Health and Safety Management Committee, who also chairs the Consultative Committee, is appointed by the Vice-Chancellor.

The Health and Safety Management Committee has appointed three specialist advisory groups to advise on ionising radiation protection, biological safety and occupational health. It has also appointed a finance sub-committee to oversee expenditure on all matters relating to the programmes of work undertaken on the grounds of safety.

Divisional heads are responsible for the oversight of departmental arrangements for health and safety within their division in order to ensure that they are functioning in accordance with the University's policies.

Heads of departments and institutions, and unit administrators in the Humanities Division, are responsible for the health, safety, and welfare of all persons who are lawfully in the buildings under their charge and are required to bring to the notice of all employees a written statement describing the organisation and arrangements for safety within their departments, institutions or units.

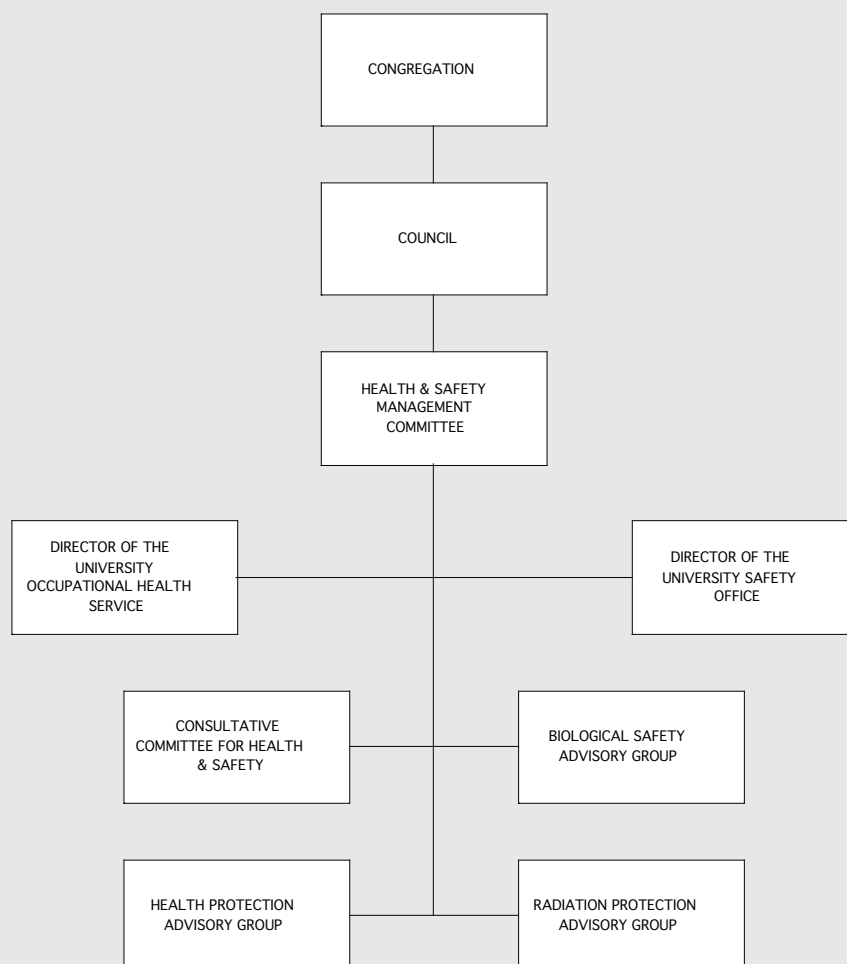

Responsibility for implementing University Safety Policy rests with heads of departments and institutions or with unit safety officers in the case of the Humanities Division. In order to provide expert advice on matters of health and safety, the Council has appointed the following officers:

Director of the University Safety Office, University Occupational Physician and Director of the University Occupational Health Service.

Heads of departments must appoint suitable members of their staff as departmental safety officers to advise them and to liaise with University officers. Area safety officers are appointed in high-risk science and clinical departments in order to enhance the departmental safety officer system. Any department using ionising radiation must have a system of radiation protection management based on departmental radiation protection supervisors, whose task is to ensure compliance with statutory regulations and local rules. Departments carrying out genetic modification work must appoint a departmental biological safety officer.

University H&S Committee Structure

4.2. Issues in relation to the H&S Committees

The University's H&S management structure is committee-based, with the HSMC having a strategic and policy-making role, reporting to Council; and the CCHS having a more operationally-centred responsibility, reporting to the HSMC. The constitution and ToR of the two Committees are given at Annexes C and D.

4.2.1. All HoDivs are ex officio members of the HSMC, as is the PVC (Research), reflecting the importance and seniority of the Committee. The Review Group heard that attendance by some HoDivs in person was infrequent. The Group felt that regular attendance at meetings of the HSMC by HoDivs personally was important, rather than that attendance should be delegated, but that if such delegation occurred it should be within a formal structure of delegated authority to a specific individual, as was the case in the Social Sciences Division. It should not be an ad hoc arrangement.

4.2.2. The Chair of the HSMC, conventionally a Head of House, is also Chair of the CCHS. This arrangement provides a stable link between the two committees as well as a measure of external neutrality, as Heads of House are outside the University's line-management structure. Although there was a suggestion that the authority of the Chair of the HSMC might be enhanced if the post-holder had executive authority over the DUSO, in practice the working arrangements were excellent and the Review Group felt it entirely appropriate for the Chairmanship of the HSMC to rest, as it has done in recent years, with a Head of House.

4.2.3. In their responses to consultation, the CCHS itself and Unite and UNISON all made the point that the two committees should work more closely together and that, if the two committees were not to be amalgamated, at the very least there should be one joint meeting a year between the two committees, so that the CCHS could be more closely involved in the early stages of policy formulation. The Review Group saw merit in that suggestion and understood the Chair of HSMC/CCHS was very receptive to the idea.

4.2.4. Various suggestions were made as to ways in which the HSMC's authority and influence might be enhanced. This was felt to be necessary because of the difficulty of securing implementation of agreed safety policies and procedures throughout all parts of the University. Suggestions for enhancing its authority included the appointment of a second PVC as another ex officio member to the Committee and the addition of an elected member of Council (i.e. not an officer of the University) to its membership. In the former case, given that one PVC was already an ex officio member, and another – the PVC (Planning and Resources) – was a member as the person appointed by Council, this was not thought to confer any particular advantage. However, the Review Group considered that the authority of the HSMC could be augmented by the inclusion of an elected member of Council within its composition; such inclusion would also enhance the continuity of policy development and policy making between the two bodies.

4.2.5. One suggestion the Review Group received was that an external member of Council might be appointed as the Council's H&S 'Champion' and that such an appointment could improve the overall visibility of H&S within Council meetings. The Review Group gave this proposal careful consideration but came to the conclusion that it could be counter-productive by leading to an 'it's not my responsibility' response to H&S within Council, whereas, legally, the Council collectively, and each of its members individually, are statutorily responsible for H&S within the University.

4.2.6. Overall, the idea for enhancing the HSMC's authority that most commended itself to the Review Group was the proposal from the Chair of the HSMC that there should be collaborative (with the USO) H&S reviews of Divisions, by his Committee, on a four-yearly rotating basis. The resultant report, with commentary by his Committee, would be considered by Council at a meeting at which he would be in attendance. This would help to raise the profile of H&S within Council and help to spread good practice between divisions.

4.2.7. The Review Group was delighted with the enthusiastic support that this proposal had received from the Vice-Chancellor.

4.3. Issues in relation to Divisions

In the light of the University's H&S policy, the Review Group interpreted the oversight role of the HoDiv to be one of assurance that systems and resources (including staff) were in place to implement the H&S policy, whilst that of the HoDept or Unit Safety Officer was to ensure operational implementation of H&S policies and procedures. However, from the evidence received from both HoDivs and HoDepts, it became apparent that there were some issues of concern in relation to this split of responsibilities.

4.3.1. Humanities. In the Humanities Division, where there are Faculties rather than departments, the responsibility of the HoDiv for H&S, supported by the Divisional Secretary as DSO, was well understood and executed. It did, however, place a considerable burden on the Divisional Office and the HoDiv felt that there was an argument for the Chairs of Faculty Boards to take more responsibility for H&S. Neither the HoDiv nor the Divisional Secretary had received any briefing on their H&S responsibilities. Professor Shuttleworth also confirmed that it was her intention that reports from twice-yearly meetings of the divisional H&S committee should now be seen by the Divisional Board and that H&S should appear on the Divisional Risk Register. The Division received a high level of support from the USO, but was concerned that safety incident reports went direct to the USO and felt that the Division should receive notification of such incidents (suitably anonymised if necessary) at the same time.

4.3.2. Social Sciences. In the Social Sciences Division, the HoDiv had formally delegated his H&S responsibilities to his deputy HoDiv. The latter attended the HSMC and reported back to the HoDiv after each meeting. H&S matters of note were also discussed at the Divisional Planning and Resource Committee. As the HoDiv Professor Goodman had received no briefing on his H&S responsibilities but, as far as the main H&S risks in his division were concerned, he identified fieldwork, particularly when conducted abroad, as the main area of concern. External training sometimes had to be bought in to cover the variety of circumstances likely to be encountered in the field; and there was the problem of ensuring that the training available was actually taken up. In this regard, academic supervisors and others needed to be informed, preferably in face-to-face briefings, of their H&S responsibilities.

4.3.3. Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences. In the MPLS Division, the HoDiv had established a review of H&S whose detailed report contained recommendations that were now being taken forward. Whilst the prime responsibility for H&S lay with HoDepts, given his academic specialism, he was very H&S aware and felt the need for greater feedback from departments. He also had frequent contact with the DUSO and valued his advice.

4.3.3.1. Professor Halliday confirmed that, as a HoDiv, he had received no specific H&S briefings and that a relevant training package was required. Whilst the prime H&S responsibilities lay with HoDepts, HoDivs needed to be able to ensure informed oversight. At present the Divisional office was not staffed to undertake this oversight function, but an appointment was pending and the person appointed would have H&S as part of his/her job description.

4.3.3.2. Ensuring compliance with H&S policies and procedures was the responsibility of HoDepts, but there could be occasions when formal enforcement action was required, when the USO looked to the HoDiv for support. In such cases Professor Halliday felt the USO and its Director should have enforcement powers which would, in turn, enable the HoDiv to take a firmer stance. There needed to be an ability to impose an H&S solution as necessary.

4.3.3.3. Professor Halliday agreed that the H&S implications of novel technology were a big issue and that potential hazards were embedded within all such work. There was a need for researchers to use their experience to think of what could/might go wrong and to be prepared for it, i.e. to 'horizon scan'. He agreed that it would also be helpful if such work could be scrutinised by a 'fresh pair of eyes'. Much of the challenge in this area was the result of changes within University staffing which had seen the loss of employed technical staff and an increase in the numbers of short-term sponsored researchers who, by the nature of their contract work, were subject to high rates of turnover. Any move to reverse this trend would require considerable financial investment by the University, which was very unlikely in the current financial climate.

4.3.4. Medical Sciences. In the Medical Sciences Division, which had a very small divisional structure in relation to the size of its constituent departments, the HoDiv stated that the Divisional Office provided oversight and advice but was not resourced to carry out fully the accountability responsibilities for departmental H&S arrangements laid upon it by the University; and that any H&S incidents were reported by departments directly to the USO, informing the Divisional Office. If the division were to be able to discharge more fully its role, additional resources would be needed. Whilst the Review Group understood how this situation had arisen, following the creation of divisions, the Review Group felt that it was unsatisfactory that the division was apparently unable to carry out fully any accountability role required by the University's H&S policy. The Review Group considered that the division and the University should, together, work to address the issue.

4.3.5. The Academic Services and University Collections. ASUC is effectively a division led by a Pro-Vice-Chancellor. Professor McKendrick had not received any formal briefing on his H&S responsibilities and, initially, had been unaware that the ASO's formal reporting line was to him as HoDiv, since the ASO's main working relationship was with the Divisional Secretary. Whilst this arrangement worked well, Professor McKendrick suggested that, in order to avoid conflicting advice being received, consideration should be given to ASOs and DSOs having a direct reporting line to the DUSO. Without a direct reporting line to the Head of the Safety Office he felt that there was a risk of confusion because reporting lines were not as clear as they should be.

4.3.6. Below the top level, the four academic divisions and ASUC have their own structures for delivering the H&S agenda, in line with the University's Statement of H&S Policy. Within each division, there are varying arrangements involving ASOs, DSOs or UnSOs, with a variety of different job descriptions and reporting lines. There are only three full-time DSOs and it was thought important to note that the majority of other DSOs were drawn from the academic, academic-related or technical staff of a department who might have no formal H&S qualifications and whose H&S responsibilities are carried in conjunction with their main responsibilities. DSOs report to HoDepts, often through a departmental administrator, but the arrangements were not uniform in departments, centres and institutes. The Review Group did not consider that the lack of uniformity in such arrangements was necessarily problematic, provided the arrangements worked well in practice. It did, however, seek to establish whether the arrangements and reporting lines were known about and understood in each division and department or unit and found that such knowledge was quite often lacking, despite the fact that these are set out in Departmental Statements of Safety Organisation.

4.3.6.1. ASOs are full-time H&S professionals who normally hold high-level H&S qualifications. Whilst all are at grades 7 to 9, their job descriptions vary. The Review Group heard that, following a policy decision taken some years ago, none of the safety officers within divisions report to the DUSO but to HoDepts or, in the case of some ASOs to HoDivs or, in the case of Humanities, to a DSO, who is the Divisional Secretary. Whilst, in practice, there was excellent liaison between all safety officers and the DUSO, the Review Group noted that one consequence of the decision that neither ASOs nor DSOs should report to the DUSO was that there was no de facto 'head of profession' for safety officers in the University, with responsibility for quality assuring overall standards of training and qualifications of H&S staff and of ensuring appropriate job-descriptions and grading. A further consequence of this was that there was insufficient sharing of good practice between safety professionals and this was an important area where improvement was possible.

4.4. Reporting lines for the Director of the University Safety Office and the Director of the Occupational Health Service

The Review Group noted that, at present, the University's two top-level H&S professionals, the DUSO and DOHS, both had direct reports to the Registrar. The DUSO, should any particular situation demand it, also has direct access to the Vice-Chancellor.

4.4.1. The Review Group was informed of a recommendation, within a draft review of personnel-related functions being conducted by the Registrar, that the reporting line of the DUSO and DOHS should be changed from a direct line to the Registrar to the proposed post of Director of Human Resources (DHR). In respect of the DUSO, the Review Group noted that he would retain immediate access to the Vice-Chancellor on safety matters if required and considered the new reporting proposal appropriate providing that immediate access was retained. However, the matter of the revised report of the DOHS gave the Review Group some concern and was discussed in some detail with both the Vice-Chancellor and the Registrar. They were sympathetic to the view of the DOHS that a reporting line to the DPS carried some risks to the delivery of the OHS, with potential to impact on work-related staff health. This was because staff confidence in the OHS could be undermined if they had concerns about a potential loss of medical confidentiality and because they might perceive a conflict of interest for the DOHS if he was being performance-managed by the DHR. Whilst the Review Group was anxious to make its view on this issue known, it recognised that it did not fall within its ToRs to suggest an alternative direct report. In her evidence to the Review Group, the Registrar was able to give reassurance that the issue had now been addressed and that the DOHS accepts the proposed new arrangements.

4.5. The Registrar also indicated that she would like to see the profile of H&S in Council raised. Appropriate mechanisms needed to be in place for Council to be assured that it would be kept informed of serious issues as they arose, that it was able to monitor staff sickness, including stress, and for relevant systems for training and management to be in place. Work was in progress to develop the H&S Risk Register, which the Review Group was later informed was in its second draft and awaited re-submission to the HSMC, and further work was needed on the H&S policy statement. Briefings for Council members on their H&S responsibilities and the legal obligations placed on them as members of the University's Governing Body should be introduced. Overall, the Registrar was of the view that the University should aim for the highest standards in the management of H&S, exceeding those required by law where possible.

4.6. The Vice-Chancellor, in his evidence to the Review Group, emphasised the importance he placed on the University operating to the highest standards in relation to H&S. He had been most impressed, on arriving from Yale, at the rigour and attentiveness of the H&S regime in the Chemistry Department, where he was continuing his research. For the University as a whole, he identified the question of assurance as the principal area of weakness in the implementation of the University's H&S policy and he hoped the ongoing review would identify a positive means of gaining the requisite assurance. He very much welcomed the increased visibility to be given to H&S in Council through discussion of the termly reports from the HSMC and through the proposed system of annual reports to Council from the HSMC's reviews of H&S in each division and ASUC, on a four-yearly rotating basis.

5.1. H&S-related financial arrangements within the University

The Review Group was informed that current quantifiable resources specifically dedicated to H&S management amounted to £2M in respect of the USO and £0.5M in respect of the OHS. Whilst the Review Group did not consider these sums insufficient, it was later informed that these sums had been reduced, in line with reductions applied elsewhere within University services, to £1.881M and £0.47M respectively, as a consequence of the overall pressure on resources. The Review Group was told that reductions would be met, in respect of the USO, through reductions in USO grants to departments and to USO office costs and, in respect of the OHS, by the loss of one nurse-day per week and the withdrawal of physiotherapy services.

5.1.1. Whilst it was not appropriate for Review Group to comment on any future, or further, cuts it did wish to make clear that it hoped that, in times of significant budgetary pressures, the current H&S priorities would be retained. It was also pleased to note that any additional reductions were to be secured through agreed deferment, but not cancellation, of desirable, as opposed to essential programmes.

5.1.2. It was clear to the Review Group that significant sums in direct and indirect costs were being spent on H&S beyond those devoted to the USO and OHS, but these were difficult to quantify. For example, safety officers of the different divisions, departments and units were of different grades and there was significant input of departmental and other staff time. It was also evident that funds set aside and available for H&S were held within numerous different allocations. However, the Review Group was pleased to receive assurances from a number of departments that funding required for H&S measures was invariably found when required, even at the expense of other non-H&S priorities.

SECTION 6

6.1. The University's present achievement against UCEA H&S Management Best Practice Standards

The Review Group has assessed the University's current performance against the 'traffic light' system which forms the 'Indicator' column of the table below as follows:

Commitment
Universities achieving best practice in H&S management are fully committed to controlling risk and preventing harm to people.	1. H&S is integrated into the University's core business management activities.	1. The University's corporate strategy statements and plans include H&S aims and objectives.	R	The H&S objectives are not incorporated in the University's Strategic Plan but are readily available in policy documents and on the website.
		2. The governing body approves the strategic H&S aims and objectives and requires periodic written reports on H&S performance.	G	Achieved.
		3. Senior staff demonstrate their personal commitment to H&S, leading by example and providing unambiguous direction.	A	There is no training provided to the most senior staff in the institution to help them understand their H&S responsibilities.
		4. Senior staff can describe strategies that they have put in place and their programme for continuing improvement.	A	There is some confusion at HoDiv level about their H&S roles and responsibilities and how these relate to those of HoDepts. More training and briefing is required.
		5. An appropriate H&S management standard has been formally adopted and incorporated into the appropriate strategies.	A	In some instances incorporation is incomplete.
	2. The University is committed to establishing and maintaining a properly resourced occupational H&S management system.	6. The resources necessary to establish and maintain the occupational health and safety programme are recognised and allocated.	G	Achieved, and will be maintained even in the light of programmed resource reductions.
Policy
Universities achieving best practice in H&S management use effective H&S policies to set a clear direction.	3. The H&S policy has the unequivocal support of the governing body and the Vice Chancellor.	7. There is a written H&S Policy which supports the corporate strategy, signed by both a representative of the governing body and the Vice-Chancellor.	G	Achieved.
Organisation
Universities that are achieving best practice in H&S management set up effective management structures and arrangements for implementing policy.	4. All staff understand their H&S responsibilities and are held to account for meeting them.	8. Responsibilities for H&S are devolved successively through a H&S management structure and written down.	A	Achieved, but weaknesses are evident in the H&S understanding and training of academic staff.

PRINCIPLES	INDICATOR (Targets or Goals)	EVIDENCE	INDICATOR	COMMENTARY
		9. Arrangements are in place for the appraisal of the H&S performance of individuals.	A	Whilst systems are evident in some areas, there is no systematic appraisal of H&S as part of the University's performance appraisal programme.
	5. The University's H&S arrangements are sustained by effective communication and the promotion of competence enabling staff to make a responsible and informed contribution.	10. Information on hazards, risks and control measures; the university's H&S policy and strategy; and the implementation plan is widely communicated.	G	Achieved.
		11. There is access to competent H&S advice for both management and staff.	G	Achieved.
		12. There is a H&S training strategy plan. 13. Senior staff receive H&S management training. 14. All staff are provided with H&S training commensurate with their level of responsibility.	A A A	Training plans are operational rather than strategic. A lot of training is available but take up is incomplete and there is a need to ensure that training programmes are designed to meet the training need. This is an area which requires a considerable amount of attention.
	6. The University's H&S arrangements are underpinned by effective staff involvement and participation.	15. There are arrangements for the involvement and participation of all employees.	G	Achieved.
Planning
Universities achieving best practice in H&S management adopt a planned and systematic approach to implementing H&S policy.	7. The University has clear H&S aims, objectives and standards based on the principle of preventing harm through identifying, eliminating and controlling hazards and risks.	16. Arrangements are in place for systematic hazard identification and risk assessment in all areas of operation.	A	Where the risks are known the systems work well. Oxford University works at the cutting edge of knowledge in many fields and a process for hazard identification and risk assessment needs to be developed for areas where the challenges are not known.

PRINCIPLES	INDICATOR (Targets or Goals)	EVIDENCE	INDICATOR	COMMENTARY
		17. There is a written H&S plan (or Programme) which sets objectives, responsibilities and timescales.	G	Achieved.
		18. Systematic risk assessment is used to prioritise the contents of the H&S plan or programme.	G	Achieved.
		19. Written performance standards are established and used to measure achievement.	G	Achieved.
Measuring and Reviewing Performance
Universities achieving best practice in H&S management know the strengths and weaknesses of their current arrangements.	8. Performance is monitored against plans and standards to reveal when and where improvement is needed.	20. There are proactive arrangements in place to measure performance and compare it with pre-determined plans and standards.	A	Departmental H&S self-assessment forms are forwarded to the University Safety office for audit. However, better processes for feedback and the sharing of good practice need to be developed.
		21. There are procedures for reporting and investigating accidents, injuries, ill health and near misses.	G	Achieved.
		22. There are arrangements for implementing remedial action following all monitoring activities.	A	See the Final Report; corrective actions taken are sometimes not sustained, or can take time to put in place.
		23. There are periodic independent audits of the whole management system.	G	Achieved.
		24. Performance is systematically reviewed based on the findings of monitoring activities and audits.	G	Achieved.
	9. The University learns from all relevant experience and applies the lessons through the planning process.	25. The findings of the review process are used to revise the H&S policies, strategies and plans.	G	To be achieved?

SECTION 7

7.1. Perceived challenges

The Review Group assessed these to be as follows:

- (a) H&S is not visible enough in key parts of the University's planning process, such as in the Strategic Plan and the five-year divisional plans;
- (b) H&S does not occupy a prominent enough place in the Council's deliberations for Council to be seen to be taking an active leadership role in this area;
- (c) Council needs a better mechanism of being assured that its H&S policies are operating effectively;
- (d) the profile and authority of the HSMC is insufficient;
- (e) divisions have a variable approach to the leadership and management of H&S and there is a need for the split of responsibilities between divisions and departments to be clarified;
- (f) there is scope for a more pro-active approach to the dissemination of best practice;
- (g) the ASO and DSO roles and reporting lines vary and a formal system of performance appraisal in relation to the conduct of H&S duties is lacking;
- (h) little evidence of H&S training needs analysis which leads to inadequate uptake of necessary H&S training and there is little, if any, provision of on-appointment briefing on their H&S responsibilities for those in senior management or leadership roles, including members of Council;
- (i) the University's student and staff population is, by its very nature, subject to much turnover, and post-doctoral researchers on fixed-term contracts are now taking on responsibilities that would formerly have been the province of long-serving technical staff or permanent research staff, making it difficult to ensure systems and procedures are embedded in a sustainable way;
- (j) the extent of work-related illness and stress is not known, as effective systems are not yet in place for central recording, monitoring and reporting of work-related illness, including stress;
- (k) the University has to manage a huge diversity of potential risks, ranging from overseas trips to laboratory equipment, fire hazards, ionising radiation, pathogens, chemicals, construction works, student and public safety; the University's H&S system therefore has to cover the entirety of risks and focus on the priorities;

(l) the University works at the leading edge of research, where there is potential for new and unknown H&S risks which those working closest to the novel technology may not be best placed to identify.

SECTION 8

8.1. Recommendations

To address the above perceived challenges, the Review Group recommends that:

8.2. Council

Council should:

- (1) include a section on H&S in the University's Strategic Plan;
- (2) include H&S in the University's Strategic Risk Register;
- (3) require divisions to include H&S in their five-yearly divisional plans;
- (4) clarify the respective responsibilities for H&S of HoDivs and HoDepts and ensure that HoDivs have adequate resources for carrying out their H&S assurance role;
- (5) require the HSMC to prepare an operational plan for implementing the H&S strategy;
- (6) endorse the proposal of the Chair of the HSMC for an H&S review of each division and of ASUC, in rotation over a four-year cycle, reporting to Council;
- (7) appoint an elected member of Council to the HSMC;
- (8) promote timely implementation and effective use of the Human Resources Information System for monitoring staff illness, including stress;
- (9) undertake repeat reviews of the leadership of H&S at suitable intervals.

8.3. HSMC

HSMC should:

- (1) prepare an H&S strategy for incorporation in the University's Strategic Plan;
- (2) prepare an operational plan to give effect to the strategy, to include:
 - (a) the four-yearly H&S reviews of divisions and ASUC, in collaboration with the USO;

(b) a plan for the supply and delivery of relevant and appropriate training for staff and students, incorporating the training needs identified by each division;

(c) an approach to dealing with persistent non-compliance with agreed policies;

(3) establish a mechanism for 'horizon scanning' to ensure that, as far as possible, potential H&S hazards are identified at an early stage in the development and implementation of novel technologies;

(4) institute an annual joint meeting with the CCHS.

8.4. Heads of Divisions

HoDivs should:

- (1) ensure that the full range of H&S risks are considered and those of highest priority/impact are included in their Divisional Risk Registers;
- (2) include H&S in their divisional plans;
- (3) clarify with their departmental, faculty and unit heads the roles and responsibilities for H&S within the Division and foster improved communication on H&S matters within the Division;
- (4) ensure systems are in place for briefing newly appointed managers and supervisors on their H&S responsibilities including their responsibility to ensure the take-up by staff and students of relevant training;
- (5) arrange for their Divisional Board to receive regular reports of rates of sickness absence from the departments and units once central monitoring has been put in place;
- (6) participate in the four-yearly reviews of H&S by the HSMC, working on the reviews in close collaboration with the USO;
- (7) where new or novel technology is to be introduced into the Division, it should be subject to appropriate 'horizon scanning' scrutiny.

8.5. Heads of Departments and Units

HoDepts and Units should:

- (1) review their departmental H&S risks, prioritise them and include them on their Risk Registers;
- (2) consider H&S aspects in all departmental planning;

(3) work with the Divisional Office to clarify roles and responsibilities for H&S and ensure good communication with the Division and other departments on relevant H&S issues, to benefit from lessons learned;

(4) ensure that all new appointees with H&S management responsibilities receive face-to-face briefing on these, as part of their induction, and that effective briefing of all students and researchers takes place;

(5) ensure that all those with statutory H&S responsibilities (e.g. radiation protection) undertake the requisite training and refresher courses;

(6) identify other H&S training needs across their department/unit;

(7) ensure that corrective actions and new procedures are effectively embedded into the department's processes so that they are not eroded over time;

(8) include performance on H&S responsibilities in staff appraisals;

(9) monitor and benchmark sickness absence rates and investigate increases over expected or benchmarked rates once central monitoring has been put in place;

(10) participate in the four-yearly review of H&S by the HSMC;

(11) seek feedback from the DUSO on lessons to be learned from Departmental Safety Audits and HASMAP audits and implement recommended improvements.

8.6. DUSO

The DUSO should:

(1) work closely with the divisions and ASUC to produce reports for the four-yearly H&S reviews by HSMC;

(2) provide feedback to departments and units following their submission of their self-assessment audits and from any HASMAP audits;

(3) be proactive in disseminating good practice;

(4) assist departments and divisions in developing a scheme of performance appraisal for safety officers.

8.7. DOHS

The DOHS should work closely with Personnel Services to develop the HRIS for the central monitoring of work-related illness, including stress.

UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD STATEMENT OF HEALTH AND SAFETY POLICY

www.admin.ox.ac.uk/safety/

For the Health and Safety Management Committee

1. The general provisions of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 impose a duty on all employers to ensure, as far as is reasonably practicable, the safety of their employees at work by maintaining safe plant, safe systems of work, and safe premises, and also by ensuring adequate instruction, training and supervision. The University is also bound by the Act to ensure the safety of all other persons, who (though not employees) may be affected by the University's work activities.

2. The University has established the Health and Safety Management Committee as a committee of Council with the responsibility to determine the health and safety management strategy and policies necessary for the University to discharge its legal obligations regarding health and safety. There is also a Consultative Committee for Health and Safety, which includes representatives of the recognised trades unions together with others representing a wide spectrum of interest in the University. The Consultative Committee will advise the Health and Safety Management Committee on all new health and safety policies and is expected to determine the appropriate health and safety culture for the University.

The Chairman of the Health and Safety Management Committee, who also chairs the Consultative Committee, is appointed by the Vice-Chancellor.

The Health and Safety Management Committee has appointed three specialist advisory groups to advise on radiation protection, biological safety and occupational health. It has also appointed a finance sub-committee to oversee expenditure on all matters relating to the programmes of work undertaken on the grounds of safety.

3. The Act requires every employer to prepare a written statement of general policy with respect to the health and safety at work of his employees and the organisation and arrangements in force for carrying out that policy, and to bring the statement to the notice of all his employees. Council therefore circulates the following Statement of Safety Policy:

It is the policy of the University, and the responsibility of Council, to adopt all reasonably practicable measures:

(a) to secure the health, safety and welfare of all employees at places of work under the University's control and elsewhere when performing their duties;

(b) to protect students and other persons who are lawfully on University premises against risk to their health or safety which might arise out of activities in those places;

(c) to maintain safe plant, machinery and equipment and a safe and healthy place of work.

4. It is also the policy of the University to ensure that all members of the University and its staff are aware of their individual responsibility to exercise care in relation to themselves and those who work with them. To this end individuals are enjoined to:

(a) familiarise themselves with University Safety Policy and any departmental or unit safety requirements;

(b) take reasonable care that all procedures used are safely carried out, and seek expert advice in any case of doubt;

(c) warn of any special or newly identified hazards in existing procedures or risks in new procedures about to be introduced;

(d) report accidents or incidents promptly;

(e) familiarise themselves with fire and emergency drills (including the location of emergency telephones) and escape routes; and

(f) where required by University policy register with the Occupational Health Service for health surveillance purposes.

Where self-employed persons or contractors and their employees carry out work on University premises, they must comply with standards of safe working contained in any regulations or codes of practice applicable to their operations, and in the University's safety rules.

5. Divisional heads are responsible for the oversight of departmental arrangements for health and safety within their division in order to ensure that they are functioning in accordance with the University's policies.

6. Heads of departments and institutions, and unit administrators in the Humanities Division, are responsible for the health, safety, and welfare of all persons who are lawfully in the buildings under their charge and are required to bring to the notice of all employees a written statement describing the organisation and arrangements for safety within their departments, institutions or units.

7. Responsibility for implementing University Safety Policy rests with heads of departments and institutions or with unit safety officers in the case of the Humanities Division. In order to provide expert advice on matters of health and safety, the Council has appointed the following officers:

Director of the University Safety Office;

University Occupational Physician and Director of the University Occupational Health Service.

The policies of the University on specific legislative and other matters are issued as University Policy Statements (previously known as University Guidance Notes). Advice on specific hazards and technical items is issued as memoranda by the University Safety Office and by the University Occupational Health Service.

Heads of departments must appoint suitable members of their staff as departmental safety officers to advise them and to liaise with University officers. Area safety officers are appointed in high-risk science and clinical departments in order to enhance the departmental safety officer system. Any department using ionising radiation must have a system of radiation protection management based on departmental radiation protection supervisors, whose task is to ensure compliance with statutory regulations and local rules. Departments carrying out genetic modification work must appoint a departmental biological safety officer.

8. This Policy supersedes all previous versions of University Safety Policy. It will be reviewed annually by the Health and Safety Management Committee.

9. The names of the chairmen of the committees and advisory groups and of the University officers are given in the Appendix.

COMPOSITION AND TERMS OF REFERENCE – HEALTH AND SAFETY MANAGEMENT COMMITTEE

www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/

Council Regulations 15 of 2002

Made by Council on 26 June 2002

Health and Safety Management Committee

Amended on 23 March 2006, 15 February 2007, 28 June 2007 and 15 January 2009

Renumbered on 1 June 2006, 28 June 2007, 19 March 2008, 22 May 2008 (with effect from 1 October 2008), 26 March 2009, 23 April 2009, 30 July 2009, 18 February 2010 and 6 May 2010

3.60. The Health and Safety Management Committee shall consist of:

- (1) a member of Congregation appointed by the Vice-Chancellor as chairman of the committee;
- (2) the Pro-Vice-Chancellor with responsibility for Research;
- (3)–(6) the heads of each of the divisions;
- (7) one person appointed by Council.

3.61. The committee may co-opt up to four additional members, who shall hold office for such period as the committee may determine.

3.62. The committee shall be responsible for the following matters:

- (1) the determination of the management strategy and policies necessary for the University to discharge its legal obligations in respect of occupational health and safety;
- (2) the recommendation of appropriate action necessary to implement the University's Safety Policy, as designed to promote the safety of staff, students, authorised visitors, and members of the public lawfully on university property;
- (3) the taking of action on all management matters of safety and occupational health and other areas of the committee's remit, including the control of such funds as may be allocated to it.

3.63. The committee's remit shall include all matters covered by legislation on health and safety, fire safety, food safety, and the transport of dangerous goods, and by environmental protection legislation relating to the disposal of all hazardous wastes, radioactive substances, and genetic modification.

3.64. The committee may set up such subcommittees and specialist advisory groups as it considers desirable, and shall determine their membership and terms of reference.

3.65. The committee shall meet at least once a term, and following each meeting shall report to Council on the main matters which it has discussed; the committee shall also make an annual report to Council.

¶ Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 4 October, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose the legislative proposals at 1 and 2, or the space resolution at 3, below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the legislative proposals and resolution shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

1 Voting on Legislative Proposal: establishment of degree of Master of Computer Science and Philosophy

Explanatory Note

The following Legislative Proposal establishes the new degree of Master of Computer Science and Philosophy. This degree is on the model of existing four-year courses that lead to master's awards, such as the Master of Computer Science (MCompSci), and the Master of Mathematics and Philosophy (MMathPhil). A consequential change is also being made to the Congregation Regulations concerning the conduct of ceremonies and the opportunity is being taken to add to these regulations forms of presentation and admission for other degrees.

WHEREAS it is expedient to establish the degree of Master of Computer Science and Philosophy, THE UNIVERSITY ENACTS AS FOLLOWS.

1 In section 1 of Statute X (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 110, amended with effect from 14 June 2005, 11 October 2005 and 2 June 2009, Vol. 135, p. 1174, 16 June 2005; Vol. 136, p. 184, 13 October 2005; Vol. 139, p. 1164), after 'Master of Computer Science', insert 'Master of Computer Science and Philosophy'.

2 In regulation 4.2 of Congregation Regulations 3 of 2002 concerning the conduct of ceremonies in Congregation, and certain other ceremonies (made by Congregation on 5 March 2002, Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4612, 13 February 2002, p. 771, as amended on 11 February 2003, 11 March 2003, 2 November 2004, 11 October 2005 and 13 June 2006, Vol. 133, p. 781, 13 February 2003, p. 948, 13 March 2003; Vol. 135, p. 297, 4 November 2004; Vol. 136, p. 184, 13 October 2005, p. 1241, 15 June 2006) delete existing paragraph (21) and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

'(21) Master of Biochemistry, Chemistry, Computer Science, Earth Sciences, Engineering, Mathematics, Physics, Mathematics and Computer Science, Mathematics and Philosophy, Physics and Philosophy, and Computer Science and Philosophy'

Insignissime, etc., praesento vobis hos meos scholares in facultate Artium, ut admittantur ad gradum Magistri in Biochimia, vel Chimia, vel Scientia Computatoria, vel Scientiis Terrenis, vel Ingeniaria, vel Mathematicis, vel Physica, vel Mathematica et Scientia Computatoria, vel Mathematica et Philosophia, vel Physica et Philosophia, vel Scientia Computatoria et Philosophia prout in schedula a Registrario scriptum est.'

3 Ibid., in regulation 4.2 insert new paragraph (25) below:

'(25) Doctor of Engineering'

Insignissime, etc., praesento vobis hunc meum scholarem in Ingeniaria (or hunc Baccalaureum or Magistrum) ut admittatur ad gradum Doctoris in Ingeniaria.'

4 Ibid., in regulation 4.3 delete paragraph (16) and substitute:

'(16) Master of Biochemistry, Chemistry, Computer Science, Earth Sciences, Engineering, Mathematics, Physics, Mathematics and Computer Science, Mathematics and Philosophy, Physics and Philosophy, and Computer Science and Philosophy'

Domini, ego admitto vos ad gradum Magistri in Biochimia, vel Chimia, vel Scientia Computatoria, vel Scientiis Terrenis, vel Ingeniaria, vel Mathematicis, vel Physica, vel Mathematica et Scientia Computatoria, vel Mathematica et Philosophia, vel Physica et Philosophia, vel Scientia Computatoria et Philosophia prout in schedula Registrario scriptum est; insuper auctoritate mea et totius Universitatis, do vobis potestatem legendi, et reliqua omnia faciendi quae ad eundem gradum spectant.'

5 Ibid., in regulation 4.3 insert new paragraph (20) below and renumber existing paragraph (20) as (21):

'(20) Doctor of Engineering'

Domine or Magister (or Domini or Magistri), ego admitto te (or vos) ad gradum Doctoris in Ingeniaria.'

REGULATIONS TO BE MADE BY COUNCIL IF THE STATUTE IS APPROVED

1 In regulation 2.1 of Council Regulations 22 of 2002 concerning academic precedence and standing (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended on 14 June 2005 and 11 October 2005, Vol. 135, p. 1174, 16 June 2005; Vol. 139, p. 1004, 30 April 2009), after 'Master of Arts, or Master of Biochemistry or Chemistry or Computer Science' insert 'or Computer Science and Philosophy'.

2 Ibid., after 'Bachelor of Arts, or Master of Biochemistry or Chemistry or Computer Science' insert 'or Computer Science and Philosophy'.

2 Voting on Legislative Proposal: Statute V concerning Greyfriars

Explanatory Note

The following Legislative Proposal, submitted by Council under Part 2 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 161, as amended on 12 October 2004, 7 March 2006 and 14 October 2008 (Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; Vol. 137, p. 669; Vol. 139, pp. 4–8), removes a reference to Greyfriars in a list of Permanent Private Halls licensed by the University.

WHEREAS it is expedient to remove a reference to Greyfriars in Statute V, THE UNIVERSITY ENACTS AS FOLLOWS.

In section 11 of Statute V, concerning the Permanent Private Halls licensed by the University (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, as amended on 17 July 2003, Vol. 133, p. 1536), delete 'Greyfriars'.

REGULATIONS TO BE MADE BY COUNCIL IF THE STATUTE IS APPROVED

In regulation 4 (1) of Council Regulations 12 of 2002, concerning the establishment and maintenance of Permanent Private Halls (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended on 17 July 2003, Vol. 133, p. 1536), delete 'Greyfriars 30'.

3 Voting on resolution authorising use of space in the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter

Explanatory Note

PRINCIPLES AND PROCESS FOR SPACE ALLOCATIONS IN THE RADCLIFFE OBSERVATORY QUARTER

The Radcliffe Observatory Quarter (ROQ) was acquired by the University in 2003 with the intention of developing an integrated campus, capable of phased development, which offers expansion space for the collegiate University over the next twenty years. The overall principles for the development of the site are set out in the ROQ Masterplan developed over a three-year period and endorsed by Council in December 2008.

In the case of the ROQ development, all space allocations are considered in the first instance by the ROQ Project Board, a committee established in 2005 by the Planning and Resources Allocation Committee (PRAC) to provide further oversight for the project. Its members are the Proctors and Assessor, the Pro-Vice-Chancellors for Planning and Resources, Education and Research, the Heads of Division (except Medical Sciences), the Chief Executive of Oxford University Press, Bodley's Librarian, the Chair of the Buildings and Estates Subcommittee (BESC), and the heads of Estates, Development and Planning. Allocations recommended by the ROQ Project Board are then considered through the normal space approvals process: consideration by BESC, which may authorise an allocation of up to 300 sq.m. Any allocation above that size is referred onwards to PRAC and, if the proposed site exceeds 1000 sq.m. or a building is over 600 sq.m., PRAC asks Council to recommend it to Congregation.

THE BLAVATNIK SCHOOL OF GOVERNMENT

The establishment of the Blavatnik School of Government promises to be an important milestone in the University's centuries-long tradition of varied contribution to government and public policy around the world. A major philanthropic donation provides an opportunity to bring together the knowledge borne of this rich tradition, and new and exciting strands of thinking. The emerging vision for the School is one characterised by the following key objectives. The Blavatnik School of Government will:

- (a) train future leaders through a pioneering multi-disciplinary approach which prepares them to innovate, to think globally, and to deliver public goods that aim to ensure growth, opportunity, security and social harmony;
- (b) forge partnerships and collaboration between the world's best thinkers and practitioners;
- (c) inject cutting-edge academic research into policy-making;
- (d) create a global network of public policy-makers who can continue to learn from one another for the future.

The School has been the prime capital project for the Social Sciences Division for some time and the conclusion of negotiations with the donor now enables this project to become a reality. It is the first major capital development project since the building of the Centre for Advanced Study in the Social Sciences in 2004 (the Manor Road building) that now houses the departments of Economics, Sociology and Politics and International Relations as well as two research centres of the Faculty of Law.

The location of the School on the ROQ site provides an important opportunity to produce a high-quality landmark building fit for the purpose of establishing the School as the first of its kind outside North America. It is a founding aim for the School to have a strong and well-grounded multi-disciplinary approach spanning all divisions of the University. The School's presence on the ROQ site will bring it into close proximity with the Humanities Division, which will be centring its activities on the site, enabling the development of strong links with the division through the School.

The new building will house the School's academic and support staff, provide purpose-built facilities for academic and practitioner visitors, provide teaching accommodation for a new graduate cohort to be established (120 students at maturity), as well as space and facilities for individual research centres coming under the School's remit and for the provision of outreach/third-leg activities associated with the School's academic aims.

Notices

Text of resolution authorising the use of space in the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter

That approximately 6,300 sq.m. in the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter be allocated as the site of the new Blavatnik School of Government.

General Notices

FACILITIES AVAILABLE TO RETIRED MEMBERS OF UNIVERSITY STAFF

Retired members of staff in receipt of a university pension (whether under or over seventy-five, and whether or not they are a member of a faculty or of Congregation) are able to obtain a retired staff card, which gives them access to a very wide range of facilities. Application for such a card can be made via a departmental or college administrator.

Provided a valid card is held, the privileges offered include continued access to university libraries, access to OUCS and its email services, discounts at the Oxford University shop and at the Ashmolean and Bodleian gift shops, free entrance to the Botanic Garden, the ability to apply for membership of the University Club on Mansfield Road, and discounted membership of the University sports club at Iffley Road. Retired staff are also welcomed at the Language Centre.

Circulation of the Gazette to retired members of staff

Former members of Congregation resident in the United Kingdom can continue to receive copies of the Gazette (as well as the University's staff newsletter Blueprint, and the Oxford Magazine), on application in writing to the Information Office, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD. In the case of those over the age of seventy-five such applications must be renewed at the beginning of each academic year.

MSC IN CLINICAL EMBRYOLOGY NUFFIELD DEPARTMENT OF OBSTETRICS AND GYNAECOLOGY

Research dissertations are to be submitted to the Examination School by noon on Friday, 12 August 2011.

REPORT ISSUED BY THE INTERNAL AUDITORS

The following report issued by the Internal Auditors has been accepted by the Audit and Scrutiny Committee:

ICT Governance Review

The executive summary of this report has now been posted on the intranet at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/councilsec/oxonly/audit/auditrep.shtml. DEPARTMENT OF EARTH SCIENCES

The Department of Earth Sciences moved to a new building on 20 September. The new Earth Sciences Building is located on South Parks Road, on the site of the old Central Chemistry building.

The new address is: Department of Earth Sciences, South Parks Road, Oxford OX1 3AN. Departmental phone numbers will remain the same as far as possible; if you experience any difficulty in contacting members of staff, please call reception on 01865 (2)72000.

OXFORD MARTIN SCHOOL

Announcement of new shorthand name and website

The Oxford Martin School is the new shorthand name given to the James Martin 21st Century School, which launched a new website and logo on 27 September 2010. The School is an interdisciplinary research initiative addressing major global future challenges. Following the successful $50 million matched funding challenge announced earlier this year, the Oxford Martin School now comprises thirty research institutes and programmes, which are clustered under four broad themes:

Energy and Environment

- 21st Century Ocean Institute
- Institute of Biodiversity
- Institute for Carbon and Energy Reduction in Transport
- Institute on Plants for the 21st Century
- Oxford Centre for Tropical Forests
- Oxford Geoengineering Programme
- Programme on Globalising Tidal Power Generation
- Programme on Modelling and Predicting Climate Change
- Programme in Nuclear and Energy Materials
- Programme on Solar Energy: Organic Photovoltaics

Technology and Society

- Institute for Economic Modelling
- Institute for the Future of Computing
- Institute for Science, Innovation and Society
- International Migration Institute
- Oxford Institute of Ageing
- Oxford Institute for Global Economic Development
- Programme on Computational Cosmology
- Programme on Future Technologies
- Programme on the Future of Cities

Health and Medicine

- George Centre for Healthcare Innovation
- Institute for Emerging Infections
- Institute for the Future of the Mind

- Institute of Nanoscience for Medicine
- Institute for Vaccine Design
- Oxford Stem Cell Institute
- Particle Therapy Cancer Research Institute

Ethics and Governance

- Future of Humanity Institute
- Oxford Institute for Ethics, Law and Armed Conflict
- Programme on Ethics of the New Biosciences
- Programme on Mind and Machine

4 Ibid., l. 9, delete ‘statistics portfolio, and literature review’ and insert ‘journal article review, literature review, and activities report’.

5 Ibid., p. 762 delete ll. 19–47 and p. 763 delete ll. 1–32 and insert:

‘(a) Philosophical Foundations of Psychological Research

This module begins with historical and foundational issues and progresses to philosophical issues arising from areas of contemporary research in psychology. Topics studied will include some of: the subject matter of psychology; levels of description; the epistemology of psychology; psychological understanding; cognitive science; the study of neuropsychological and psychiatric disorders; the scientific study of consciousness; and philosophical issues arising from areas of contemporary research.

Each candidate shall be required to submit an essay of no more than 3,000 words. Essay topics must be approved by the course committee. The deadline for submission shall be notified to students at the start of the course.

(b) Design Skills

This module is delivered as a series of oral presentations collaboratively prepared by groups of students followed by group discussions. The focus is on research articles that illustrate the use of particular kinds of methodology and/or design.

Each candidate shall be required to produce a 2,000 word review of a journal article assigned by the course committee. Details of this assessment shall be notified to students at the start of the course.

(c) Brain and Cognition

This module covers methods used in research in cognitive psychology and neuropsychology. It presents foundational knowledge from neuroanatomy, neurological disorders, neurological and psychological assessment and the use of experimental methods, to familiarise students with the diverse methodologies which contribute to cognitive neuropsychology. Methodologies deployed in the investigation of perception and cognition are discussed and evaluated.

Each candidate shall be required to submit an essay of no more than 3,000 words. Essay topics must be approved by the course committee. The deadline for submission shall be notified to students at the start of the course.

(d) Social Behaviour and Personality

This module provides a critical analysis of the range of methods and approaches used in social psychology and the study of individual differences.

Each candidate shall be required to submit an essay of no more than 3,000 words. Essay topics must be approved by the course committee. The deadline for submission shall be notified to students at the start of the course.

(e) Project Design

This module provides practical instruction in research and presentation skills. Students will undertake detailed planning of the research project to be carried out under (j).

Each candidate shall be required to submit a 3,000 word review of relevant literature and methods relating to their research project. The deadline for submission shall be notified to students at the start of the course. In addition each candidate shall be required to give an oral presentation outlining the design of his or her research project and the ideas behind it, but this shall not contribute to the overall result for this module.

(f) Statistical Theory and Methods

This module comprises a series of statistical lectures and complementary statistical workshops.

Each candidate shall be required to submit an essay of no more than 3,000 words. Essay topics must be approved by the course committee. The deadline for submission shall be notified to students at the start of the course. Each candidate shall also be required to complete a portfolio of reports based on SPSS data analyses carried out during the workshops, in addition to a computer-based test but neither of these shall contribute to the overall result for this module.

(g) Mini Project

Small groups of 2–4 students will be assigned to research teams within the Department of Experimental Psychology and guided through research tasks involving, for example, setting up equipment and procedures for a study, collection of pilot data, coding and processing of data, and statistical analysis.

The module will be assessed by a written report of activities conducted in the mini-project. The deadline for submission shall be notified to students at the start of the course.

(h) Language and Development

This module addresses methods used in selected areas of developmental psychology with a particular emphasis on language. Longitudinal designs, and observational and experimental methods are reviewed and evaluated with examples from recent research. Attention is also given to studies of brain function during development and to the uses of fMRI and EEG data. Particular issues arising from the study of infants lacking verbal skills are identified.

Each candidate shall be required to submit an essay of no more than 3,000 words. Essay topics must be approved by the course committee. The deadline for submission shall be notified to students at the start of the course.

(i) Computational Neuroscience

This module provides an introduction to the goals and methods of computational modelling in the context of cognitive neuroscience, covering the architecture, function, and properties of a number of basic prototypical classes of neural network. It also looks at how these basic neural networks provide building blocks for larger-scale models of brain function. Lectures will be supplemented by practical sessions providing hands-on experience of computational modelling.

Each candidate shall be required to submit an essay of no more than 3,000 words. Essay topics must be approved by the course committee. The deadline for submission shall be notified to students at the start of the course. In addition, candidates shall be required to complete reports based on practical assignments conducted as part of the module but these shall not contribute to the overall result for this module.

(j) Research Project

Each student shall carry out a project under the supervision of a research supervisor on a subject selected in consultation with the academic advisor and approved by the course committee. The course committee shall be responsible for the appointment of the research supervisor. The Research Project module shall consist of data collection, analysis of the data, delivering a poster presentation and writing a dissertation on the project.

Candidates shall be required to submit to the examiners not later than noon on the first Monday in September three copies of a typewritten or printed dissertation of not more than 10,000 words in length (excluding bibliography and any appendices) on his or her research project. The cover of the copies must bear the candidate's examination number and name of the examination, but not their name or college, and must be sent in a parcel to, 'The Chairman of Examiners: M.Sc. in Psychological Research, c/o Examination Schools, High Street, Oxford'. The dissertation must be accompanied by a signed statement by the candidate that the dissertation is his or her own work.

Candidates shall also be required to deliver a poster presentation based on their research project, however this shall not contribute to the overall result for this module. The date on which candidates are required to deliver their presentations will be in the long vacation.'

Elections

Election

25 November

Vacancies and Retiring Members

The lists below show the retiring member or members, and indicate the length of appointment, from MT 2010 unless otherwise stated.

Audit and Scrutiny Committee

Vacancy: One

Mr B.A. Sufrin From HT 2011 To MT 2013

One member of Congregation, not necessarily being a member of any division and not in any case being nominated in a divisional capacity, who shall be elected by Congregation who shall not serve on Council or the Finance Committee or on any committee which in the view of Council has main line executive authority within the University, or hold any office in the University or any college which involves executive authority.

Further information on the Audit and Scrutiny Committee can be found at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/520-122c.shtml. Enquiries may be directed to the Secretary.

Nominations in writing for the elections on 25 November, by four members of Congregation other than the candidate will be received by the Elections Office, at the University Offices, Wellington Square, up to 4 p.m. on Thursday, 28 October.

Council has decided that nominations should show for each signatory the name and college or department in block capitals. Any names which are not so shown may not be published.

At least one nomination in respect of each candidate must be made on an official nomination form. Copies of the form are obtainable from the Elections Office or from the Elections Office website (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/).

Candidates are invited to include with their nomination forms, a written statement of no more than 250 words, setting out his or her reasons for standing and qualifications for the office being sought. In the event of a contested election, these statements will be available online at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/ and published in the Gazette dated 11 November.

Voters may wish to wait until they have read these notes before returning their ballot papers.

Ballot papers will be sent out to members of Congregation as soon as possible after the closing date for nominations. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 25 November.

Advertising enquiries

Email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk

Telephone: 01865 (2)80548

Fax: 01865 (2)70178

Post: Gazette Advertisements,
Public Affairs Directorate,
University Offices,
Wellington Square,
Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline

Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges

Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £20 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in 'Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements' below.)

External advertisers: £25 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.

For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length

The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment

Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit-card or debit-card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

Note. Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the web-site. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque

Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note. Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency. If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General

1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be e-mailed automatically to the e-mail address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges

6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at <http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm>.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer

7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers' Warranty and Indemnity

13. The advertiser warrants:

(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.

(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person's intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette

16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

NOTICE: Please note that the arrangements for publication of lectures in the Gazette has changed. A supplement listing lectures, published termly in the eighth week, will replace weekly notices of lectures. Only those lectures not received in time for inclusion in the supplement will be printed subsequently in the Gazette. All lectures will appear only once in the Gazette. Please make every effort to send lecture notices to the Gazette at least two weeks prior to publication of the eighth week issue for inclusion in the supplement. As the intention is for the supplement to provide a pull-out referral for each term's lectures, inclusion in the supplement will be an advantage.

Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences

Weldon Memorial Lecture

Professor David Spiegelhalter, Winton Professor of the Public Understanding of Risk, Cambridge, and Senior Scientist, MRC Biostatistics Unit, will deliver the Weldon Memorial Lecture at 5 p.m. on Monday, 8 November, in Lecture Theatre A, Tinbergen Building, South Parks Road.

Subject: 'Personal risk and scientific uncertainty—what's the connection?'

Department of Plant Sciences research seminars

The following seminars will be given at 4 p.m. on Thursdays in the Large Lecture Theatre, Department of Plant Sciences.

Convener: Professor Nicholas Harberd.

Dr Matthew Paul, Rothamsted Research
14 Oct.: 'How do sugars regulate plant growth?'

Professor Stephen D. Hopper, Director, Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew
21 Oct.: 'Old landscapes reveal new perspectives on biological evolution, ecology and conservation.'

Dr Rosalind Rickaby
28 Oct.: 'Photosynthesis, feedbacks and fluctuations in climate.'

Dr Robert Scotland
4 Nov.: 'Herbaria are the major frontier for species discovery.'

Professor Kim Nasmyth
11 Nov.: 'How does cohesion hold sister DNAs together for several decades in oocytes?'

Dr Vicki L. Chandler, Arizona
18 Nov.: 'Paramutation: transfer of epigenetic information across generations.'

Professor Alain Goriely
25 Nov.: 'Old and new problems in the mechanics of plants.'

Dr Bernd Degen, Institute of Forest Genetics, Germany
2 Dec.: 'Reducing illegal logging in the tropics by timber tracking with DNA fingerprints.'

Computational mathematics and applications seminars

The following seminars will be given at 2 p.m. on Thursdays in Seminar Room RI.0.48, Gibson Building, except the final two lectures, which will be given at Rutherford Appleton Laboratory near Didcot.

Conveners: L.N. Trefethen, A.J. Wathen and S. Thorne.

Professor Arieh Iserles, Cambridge
7 Oct.: 'A fast and simple algorithm for the computation of Legendre coefficients.'

Professor Klaus Boehmer, Philipps University, Marburg
14 Oct.: 'A nonlinear discretisation theory with applications to meshfree methods.'

Professor Axel Voight, Dresden UT
21 Oct.: 'Diffuse interface models for two-phase flow.'

Professor Yvan Notay, Libre, Brussels
28 Oct.: 'Algebraic multigrid with guaranteed convergence rate.'

Professor Eric de Sturler, Virginia Tech
4 Nov.: 'The convergence behaviour of BiCG.'

Professor Jean-Paul Berrut, Fribourg
11 Nov.: 'Applications of linear barycentric rational interpolation at equidistant points.'

Mr Andreas Potschka, Heidelberg
18 Nov.: 'Optimisation with time-periodic PDE constraints: numerical methods and applications.'

Dr Vanessa Styles, Sussex
25 Nov.: 'Primal-dual active set methods for solving non-local Allen-Cahn systems.'

Dr Julian Hall, Edinburgh
2 Dec.: 'A high performance dual revised simplex solver.'

23 Nov.: 'Evolution of computation needs for Earth observation.'

Jon Blower, Reading e-Science Centre
30 Nov.: 'Visualisation and intercomparison of environmental data on the Web using 4D GIS.'

Physical chemistry seminars

The following seminars will be held at 2.15 p.m. on Mondays in PTCL Large Lecture Theatre, unless otherwise stated. All welcome.

Conveners: Professor P.J. Hore and Dr S. Mackenzie.

Dr Michele Vendruscolo, Cambridge
11 Oct.: 'Protein structure determination using NMR chemical shifts.'

Professor John Pyle, Cambridge
18 Oct.: 'Halogens in the atmosphere: an update.'

Professor Tim Jones, Warwick
25 Oct.: 'Organic Solar Cells: The Importance of Controlling Interfaces.'

Dr Arzhang Ardavan
1 Nov.: 'Mott-insulator-related physics in organic molecular metals and superconductors.'

Professor Hagan Bayley
8 Nov.: 'Engineered protein nanopores for biotechnology.'

Dr Mark Newton, Warwick
15 Nov.: 'Taming Defects in Diamond.'

Prof Ian Smith, Cambridge
29 Nov.: 'The Elusive HO₃ Radical: Kinetics of Formation, Thermodynamics and Atmospheric Role.'

Theoretical chemistry group seminars

The following seminars will be given at 4.45 p.m. on Mondays in the John Rowlinson Seminar Room (20.12), opposite the PTCL Main Lecture Theatre. All welcome.

Convener: Dr M. Wilson.

Dr Ard Louis
18 Oct.: 'Modelling the self-assembly of protein quaternary structure, virus capsids and DNA nanostructures.'

Professor John McGrady
1 Nov.: 'Mechanistic Insights from Computational Inorganic Chemistry.'

Dr David Cooper, Liverpool
15 Nov.: 'Visual descriptions of correlated electronic structure in molecules.'

Dr Matthew Turner, Warwick
29 Nov.: 'Active Membranes.'

Solid Mechanics and Materials Engineering Group Seminar Series

Seminars will take place at 2 p.m. on Mondays in Lecture Room 8, IEB.

Nien-Ti Tsu
11 Oct.: 'Compatible domain structures in ferroelectric single crystal.'

Professor Nicola Marzari

18 Oct.: 'Engineering thermal transport from first-principles.'

Professor Paul Hazel, Cranfield

25 Oct.: 'Measuring the shock and impact response of materials.'

Professor John Hogan, Bristol

1 Nov.: Title to be confirmed.

Professor James Marrow

8 Nov.: 'New Techniques for In-situ Observation of Cracking.'

Dr Mithila Achintha

15 Nov.: 'Eigenstrain modelling of residual stresses generated by laser shock peening.'

Dr Daniele Dini, Imperial College

22 Nov.: Title to be confirmed.

Dr Zhong You

29 Nov.: Title to be confirmed.

Mathematical Biology and Ecology Seminars

The seminars are held on Fridays, 2 p.m., in Lecture Room 1 (unless otherwise stated) at the Mathematical Institute. For correspondence and further details, please contact Sara Jolliffe (email: cmb@maths.ox.ac.uk).

Prof Neil Ferguson (Division of Epidemiology, Public Health and Primary Care, Imperial College, London)

15 Oct.: 'Modelling the 2009 H1N1 Swine Flu pandemic: conclusions and lessons learned.'

Dr John MacKenzie (Dept of Maths and Statistics, University of Strathclyde)

29 Oct.: 'Modelling cell motility and chemotaxis using pseudopod-based feedback.'

Prof Kevin Burrage (Computational Biology, Computing Laboratory)

12 Nov.: 'Coping with heterogeneity: from cells to tissue.'

Prof Ray Goldstein (Dept of Applied Maths and Theoretical Physics, University of Cambridge)

26 Nov.: 'Microfluidics of cytoplasmic streaming.'

Medical SciencesWellcome Trust Centre for Human Genetics*MICHAEL DAVYS LECTURE IN NEUROSCIENCE

Professor Maria Karayiorgou, Professor of Psychiatry, Columbia University Medical Centre, will deliver the Michael Davys

Lecture in Neuroscience at 5 p.m. on Monday, 11 October, in the Lecture Theatre, Medical Science Teaching Centre, South Parks Road. All are welcome.

Convener: Professor Jonathan Flint.

Subject: 'Linking DNA structural variation to brain dysfunction and schizophrenia.'

Oxford Biomedical Imaging Festival

The Oxford Biomedical Imaging Festival will be held on Wednesday, 13 October, at St John's College. The festival is aimed at gathering together biomedical imaging scientists across the University and partner NHS hospitals, working from microscopy to radiology. Registration is free to University of Oxford biomedical imaging community members and to NHS partners. For details and to register, visit www.imaging.ox.ac.uk.

Ludwig Institute for Cancer ResearchSPECIAL SEMINAR

Professor Fiona Watt, Cancer Research UK Cambridge Research Institute, will deliver the following seminar at 3 p.m. on Friday, 26 November, in the Lecture Theatre, Richard Doll Building, Old Road Research Campus.

Subject: 'How intercellular signalling regulates stem cell fate in adult epidermis.'

SIGNALLING PATHWAYS AND GENETICS OF CANCER SEMINARS

The following seminars will be given at 11 a.m. on Wednesdays in the Ludwig/Jenner Seminar Room, lower ground floor, Old Road Campus Research Building.

Dr Janine Erler, Institute of Cancer Research

13 Oct.: 'Lysyl oxidases in metastasis mediated by the tumour microenvironment.'

Professor Christopher Garland

17 Nov.: 'Endothelial cells, hyperpolarisation and vascular dilatation.'

Oxford Biomedical Research Centre/ Research ServicesRESEARCH INTEGRITY LUNCHTIME SEMINARS

The following seminars will be given at 1 p.m. on Mondays in the Lecture Theatre, Richard Doll Building, Old Road Campus. All are welcome.

Professor Douglas Altman

11 Oct.: 'EQUATOR network—promoting transparent and accurate reporting of research studies.'

Changes in Regulations

The General Purposes Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 22 October.

WAINWRIGHT FUND

Explanatory Note

These changes, approved by the board of management of the Wainwright Fund, open the competition for the Gerald Averay Wainwright Prizes up to any student at any school in the UK (previously 'any boy or girl at any school of which the head is a member of the Headmasters' Conference or of the Secondary Heads' Association'); and the length of the essay is reduced from 'not less than 5,000 words' to not less than 3,000 words. The changes also revise outdated terminology.

Text of Regulations

In Part 2 of Council Regulations 25 of 2002, concerning trusts (Statutes, 2000, p. 663, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, and renumbered by the changes published on 14 November 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1461; Vol. 133, p. 404), delete existing § 363 and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

'§ 363. Wainwright Fund

1. (a) The gift (hereinafter called the 'original gift') of £4,000, together with any further donations for this purpose, shall be incorporated in the Trusts Pool and shall be called the Gerald Averay Wainwright Fund;

(b) ~~the Curators of the University Chest shall be authorized to accept gifts for the same purposes, and to treat them, subject to any conditions laid down by the donors, as if they were part of the original gift.~~

2. (a1) There shall be a board of management (hereinafter called 'the board') composed of the following persons:

(i) ex officio:

(1a) the Vice-Chancellor;

(2b) the Keeper of the Department of Antiquities in the Ashmolean Museum;

(3c) the Director of the Pitt Rivers Museum;

(iia)-(f) (4)-(6) three ~~mature~~ scholars specializing in the archaeology of the Near East;

(iiig)-(h) (7)-(8) one or two persons co-opted by the board.

(b2) When a vacancy occurs on the board (other than among the ex officio members) it shall be filled by co-optation by the remaining members of the board, subject to the condition that at least two of the persons described in ~~sub-clause~~regulation 2(a1) (iia)-(f) above and at least one of those co-opted under ~~sub-clause~~regulation 2(a1) (iiig)-(h) above shall not be members of Congregation; provided that any co-opted member who may become a member of Congregation during his or her term of office shall not be required to resign.

(e3) Co-opted members shall serve for five years and shall be re-eligible.

3. (a1) There shall be offered for competition annually a prize or prizes, called the Gerald Averay Wainwright Prizes, for the best essay submitted by any ~~boy or girl~~student at any school of which the head is a member of the Headmasters' Conference or of the Secondary Heads' Association ~~in the United Kingdom~~.

The board may award prizes, to be apportioned among the candidates according to its discretion, of such value as the board may from time to time determine.

The board may, in addition, make payments for meritorious work to candidates other than the prize winners.

(b2) The prize shall be spent on some object or objects approved by the board in furtherance of archaeological studies, which objects may include travel, museum study, and the purchase of books.

(e3) The subjects of the essays which shall be chosen by the candidates themselves shall relate to the non-classical antiquity of the Near East. They shall consist of not less than 5,000 ~~3,000~~ words and shall include maps and illustrations.

(d4) The board shall appoint examiners to judge the entries. The prize shall be awarded by the board on the recommendation of the examiners.

(e5) The board may pay such reasonable remuneration to the examiners as the Vice-Chancellor and Proctors may approve, and may also incur expenditure from time to time in giving public notice of the prize.

4. The first charges on the fund shall be

(a1) the necessary expenses of administration of the fund, which may include the reimbursement of out-of-pocket expenses incurred by members of the board in the discharge of their duties, and

(b2) the maintenance of the prizes in accordance with the provisions of ~~clause~~regulation 3 above.

5. Whenever, in the opinion of the board, the annual income of the fund remaining after the award of a prize is sufficient, the board shall offer (in accordance with ~~clauses~~regulations 6-8 below) one or more research fellowships, to be called the 'Gerald Averay Wainwright Research Fellowships'.

6. Any income remaining after the obligations imposed on the board by ~~clauses~~regulations 3-5 above have been met shall be available to the board for the making of grants at its absolute discretion for the furtherance of the study of the archaeology of the Near East.

7. The board of management shall have power to award fellowships and prizes on such terms and conditions, not inconsistent with the terms of this ~~decree~~regulation, as it shall deem fit.

8. Candidates for a fellowship shall normally be resident in the United Kingdom.

9. Council shall have power at any time to alter, at the suggestion of the board, the provisions of this ~~decree~~regulation provided that the intentions of the donor as expressed in the recitals shall be observed.'

Notices

Consultative notices

All Souls: revised statutes

The committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the revised Statutes of All Souls College, approved by the Governing Body at meetings on 13 June 2009 and 12 June 2010, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7 (2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendments to the Statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least twenty members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 18 October.

The effects of the amendments are to remove inconsistencies and errors arising from previous amendments; to clarify the expectations and requirements of Examination Fellows; to make changes to certain Fellows' retirement age; to update pension and accounting record arrangements; to ensure that the Warden and Fellows have full statutory authority for all benefits payable to or on behalf of the Warden and certain groups of Fellows; to provide for the establishment of a Remuneration Committee; to introduce a requirement to observe the College Conflict of Interest Policy and Code; and generally to improve the governance of the College in accordance with Charity Commission guidance.

Queen's: revised statutes

The committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the revised Statutes of the Queen's College approved by the Governing Body on 5 and 26 May 2010, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7 (2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendments to the Statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least twenty members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 18 October.

The effects of the amendments are to update the existing statutes of the college after the first major review by the college for many years. The revisions include the introduction of a statement of objects and of procedures to ensure compliance with changes relating to the responsibilities of trustees of registered charities. Numerous provisions relating to day-to-day administration of the college have been updated.

St Anne's: revised statutes

The committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the revised Statutes of St Anne's College, approved by the Governing Body at meetings on 22 April 2009 and 16 June 2010, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7 (2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendments to the Statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least twenty members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 18 October.

The effects of the amendments, which follow a major review by the college, are to restate the charitable objects of the college in simple language and to make provision for a new class of independent trustee and a remuneration committee. Further revisions ensure compliance with changes relating to the responsibilities of trustees of registered charities and changes in employment legislation.

Wadham: revised statutes

The committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to a revised Statute of Wadham College, approved by the Governing Body at a meeting on 21 July 2010, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7 (2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendments to the Statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least twenty members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 18 October.

The effects of the amendments are to make changes to the Statute which deals with the Wardenship of the college.

Review of Conference: Joint Planning and Decision Making

The Conference of Colleges is conducting a review of the reforms made to Conference and its committees in 2007. This review will look at how that report's recommendations have been implemented, but will also look more broadly at how effectively Conference is carrying out its roles of enabling colleges to work together effectively and to engage collectively and constructively with the university. A questionnaire is available on the Conference website www.confcoll.ox.ac.uk, and the review group, chaired by Lord Krebs, would like to invite anyone with an interest to complete the questionnaire, which should take no longer than five minutes.

Responses should be sent to Tabitha Schenk in the Conference Secretariat (tabitha.schenk@admin.ox.ac.uk, or at the University Offices, Wellington Square) by Friday 22 October 2010.

Examinations and Boards

Changes to Regulations

1. Humanities Divisional Board

Subject to the approval of the Humanities Divisional Board and the Education Committee, the following changes in special regulations are made:

BACHELOR OF THEOLOGY

With effect from 1 October 2010 (for first examination in 2011)

1. In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 466, l. 40, delete '4-5' and substitute '9-10'.

2. Ibid., l. 41, delete '11-15' and substitute '7-11'.

3. Ibid., l. 41, delete '4-5' and substitute '9-10'.

4. Ibid., l. 42, delete '11-12' and substitute '7-8'.

2. Social Sciences Divisional Board

(A) MPHIL IN POLITICS (COMPARATIVE GOVERNMENT, POLITICAL THEORY, EUROPEAN POLITICS AND SOCIETY)

With effect from 1 October 2010 (for first examination in 2011)

1. In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 573, l. 29 after '(af)-(ag)' insert ', (ai)'.

2. Ibid., l. 31 after '(s)-(ab)' insert ', (ah)'.

3. Ibid., l. 33 after '(e)-' delete '(ah)' and substitute '(ag), (ai)'.

4. In Examination Regulations, 2009, as amended in the Gazette, 22 April 2010, p. 857, column 2 (l), after 'study of legislatures' insert:

'(ah) Kant's Political Philosophy

The course will address all aspects of Kant's political philosophy, including its relation to his moral philosophy. Specifically, it will look at his theory of the formation of the state, the nature of law and constitution, the role of social contract, his rather authoritarian view of political obligation, his conception of citizenship, his theory of property, his theory of international law and international relations, and his cosmopolitanism. There will be some discussion of the roots of Kant's political philosophy in the work of Jean-Jacques Rousseau and also of the influence of his political philosophy in the twentieth century, particularly in the work of John Rawls.

(ai) Political Economy of Inequality and Democracy

This course will introduce MPhil students to some of the major topics related to the political economy of inequality, politics, institutions and redistribution. It is organized around a framework that emphasizes the relationship between equality and efficiency, the nature of inequality, the political causes and consequences of redistribution, and the relationship between inequality and democracy. Through reading, writing of discussion papers, and seminar participation, students will develop the relevant analytical skills to understand the relationships affecting individual preferences, political and economic institutions, and policy outcomes'.

(B) MSC IN APPLIED LINGUISTICS AND SECOND LANGUAGE ACQUISITION

With effect from 1 October 2010 (for first examination in 2011)

In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 679, l. 40, after 'subject' insert 'and title'.

(C) MSC IN EDUCATIONAL RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

With effect from 1 October 2010 (for first examination in 2011)

1. In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 706, delete ll. 4-8 and substitute:

'2. Every candidate will be required to complete the four elements of the course as listed in the schedule below, and candidates shall be examined in accordance with the schedule below. Candidates undertake a two week research internship.

3. Every candidate will be required to satisfy the examiners in the following:

1. Satisfactory attendance at the appropriate classroom-based courses;
2. Satisfactory performance in both Part 1 and Part 2'.

2. Ibid., delete ll. 17-20 and substitute:

'phy), the title to be selected in consultation with the supervisor, on a topic relevant to the subject of the course. The subject and title selected by the candidate must be approved by the Departmental Board not later than the first day of the fifth week of Hilary Term in the year in which they complete the written examination'.

3. Ibid., delete ll. 32-3 and substitute:

'8. Candidates shall be deemed to have passed the examination if they have satisfied the examiners in both Part 1 and Part 2. If Part 1 is failed, the candidate may retake the whole examination of Part 1 one further time on the next occasion when this is examined. If Part 2 is failed, the candidate may resubmit the dissertation one further time on the next occasion when this is examined.

9. The examiners may award a distinction for excellence in the whole examination'.

(D) MSC IN EDUCATION

With effect from 1 October 2010 (for first examination in 2011)

1. In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 707 delete l. 29, and renumber subsequent paragraphs accordingly.

2. Ibid., delete l. 30 and substitute:

'2. Every candidate will be required to complete the three elements of the course and candidates shall be examined in'.

3. Ibid., after 'below' delete "The dissertation will be 15,000-20,000 words long on a topic to be approved by the Departmental Board." and substitute:

'3. Every candidate will be required to satisfy the examiners in the following:

1. Satisfactory attendance at the appropriate classroom-based courses;
2. Satisfactory performance in both part 1 and Part 2'.

4. Ibid., delete ll. 44-8 and substitute:

'2. Candidates will be required to submit a dissertation of 15,000-20,000 words (including footnotes/endnotes but excluding appendices and references or bibliography), the title to be selected in consultation with the supervisor, on a topic relevant to the subject of the course. The subject and title selected by the candidate must be approved by the Departmental Board not later than the first day of the fifth week in Hilary Term in the year in which they complete the written examination.’

5. Ibid., p. 708, delete ll. 9–12 and substitute:

‘7. Candidates may also be required to attend an oral examination. The oral examination may be on the candidate’s written papers, dissertation, or both. Candidates shall be deemed to have passed the examination if they have satisfied the examiners in both Part 1 and Part 2. If Part 1 is failed, the candidate may retake the whole examination of Part 1 one further time on the next occasion when this is examined. Post: Gazette Advertisements,
Public Affairs Directorate,
University Offices,
Wellington Square,
Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline

Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges

Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £20 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in 'Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements' below.)

External advertisers: £25 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.

For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length

The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment

Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit-card or debit-card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

Note. Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the web-site. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque

Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note. Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency. If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General

1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be e-mailed automatically to the e-mail address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges

6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at <http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm>.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer

7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers' Warranty and Indemnity

13. The advertiser warrants:

(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.

(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person's intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements.

Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette

16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

Miscellaneous

Sheltered housing

Wyndham Housing Association provides sheltered housing for the elderly who wish to be relieved of the burden of general housekeeping and property maintenance. We offer flats to rent or buy for those who wish to live active, independent lives surrounded by their own possessions. As a small, non-profit organisation, we are able to work closely with residents and families to ensure each resident's needs are met. Contact: 01865 511239, www.wyndhamhousing.org.

Research participants sought

Are you pregnant? Would you like to take part in a research project? The Department of Psychiatry at Oxford University is looking for women who are between 12 and 16 weeks pregnant to take part in a short research project. It would take approximately 2 hours of your time. For more information contact: prenatal@psych.ox.ac.uk or 01865 223916.

Oxford University Newcomers' Club

The Oxford University Newcomers' Club

at the University Club, 11 Mansfield Rd, OX1 3SZ, welcomes the wives, husbands or partners of visiting scholars, of graduate students and of newly appointed academic members of the University. We offer help, advice, information and the opportunity to meet others socially. Informal coffee mornings are held in the Club every Wed. 10.30–12 from 0th week to 9th week, both inclusive. Newcomers with children (0–4) meet every Fri. in term 10.15–11.45. We have a large programme of events including tours of colleges, museums and other places of interest. Other term-time activities include an art group, book group, informal conversation group, garden group, antiques group and an opportunity to explore Oxfordshire. Visit our website: <http://sites.google.com/site/oxforduniversitynewcomersclub/>.

Gazette Supplement

Oration by the Vice-Chancellor

The University Challenge

When I spoke briefly to Congregation on this day a year ago, I had the strong sensation that my feet had barely touched the ground. I hope this confession will seem both understandable and pardonable given that I had been officially in office as Vice-Chancellor for all of five minutes. Yet when I look back now over an exhilarating first twelve months, and more importantly when I look ahead to the months and years to come, it strikes me that there was perhaps something prophetic about that initial sensation. For though my feet have certainly become fully grounded in the terrain of Oxford, a great deal about the world of higher education remains up in the air.

This is a critical and hugely challenging time for universities in this country and I want, this morning, to reflect with you a little on what that means for Oxford and for its place in the world. I speak of Oxford's place in the world advisedly, because my conviction has grown ever stronger over the last year that the future health and prosperity of Oxford as a great university is intimately connected to its international character, achievement, and ambition. I do not mean by this that we will become any less committed to nurturing and developing the academic potential of the most able young people in the UK. But it does mean, I believe, that unless we are able to continue to provide an academic environment and resources to compete with the best in the world, we will not be able to offer those students what they deserve and have rightly come to expect from a university with Oxford's reputation. We successfully attract internationally recognised academics and researchers, who create the learning environment which attracts outstanding students to apply. So Oxford's role in Britain and its place in the world are, I believe, deeply intertwined. If one were to suffer, the other would also be at risk.

It is easy to lose sight of just how international Oxford has become. I know from my own experience working in the US that many universities in North America have developed internationalisation programmes. By contrast, Oxford seems to be international in its very fabric. From the arrival of Emo of Friesland in 1190 to the hundreds of international students I met at their orientation events just last week, this university has a proud history of serious engagement with the wider world. More than a third of our students and academic staff come from overseas, hailing from over 140 different countries and territories. At the postgraduate level, the figure is even higher: six out of ten full-time graduate students come from outside the UK. Anyone who, like me, attended the student union international festival at the Examination Schools in February, will have received a graphic illustration of modern Oxford and its extraordinary range of artistic, cultural and—indeed—culinary traditions. And Oxford is not just a global magnet for outstanding academic talent, at staff as well as student level; it also attracts increasing amounts of research income from international sources. Last year the figure was about one pound in every five. Oxford is truly a university of the world, for the world.

When I spoke a moment ago of things being 'up in the air', I might, I suppose, have been referring to the lot of the modern-day vice-chancellor, certainly to the lot of the vice-chancellor of a university with a world-wide reputation. And while it is the case that I have become happily rooted in the richly fertile academic soil of Oxford, that has not prevented me from spending a good deal of the last twelve months at about thirty-eight thousand feet above sea level. Oxford's reputation goes before it and keeping up with it can be a demanding business. It is also an immensely rewarding one—not least in the opportunity it provides to meet Oxford alumni and to hear their accounts of what this University meant and continues to mean to them, often many years later. Our old members are one very real and valuable expression of Oxford in the world.

International travel also provides insight into another aspect of Oxford's international character—its collaborations and fieldwork overseas. In the area of global health, for example, one can point to Oxford's tropical medical research laboratories in Thailand, Vietnam and Kenya, and to other outposts in Laos, Indonesia and China. Projects like these are living examples of the practical difference Oxford can and does make to people's lives in places where that help is so sorely needed.

But if travelling the globe on behalf of the University can cement a sense of positive achievement and of significant contribution to the common good, it also provides a powerful antidote to any tendency towards complacency. International competition in the world of higher education has never been fiercer. For obvious reasons, I have extensive first-hand knowledge of both the achievements and the continuing aspirations of our peer institutions in North America. But travel over the last year has also left me in no doubt that the competition is increasingly on a global, not just a transatlantic, scale. One only has to look at the higher education trends and ambitions in countries such as China and India to realise that resting on one's laurels would mean only that they wither and die.

It may come as a relief to hear that I intend to resist the temptation this morning to offer a detailed statistical analysis of comparative levels of national investment in higher education. It is a sad fact, however, that the most recent figures put the share of our own national GDP at below the OECD average. This seems to me to be quite inadequate and seriously ill advised, given that higher education is one of the most important investments in the future that a country can make. It is an observation that holds true in my mind whatever the government of the day and with or without an economic downturn.

While on the subject of national investment in higher education, I do want to focus a bit on where the money comes from—in other words, private or public funds. It will not surprise you, I suspect, to learn that the country at the top of the OECD list is the United States, or that the majority of the money there is from private sources. Philanthropy in the United States has long underpinned the resource-rich environment of the upper reaches of American higher education. Much has been written and said about the need for us in the UK to learn from and follow the American example. I don't necessarily dispute that much-repeated mantra but I would add that, having now had first-hand experience on both sides of the Atlantic, I have been genuinely impressed by what Oxford has already achieved. The Oxford Thinking campaign is fast approaching the total of £1bn across the collegiate University, a truly impressive sum to reach in little more than two years of the active phase of the campaign, and especially against a forbidding economic backdrop. Just two weeks ago we had the pleasure of formally launching the Blavatnik School of Government. This project will make possible the realisation of a long-cherished Oxford dream, thanks to the extraordinary generosity of Len Blavatnik who was able to join us for the launch. During the year we also benefited from a remarkable matched-funding initiative from James Martin, whose earlier generosity founded the Oxford Martin School, as it is newly renamed, that focuses on twenty-first-century global challenges. Not every gift, of course, can be transformative for the University in the way that these promise to be. But every gift regardless of size is received with genuine gratitude and a sense of humility. Each gift adds to the pool of resources from which the University seeks to secure the present and build the future. Each also represents a tangible vote of confidence in what Oxford has been and what it aspires to be.

It was that recently beatified Oxford don, John Henry Newman, who did much to shape our modern understanding of universities and their purpose. In his influential work, The Idea of a University, Newman wrote: 'A University is a place ... whither students come from every quarter for every kind of knowledge ... a place for the communication and circulation of thought, by means of personal intercourse ... It is a place where inquiry is pushed forward ... discoveries verified and perfected and ...

error exposed by the collision of mind with mind ... and knowledge with knowledge.' Formulated one hundred and fifty years ago, that remains an attractive template for what universities are all about. But it does not mean, of course, that all universities are the same. They come in many shapes and sizes and with diverse understandings of their particular place and role in the broader higher education landscape. One way in which universities have increasingly been categorised in recent decades is in relation to whether their primary focus is on teaching or on research. In many ways this is a false distinction. The great universities of the world flourish through their ability to link the progress of research with its impact on teaching; linked, in the words of Louis Pasteur, 'as the fruit and the tree that bears it'. Those of us who toil in the groves of academe know full well that our research helps inform our teaching as we lay out to students the shifting boundaries of knowledge. And our teaching, probed and challenged by bright students, brings new perspective and direction to our research questions. For the students, whether graduate students in our libraries and laboratories or undergraduates in our classrooms and tutorials, there is no educational experience more profound than being taught by those who themselves are repositioning those intellectual boundaries. It is one of the great glories of Oxford that it aspires to do both its teaching and research to an exceptional standard.

Oxford research can stand comparison with the best in the world and a large part of the University's international standing is built upon it. In recent times there has been eye-catching growth in Oxford's research activity, in terms of both staff and income. But, in the current economic climate, funding for research in all areas of scholarship is threatened as rarely before. The Government's recent invitation to do more research with fewer resources has received an understandably cool reception. At the same time a government commitment to focus resources on areas of research excellence may hold out more hope for universities of the calibre of Oxford.

But what then of Oxford as a teaching rather than research institution? It's worth noting that teaching is something we do a great deal more of than our peer institutions in the United States. Oxford has more than twice as many full-time undergraduates, for example, as my old university, Yale, and the ratio isn't vastly different in relation to Harvard. The teaching responsibilities of Oxford academics are significantly larger than those of their disciplinary peers at Yale and Harvard. But it is not just a matter of numbers. Teaching as an activity is surely where the historic understanding of the University has rested for much of its nine-hundred-year history. It is from Oxford's collegiate structure and tutorial system, with the emphasis on individual and personalised learning that the public understanding of the distinctive quality and character of Oxford (and of Cambridge, too) has been formed. The excitement, challenge and—yes—sometimes the fear of the tutorial, are by all accounts something that stays with our students long after they have left the University. And of course the key ingredient in that experience are the tutors themselves, whose own research and deep knowledge of their subjects informs and shapes the student experience in both tutorials and other small group settings. It was Newman again who described evocatively the university as a 'place where the professor becomes eloquent, and is a missionary and preacher, displaying his science in the most complete and most winning form, pouring it forth with the zeal of enthusiasm and lighting up his own love of it, in the breasts of his hearers.' I'm particularly fond of that last line!

It is no secret that this form of education does not come cheap. The full cost of teaching an undergraduate student at Oxford is estimated at about £16,000 per year, which means that when you subtract the contribution made by tuition fees and public funding, the annual deficit per undergraduate every year of their Oxford career is about £8,000. You might say the size of the gap is matched only by the strength of our conviction that this is a system that works uniquely well. It is a conviction, tried, tested—and yes, refined—by long and productive experience. Given that we think it is the best way to nurture maturing minds, the challenge clearly is to make it more financially sustainable. Of course, we need to continue to examine whether we are doing it as cost-effectively as possible. The current review of teaching will help us to understand in a more complete way the full extent of our tutorial offering, with a view to ensuring that we use the resources as effectively as we can. But we also need to be extremely vigilant about maintaining its quality. The one thing that Oxford really cannot afford to do is to sacrifice excellence—this would be an utterly false economy. So we need to continue to use and develop other ways of plugging as well as narrowing the funding gap. One coping strategy—as the jargon has it—that we have been using is internal cross-subsidies. But this is something that carries its own price. The negative effects are already starting to show: in recurrent deficits, in the underfunding of Oxford's infrastructure, and, most worryingly for our competitive position relative to our North American peers, in the scale of our endowment and our support for doctoral students. We should not fool ourselves that such a strategy is any kind of long-term cure and even as a palliative it is one that, as I have indicated, involves increasingly unacceptable side-effects.

I mentioned earlier that a large proportion of investment in higher education in the United States comes from private as opposed to public sources: two-thirds, in fact, compared with one-third in the UK. Here at Oxford it is clear that the generosity of our benefactors is going to play an increasingly important part in meeting the intense challenge of supporting our outstanding teaching. And that is true at graduate as well as undergraduate level. As an illustration of the high demand for graduate student places, the number of applications for graduate study has risen from 17,510 in 2009–10, to over 20,000 for those wishing to study in 2010–11. This year the University has launched a dedicated fund that will channel philanthropic support into developing more graduate scholarships for both UK and international students. The fund will augment initiatives already in place. It is vital that we are able to attract the best graduate students nationally and internationally in what is a growing and highly competitive market. In helping to develop their potential we are helping to nurture the outstanding teachers and researchers of the future.

When it comes to the funding of undergraduate teaching this is obviously an area where—to return to my point of departure in this speech—we are very much 'up in the air', though Lord Browne and his Independent Review of Higher Education Funding and Student Finance are due to land (one suspects with a bump) any day now, closely followed by the results of the government's Comprehensive Spending Review. The air traffic controllers of higher education are going to need their wits about them. In Oxford's own submissions to the Browne Review, we put forward a model which would not, we believe, involve additional burdens on the public purse in this period of austerity in the public finances. At the same time, we believe this model would secure vital investment for universities, while safeguarding educational excellence and student participation. Under the system we advocate, a university would be able to raise fees over time, in step with robust arrangements to ensure student affordability. Study would remain free at the point of access and, as now, graduates would not start to repay fees until an earnings threshold had been exceeded and then at a rate directly linked to income. Our proposals to the Browne Review have been based on the understanding that a funding structure that makes sense for Oxford, in allowing it to support its distinctive teaching and world competitiveness, must not damage other parts of the UK higher education sector. But, conversely, we are clear that any other structure that might find favour should not put at risk the ability of the leading universities in the UK to retain their pre-eminent positions.

It will be interesting and instructive to see at last what Lord Browne has made of it all; and possibly even more interesting to see what the politicians make of Lord Browne. As for timescale, the coalition government has recently indicated that a new Higher Education Bill is likely next autumn, with the target of implementing whatever reforms are agreed by the academic year 2012–13. Given all the uncertainty and unpredictability of the situation, it would be both foolhardy and ill advised for me to try to second guess what the higher education terrain will look like at ground level by then. In any case, institutions with a nine-hundred-year history need and expect to take a longer view. So returning to my aerial perspective for a moment may prove more productive and more useful. It seems to me highly improbable—all right then, inconceivable—that the funding gap in our teaching costs is going to be closed overnight. However, if our model or something like it were advocated by Browne and accepted by Parliament, then over time we could hope to travel progressively in that direction. We have made clear, as I have already indicated, that if we are going to come closer to covering the real costs of our teaching then this cannot be at the expense of our strong commitments on student access. We continue to expend huge amounts of time and effort and considerable amounts of money on these activities. No one who witnessed the extraordinary buzz of the UNIQ summer school programme, for example, could fail to be impressed by the strength of commitment on all sides—staff, volunteers, and potential students. Such projects are important because we believe that promoting equality of opportunity is fundamental to a civilised society. But we also run them out of self-interest. As a university, we aspire to be the best and to attract the most talented students wherever and wherever they are. Financial barriers to them are also barriers to our own aspirations and ambitions. If we are going to charge more, we need to help more.

So in future it seems to me that we are going to have to ensure that support—for student bursaries and scholarships, at both undergraduate and graduate level, and for teaching—plays a much bigger role in our fundraising activity. I have seen this at close quarters in the United States and my strong sense is that our well-wishers and benefactors, large and small, will be prepared to identify with and respond to such a priority here at Oxford. In the next few months, as the highly successful Oxford Thinking Campaign passes the £1bn milestone, it will be time to come together across the collegiate University to plan a new phase, a recalibration, of the Campaign: a recalibration that will set new aspirations for sustaining Oxford's research and teaching pre-eminence in a changed financial landscape. This is something that aligns the very real interests of all parts of the collegiate University. And these are the ambitious goals that I know we can achieve if we, colleges and University, continue to work together.

Oxford is what it is because of the immense contributions of so many dedicated members of the academic and professional staff. Many of this year's achievements have been commented on by the Public Orator in his Creweian Oration, with considerably more eloquence than I can manage. But because of the international theme of this Oration, I should here—invidious as it may be to give specific examples when so many are worthy of comment—make note of the recently-announced 2010 Lasker Award for Special Achievement to Professor Sir David Weatherall; the award of the Légion d'Honneur to Professor Vernon Bogdanor and to Professor Sir David King; and the inaugural Onassis International Prize in Humanities for Sir John Boardman. Our students, too, have excelled in a wide range of activities. Just one example of these is the Vice-Chancellor's Civic Awards, made this year for the first time to six of our students for their activities ranging from local charities to national outreach work and to international climate change.

Although this has been an anxious year in terms of the public funding provided for Oxford's museums, rewards and plaudits have continued to come the way of our collections. In the spring, the University received the Queen's Anniversary Prize—for the seventh time in eight awarding rounds, and more often than any other institution—in recognition of the outstanding quality and public benefit of its museums, libraries and archives. Last autumn saw the final stages of the redevelopment, and the reopening by Her Majesty the Queen, of the Ashmolean Museum. The extension to the Ashmolean was nominated for the prestigious Stirling Prize of the Royal Institute of British Architects. The upper gallery of the Pitt Rivers Museum was reopened following refurbishment funded by the Heritage Lottery Fund, and the University's Museum of Natural History celebrated its 150th year, an anniversary that has coincided with the retirement of its director, Professor Jim Kennedy, who has done so much for the Museum and who in particular has furthered its outreach and public access work. Finally, the New Bodleian Library has received planning permission for its forthcoming transformation into the Weston Library, and the new book storage facility for the Bodleian Libraries, located just outside Swindon, is to be opened in two days' time.

I should like to thank publicly Dr Julie Maxton, who completes her term as Registrar in January and will take up a new role as Executive Director of the Royal Society. Dr Maxton has contributed much to the significant improvements within the administrative functions of the University over the past five years. She is to be succeeded by Professor Ewan McKendrick, currently Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Education, Academic Services and University Collections). There has been a number of changes of heads of house during or at the end of the past year. Sir Tim Lankester retired as President of Corpus Christi at the end of last Michaelmas Term, and has been succeeded by Professor Richard Cawardine. Professor Colin Bundy is succeeded by Sir David Watson as Principal of Green Templeton, and Mr Mark Damazer becomes Principal of St Peter's, in succession to Professor Bernard Silverman. This year sees the retirement of no fewer than four heads of house who have served as Pro-Vice-Chancellors without portfolio: Dame Averil Cameron is succeeded as Warden of Keble by Sir Jonathan Phillips; Dame Jessica Rawson by Sir Martin Taylor as Warden of Merton; Dame Fiona Caldicott by Dr Alice Prochaska as Principal of Somerville; and Professor Paul Slack by Dr Nick Brown as Principal of Linacre. I thank all four for their immense help over the past year, and for their service to the University, in a range of duties spanning many years. Dame Fiona has been succeeded in her role as Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Personnel and Equality) by Dr Sally Mapstone. I should note also my immense gratitude to Professor Michael Earl, who, as acting Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Development and External Affairs), stayed longer and worked harder than any new vice-chancellor has a right to expect. He is succeeded by Professor Nick Rawlins.

This year has also seen the retirement of many other distinguished colleagues who have contributed to the University's intellectual life over the years: Professor Douglas Abraham, Professor of Statistical Mechanics; Dr Ruth Barnes; Dr Peter Beverley; Professor Vernon Bogdanor, Professor of Politics and Government; Professor Sir Mike Brady, BP Professor of Information Engineering; Dr Lucy Carpenter, Reader in Statistical Epidemiology; Dr Peter Clifford, Reader in Mathematical Statistics; Professor Francis Close, Professor of Theoretical Physics; Dr David Cram; Professor Robin Devenish, Professor of Physics; Professor Arthur Dexter, Professor of Engineering Science; Professor John Finnis, Professor of Law and Legal Philosophy; Dr Kenneth Fleming, former Head of the Medical Sciences Division; Dr Martin Francis; Professor Michael Glazer, Professor of Physics; Dr Paul Griffiths; Dr Ann Hackmann; Mr Philip Healy; Professor Anthony Heath, Professor of Sociology; Dr Tim Horder; Mrs Janet Howarth; Professor Harold Jaffe, Professor of Public Health; Professor Richard Jenkyns, Professor of the Classical Tradition; Professor Jacob Klein, Dr Lee's Professor of Chemistry; Dr Mansur Lalljee; Dr Anthony Lemon; Professor Gary Lock, Professor of Archaeology (Computing and Statistical Methods); Dr Hugh Macmillan; Professor Henry McQuay, Nuffield Professor of Clinical Anaesthetics; Professor David Mant, Professor of General Practice; Mr Martin Matthews; Professor John Morris, Professor of Human Anatomy; Professor Andrew Neil, Professor of Clinical Epidemiology; Dr Michael Nicholson; Dr John Norbury; Professor John Ockendon, Professor of Mathematics; Professor David Pettifor, Isaac Wolfson Professor of Metallurgy; Dr Guo Ping; Professor Peter Renton, Professor of Physics; Mr Craig Raine; Professor Peter Raynes, Professor of Optoelectronic Engineering; Dr Julie Scott-Jackson; Ms Valerie Seagroatt; Professor John Sear, Professor of Anaesthetics; Professor David Sherratt, Iveagh Professor of Microbiology; Professor George Smith, Professor of Materials Science and George Kelley Reader; Dr Paul Smith, Reader in Engineering Science; Mr Bernard Sufrin; Professor John Sykes, Professor of Materials; Professor Kathy Silva, Professor of Educational Psychology; Dr Roger Tomlin; Dr Roger Trend; Dr Malcolm Vale; Professor Michael Vaughan-Lee, Professor of Mathematics; Professor Michael Vickers, Professor of Archaeology; Dr Roger Ward; Dr Helen Whitehouse; Mr Gavin Williams; and Professor Adrian Zuckerman, Professor of Civil Procedure. I mention with relief and eager anticipation of future Creweian Orations, that although Professor Jenkyns retires from his academic post, he continues as Public Orator.

A number of senior administrators have retired during the past year: Mr Roger Boning, formerly Director of Finance at OUP, from a second career as Head of Business Services and Projects; Ms Jennifer Wood as Director of Estates; Lady Kenny as Director of the Oxford University Society; Ms Lesley Sims as Head of the Planning and Resource Allocation Section; Dr Felicity Cooke as Head of the Equality and Diversity Unit; Mrs Sarah Wolfensohn as Head of Veterinary Services; and Ms Frances Barnwell, as Deputy Head of the Legal Services Office. In addition, I should note the retirement of Mr Martin Harrington after twenty-one years as editor of the Gazette. I understand that a number of vice-chancellors, in finalising their Orations, have had cause to be grateful for his skills.

I would also like to mention those other colleagues who have retired from valued administrative, library or service posts in the University: Dr Adrian Allsop, Ms Shirley Ashmore, Ms Sarah Ayers, Mr David Barnwell, Mrs Jennifer Beaton, Miss Alison Bird, Mrs Lorraine Bird, Ms Stella Brecknell, Mr Timothy Bruce, Mr Lou Burnard, Mrs Jean Clay, Mr Philip Cleary, Mr Geoff Clough, Mrs Grazyna Cooper, Mr Barry Cornelius, Mr Gordon Cunningham, Mr Peter Dobbs, Ms Christine Elliott, Mr Harry English, Ms Barbara Farrell, Mr Harry Fearnley, Mr Mike Field, Mrs Anne Flavell, Mr Ken Fowler, Mrs Wendy Fuggles, Mr Michael Gardner, Mr Richard Gaskell, Ms Ann Gavin, Dr Kit Goodwin-Bailey, Dr Anne Grocock, Mr Malcolm Harper, Mr Brian Harrison, Ms Kim Hart, Ms Gay Haskins, Mr Edwin Laming Macadam, Mr Raymond Leece, Mr Richard Lidwell, Ms Deborah Lisburne, Mrs Pilar McGillyCuddy, Mrs Judith McIntyre, Mr Angus McKendrick, Mr John Mason, Mrs Valerie Moar, Mr John Moffatt, Mrs Carole Newbigging, Mrs Margaret Okole, Mr Alan Peters, Mr Derek Reed, Mr David Rischmiller, Mrs Catherine Rowland, Ms Katherine Salahi, Mr Richard Saxton, Mr Christopher Scotcher, Ms Julie Sidebotham, Miss Ann Stedman, Mr Keith Thomas, Mr David Tilley, Dr Nick West, Mrs Jennifer Williams and Mr Fred Wondre.

This year the University community has lost colleagues whose early deaths have been a source of great sadness: Dr Joan Austoker, Director of the Primary Care Education Research Group; Dr John Barnett, Reader in Physics; Professor Elizabeth Fallaize, former Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Education) and Fellow of St John's; and Mrs Katie Haines, of the Public Affairs Directorate. I note also with great regret the recent death of the former High Steward, Lord Bingham of Cornhill.

Finally, we pause to remember the contributions of those colleagues who have died in retirement over the past year: Mrs Doris Beyer, Dr Martin Birch, Miss Grace Briggs, Sir Ian Brownlie, Mr Eric Buckley, Mr Dennis Burden, Professor John Burrow, Dr Charles Caine, Dr John Clarke, Professor Jerry Cohen, The Revd Herbert Cowdrey, Professor Alex Crampton-Smith, Mr Ian Crombie, Dr Tony Crowle, Sir Marrack Goulding, Dr Roger Hay, Dr Ronald Hingley, Professor Anthony Hopwood, Mrs Mary Hulin, Mr Austin Jones, Mr George Jones, Dr Richard Kindersley, Dr Elizabeth Lennox, Professor Sir Hugh Lloyd-Jones, Dr Pamela Mackinnon, Mrs Christine Martin, Dr Patrick Martineau, Dr John Mason, Mr George Melson, Dr Bruce Mitchell, Baroness Park of Monmouth, Professor Jack Pole, Lord Quinton of Holywell, Dr Robin Robbins, Mr Jim Sharpe, Mr Winfred Siertsema, Mrs Ann Smart, Mr Graham Spindler, Mrs Pamela Taylor, Mr Pat Thompson, Mr Roger Van Noorden, Mr Stephen Wall and Professor Michael Williams.

I began this speech setting Oxford in a world context and I want to conclude it in the same way. As I have noted, my travels over the past twelve months as Vice-Chancellor have been extensive. Wherever I have gone, Oxford has needed no introduction. It is what marketing people would call 'a global brand'—perhaps the top global brand in higher education. But a brand is nothing without top quality content. I hope and believe that those who regulate and shape the future of our higher education environment in the UK understand what an extraordinary asset our great universities represent in the world. I also hope and believe they will wish to accompany and support us at Oxford in our particular mission. But whatever the surrounding context, my aim and my duty will remain to do everything I can to ensure that Oxford remains among the very best universities in the world: a centre combining outstanding research and outstanding teaching, where the best and brightest staff and students from here in the UK, and from all over the globe, can develop new understanding and knowledge for the benefit of all. The means may, and probably will, alter over time but, let none of us doubt, the end remains the same.

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations

Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 29 October.

ESTABLISHMENT OF DEGREE OF MASTER OF COMPUTER SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY

Explanatory Note

Following approval of the establishment of the new degree of Master of Computer Science and Philosophy, the consequential changes below are being made to the regulations concerning academic precedence and standing.

Text of Regulations

1 In regulation 2.1 of Council Regulations 22 of 2002 concerning academic precedence and standing (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended on 14 June 2005 and 11 October 2005, Vol. 135, p. 1174, 16 June 2005; Vol. 139, p. 1004, 30 April 2009), after 'Master of Arts, or Master of Biochemistry or Chemistry or Computer Science' insert 'or Computer Science and Philosophy'.

2 Ibid., after 'Bachelor of Arts, or Master of Biochemistry or Chemistry or Computer Science' insert 'or Computer Science and Philosophy'.

PERMANENT PRIVATE HALLS: GREYFRIARS

Explanatory Note

Following approval of the removal of Greyfriars from the list of Permanent Private Halls in Statute V, this change removes a reference to Greyfriars in a list of Permanent Private Halls licensed by the University.

Text of Regulation

In regulation 4 (1) of Council Regulations 12 of 2002, concerning the establishment and maintenance of Permanent Private Halls (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended on 17 July 2003, Vol. 133, p. 1536), delete 'Greyfriars 30'.

1 Voting on Resolution authorising use of space within the Primary Care Trust building at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter

Explanatory Note

Under the terms on which the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter site was purchased, the University is required to construct a new Primary Care Trust (PCT) building to replace the Jericho Health Centre. The three-floor building proposed by the University will provide approximately 750 sq.m. net usable space per floor.

A resolution allocating one floor of this building to the Department of Public Health and Primary Care was passed by Congregation on 1 December 2009.

Following discussions with the PCT, it is clear that its space requirements will be met by one floor of the building. It is therefore proposed that one floor be allocated to the PCT.

It is proposed that the remaining floor be allocated to Oxford University Press.

Text of Resolutions

(i) That one floor (approximately 750 sq.m. net usable space) in the Primary Care Trust building to be constructed at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter, be allocated to the Primary Care Trust;

(ii) That one floor (approximately 750 sq.m. net usable space) in the Primary Care Trust building to be constructed at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter, be allocated to Oxford University Press.

2 Voting on Resolution authorising use of the site of the Physical and Theoretical Chemistry Laboratory and the allocation of space in the Robert Hooke Building

Explanatory Note

The site of the Physical and Theoretical Chemistry Laboratory, together with the parking area immediately in front of the building, is proposed as the location for a new Chemistry Research Laboratory. This new laboratory will provide improved teaching facilities and will achieve the Department's long-standing objective of consolidating teaching and research activity currently split across three buildings.

In addition, the temporary allocation of space in the Robert Hooke Building (formerly the Earth Sciences building) is proposed as part of the decant strategy for this project.

Text of Resolutions

(i) That the site of approximately 3,500 sq.m., which includes the site on which the Physical and Theoretical Chemistry Laboratory currently stands, be allocated to the Department of Chemistry for the construction of a new building.

(ii) That approximately 2,765 sq.m. net useable space in the Robert Hooke Building building be allocated to the Department of Chemistry on a temporary basis from 12 October 2010 until 30 September 2013.

3 Voting on Resolution authorising use of a site in front of the Clarendon Laboratory Lindemann Building

Explanatory Note

The Sciences Area masterplanning process identified a development site in front of the Clarendon Laboratory Lindemann Building. This site is proposed as the location for a new building for the Department of Physics. The building, which would be occupied primarily by Theoretical Physics, will contribute towards the achievement of the long-term objective of consolidating the Department in a single location.

Text of Resolution

That the site of approximately 1,700 sq.m. located in front of the Clarendon Laboratory Lindemann Building be allocated to the Department of Physics for the construction of a new building.

Joint Division/Education Committee Review of the Department of International Development

TERMS OF REFERENCE FOR THE REVIEW

1 To review the quality of academic activities in the department, by reference to:

- international standards of excellence;
- action taken since the last review of the faculty/department;
- planning statements at faculty/department and divisional level, and in the context of the University's mission statement and corporate plan.

In particular:

(a) the quality of the research of the faculty/department, including its participation in inter-departmental, inter-divisional and inter-disciplinary activities, its research profile and strategy, and future challenges and opportunities;

(b) the quality of graduate programmes and their delivery and related issues, including:

- access and admissions
- curriculum design and programme structure
- teaching, learning and assessment
- the relationship between teaching and research
- academic and pastoral support and guidance
- the provision and use of learning resources (including staff resources)
- specific arrangements for the pursuit of graduate studies (including research degrees and research training and provision for part-time study)

- relationships with colleges

- quality assurance mechanisms;

(c) the organisation of the faculty/department, its management structures and the relationship between the faculty/department and the Division, including such matters as:

- strategic planning (including relationship to the divisional five-year plans and the University's Corporate Plan)
- academic and non-academic staff planning and recruitment
- student number planning
- terms of appointment for academic staff, including career development and equal opportunities issues
- accommodation and future space needs
- fundraising;

(d) the relationship (structural and operational) between units within the faculty/department, and between the faculty/department and cognate subject areas and colleges to which it is linked in teaching and research.

2 To consider the current and long-term financial position of, and funding arrangements for, the faculty/department, and its financial strategy.

The review committee would welcome written comments on matters falling within its terms of reference. These should be sent to the secretary of the review committee, c/o Helen Passey (helen.passey@socsci.ox.ac.uk), Social Sciences Division, Hayes House, 75 George Street, Oxford OX1 2BQ, by Wednesday, 10 November.

Notes

Where it is specified in the above list that the nominee must be from among certain persons 'working in' a Department or other institution, both the nominee and the nominators must be persons so working at the time of the election.

Nominations in writing for the elections on 25 November, by four members of Congregation other than the candidate, will be received by the Elections Office at the University Offices, Wellington Square, up to 4 p.m. on Thursday, 28 October 2010.

Council has decided that nominations should show for each signatory the name and college or department in block capitals. Any names which are not so shown may not be published.

At least one nomination in respect of each candidate must be made on an official nomination form. Copies of the form are obtainable from the Elections Office or from the Elections Office website (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/).

Candidates are invited to include with their nomination forms, a written statement of no more than 250 words, setting out his or her reasons for standing and qualifications for the office being sought. In the event of a contested election to the vacancies in question, these statements will be available online at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/ and published in the Gazette dated 11 November 2010.

Voters may wish to wait until they have read these notes before returning their ballot papers.

Ballot papers will be sent out to members of Congregation as soon as possible after the closing date for nominations. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 25 November 2010.

For further information about the committee or body concerned, please contact the individual Secretary, either via the email links above, or as listed in the University Calendar, 2010–11.

BOARD OF THE FACULTY OF ORIENTAL STUDIES

Vacancy: One

Professor V.A. Wallace, Balliol MT 2011

One official member elected by and from among the members of the Faculty of Oriental Studies.

For further information on the Board, please contact the Secretary (oriental@admin.ox.ac.uk).

Notes

Where it is specified in the above list that the nominee must be from among certain persons 'working in' a Department or other institution, both the nominee and the nominators must be persons so working at the time of the election.

Nominations in writing for the elections on 2 December, by four members of Congregation other than the candidate, will be received by the Elections Office at the University Offices, Wellington Square, up to 4 p.m. on Thursday 4 November.

Council has decided that nominations should show for each signatory the name and college or department in block capitals. Any names which are not so shown may not be published.

At least one nomination in respect of each candidate must be made on an official nomination form. Copies of the form are obtainable from the Elections Office or from the Elections Office website.

Candidates are invited to include with their nomination forms, a written statement of no more than 250 words, setting out his or her reasons for standing and qualifications for the office being sought. In the event of a contested election, these statements will be available online <http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/> and published in the Gazette dated 18 November.

Voters may wish to wait until they have read these notes before returning their ballot papers.

Ballot papers will be sent out to members of Congregation as soon as possible after the closing date for nominations. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 2 December.

For further information about the committee or body concerned, please contact the individual Secretary, either via the email links above, or as listed in the University Calendar, 2010–11.

Advertising enquiries

Email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk
Telephone: 01865 (2)80548
Fax: 01865 (2)70178

Post: Gazette Advertisements,
Public Affairs Directorate,
University Offices,
Wellington Square,
Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline

Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges

Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £20 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in 'Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements' below.)

External advertisers: £25 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.

For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length

The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment

Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit-card or debit-card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

Note. Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the web-site. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque

Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note. Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency. If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General

1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be e-mailed automatically to the e-mail address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges

6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at <http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm>.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer

7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers' Warranty and Indemnity

13. The advertiser warrants:

(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.

(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person's intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette

16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

Council and Main Committees

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations

Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 29 October.

(A) KELLOGG COLLEGE

Explanatory Note

This change in regulations widens the scope of those whom the college may present for admission as members of the University but, for those students not undertaking a degree course or the Postgraduate Certificate in Education, limits the number of students who may be presented in any one year.

Text of Regulations

In Council Regulations 10 of 2002, concerning Kellogg College (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, p. 1386, as amended on 25 July 2002, 29 May 2003 and 15 February 2007), delete existing regulation 1(1) and substitute:

‘(1) (a) Kellogg College may present for admission as members of the University the President and any Fellow of Kellogg College, if not a member of any college, society, Permanent Private Hall, or other institution designated by Council by regulation as being permitted to present candidates for matriculation, together with any person admitted to Kellogg College for the purpose of working for (i) a graduate degree course; (ii) the Postgraduate Certificate in Education; (iii) any other graduate university qualification; or (iv) other persons at the discretion of the Governing Body.

(b) In any one year, the college may present no more than six persons in total in categories (iii) and (iv) combined, as defined in paragraph (a) above.’

(B) APPOINTMENTS TO COMMITTEES

Explanatory Note

Currently, when a member of Council is appointed to serve in his or her capacity as a member of Council on a University committee, the regulations concerning the term are sometimes suspended to allow the Council member to serve on the committee in question for the remainder of his or her term on Council, instead of a full term or remainder of term, where the terms do not match. The change in regulations below provides an exception to the general rules concerning the filling of vacancies in those circumstances.

Text of Regulations

In regulation 1.1 of Council Regulations 15 of 2002 concerning committees reporting directly to Council or one of its main committees (made by Council on 24 July 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1544, 5 July 2002), insert new paragraph (3) below:

‘(3) Where it is a condition of an appointment that the person appointed is a member of Council or another committee, the period of appointment shall coincide with the appointee’s known membership of the latter, provided that the period does not exceed the maximum term allowed.’

CORRIGENDA: THE HOLDING OF OUTSIDE APPOINTMENTS AND THE CONDUCT OF OUTSIDE WORK

The following changes to Council Regulations 5 of 2004, published on 22 July (Gazette, Vol. 140, p. 1340), are being republished to correct some errors and to include a change to the Financial Regulations.

1 In Council Regulations 5 of 2004 concerning the holding of outside appointments and the conduct of outside work (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4703, 14 July 2004) delete regulations 1–8 and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

‘1. (4) All university employees, with the exception of CUF lecturers, shall obtain approval from their head of department, faculty board chairman, or head of division as appropriate for the holding of any outside appointment (including directorships), and for undertaking other outside activities (including the holding of consultancies and directorships).

(2) CUF lecturers shall be subject to regulations 6–8 below in relation to the holding by them of executive directorships.

2. The following shall not count as outside appointments for this purpose. Such approval is not required for:

(1) the holding of the office of Proctor or Assessor;

(2) the holding of the office of examiner in any examination which is part of a degree course at any university;

(3) the holding of a commemorative lectureship or similar post in any university with the duty to give not more than eight lectures in any year of office; clinical work, where this is already set out in the terms and conditions of employment of staff with clinical responsibilities;

(4) activities or responsibilities normally associated with, or arising from, scholarly work which do not involve a formal and continuing contract: (including, for example, serving as a grant reviewer, or as a member of an editorial board, research advisory body, or government sponsored committee, or giving occasional guest lectures);

(5) activities or responsibilities which are neither paid nor require the commitment of time that might otherwise reasonably be expected to be devoted to university duties.

~~3. For the purpose of the regulations which follow, an executive directorship is one involving an active management role, whether or not including research, in the company concerned.~~

4. Approval may be granted for outside work and the holding of outside appointments, without any deduction from salary, subject to the following conditions:

(1) the application shall be made on the appropriate form (available, together with a guidance note which includes information about the role which Oxford University Consulting can play in support of staff who wish to make their expertise available to outside bodies, on the university website);

(2) the employee’s line manager where relevant and head of department (or faculty board chairman in non-departmentally organised subjects) must sanction the application: where the employee is a head of department (or faculty board chairman), the head of division shall be responsible for granting this sanction;

(3) the employee must make a conflict of interest declaration on the application form;

(4) the total commitment to such outside work and appointments must not exceed thirty days in any calendar year (subject to regulation 54 below): where, ~~exceptionally~~, consent is given under regulation 65 below for the holding of an executive directorship, the employee shall have an ongoing obligation to consult both the head of the department (or faculty board chairman in non-departmentally organised subjects) and the head of the division concerned if there is any indication that the thirty-day period may need to be extended in order that the employee might perform his or her statutory and common law duties as an executive director;

(5) terms and conditions which are proposed to govern an outside appointment must be scrutinised and endorsed by Research Services on behalf of the University, and must not be amended without the prior written approval of Research Services;

(6) Research Services must be satisfied that there will be no conflict with the terms governing any external funding for the employee's salary (or for any externally-funded project for which the employee is Principal Investigator or Co-investigator); and that any necessary consents have been obtained from the funding body;

(7) the employee shall not carry out any commercial activities on University premises;

(85) the employee shall comply with the Regulations relating to the Use of Information Technology Facilities;

(96) the employee shall not use university facilities, including e-mail or mailing addresses, in connection with the outside appointment without the permission of the head of department or faculty board chairman (who should consider any VAT implications and who may levy a charge at the appropriate economic rate);

(107) the employee shall consult the Conflict of Interest Committee if in the ongoing performance of the outside work or appointment he or she at any time perceives a conflict or potential conflict with his or her duties to the University, or with the wider interests of the University.

54. Approval for cases where the proposed commitment exceeds thirty days may still be sought: in such cases the department or faculty board shall refer the request to the divisional board, and if it is approved a deduction from salary shall be made. (Partial or full secondment may be more appropriate for particularly time-consuming outside appointments.)

65. No employee of the University shall hold any executive directorship without the express consent of the Committee on Conflict of Interest, as well as of his or her head of department, faculty board chairman, or head of division as appropriate.

7. ~~Consent to the holding of executive directorships may be given in the following circumstances:-~~

(1) ~~where the employee has satisfied the Committee on Conflict of Interest that the holding of an executive directorship is or will be necessary in order to satisfy the requirements of a recognised stock exchange for the listing of scientific, research-based companies; and/or~~

(2) ~~where the Committee on Conflict of Interest is satisfied that consent will be justified on other grounds, although it should be noted that such consent will only be given in exceptional cases.~~

8. ~~If the Committee on Conflict of Interest gives consent under regulation 6 above, the employee may proceed with an application for approval under regulations 4-5 above.~~

2 In the Financial Regulations (Council Regulations 1 of 2010, Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4923, 25 June 2010), delete existing 8.6 and substitute:

'8.6 Outside Appointments

Apart from CUF lecturers, all University employees must obtain approval for the holding of any outside appointment, and for conducting remunerated outside work on a self-employed basis, following the University's Regulations for the Holding of Outside Appointments and the Conduct of Outside Work (Council Regulations 5 of 2004). ~~Those regulations explain the circumstances in which the University's insurances will provide cover for such appointments and work.~~

General Purposes Committee of Council

Changes in Regulations

The General Purposes Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations to come into effect on 29 October.

SAÏD BUSINESS SCHOOL AND BUSINESS ADVISORY COUNCIL

Explanatory Note

These changes, made on the recommendation of the Social Sciences Board, amend the regulations concerning the Saïd Business School, to streamline the School's governance structures and make clear the role to be played in these structures by the various external stakeholders.

The existing Business Advisory Board, the Development Board and the School's Executive Board will be replaced by a new School Board comprising nine University members and four external members, chaired by a member of the Board with no executive authority.

Text of Regulations

In Part 2 of Council Regulations 25 of 2002, concerning trusts (Statutes, 2000, p. 719, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1461), delete existing § 312 and substitute:

'§ 312. Saïd Business School and Business Advisory Council

1. (1) In the light of the munificent benefaction of £20m by Mr Wafic Rida Saïd ('the Benefactor') for the University's School of Management Studies, the school shall be named the Saïd Business School.

(2) The school shall promote study and research within the field of Management Studies.

2. The academic direction and day-to-day management of the school shall be entirely and exclusively the responsibility of the University.

3. (1) The office of Dean of the School, who shall be called the Peter Moores Dean, shall be held for a period of five years, or such other period as Council may determine from time to time, and may be renewed for such periods thereafter.

(2) The appointment of the Dean shall be made by Council, on the recommendation of the Social Sciences Board, after consultation with the Peter Moores Foundation and with the approval of the Saïd Business School Foundation, such approval not to be unreasonably withheld.

4. (1) There shall be a School Board consisting of:

(a) a representative of the University appointed by the Vice-Chancellor;

(b) a representative of the Social Sciences Division appointed by the Head of the Social Sciences Division;

(c) the Chairman of the Business Advisory Council;

(d) the Peter Moores Dean (or the Head of Department, where appointed in lieu of the Peter Moores Dean);

(e) the Associate Dean of Executive Education;

- (f) the Faculty Dean;
- (g) the Chief Operating Officer;
- (h)–(i) two members appointed by the Head of the Social Sciences Division, following consultation with the Chair of the Business Advisory Council, as representatives of the business and SBS alumni communities;
- (j) a person appointed by the Benefactor or his successor in title;
- (k)–(m) three members elected by the Faculty Forum from among its members.

(2) The first chairman shall be appointed for an initial period of two years from amongst the members of the board by the Head of the Social Sciences Division, upon the recommendation of the board following its inaugural meeting. Thereafter, the board shall elect its own chairman for a period of three years. In no case shall the chairman be the Peter Moores Dean.

(3) The period of office for appointed and elected members shall be three years. Appointed and elected members may be re-appointed or re-elected for one further term of office.

(4) The board may co-opt up to two additional members, on condition that the board shall always ensure by the use of its power of co-optation that the overall range of activities and concerns is as fully represented within the total membership of the board as is reasonably practicable.

(5) The broad functions of the board shall be to oversee, manage and regulate the School and OSBS Limited's strategy, budgets and senior appointments, and make such recommendations to the University as appropriate.

(6) The board shall delegate the day-to-day running of the School to the Peter Moores Dean.

5. (1) There shall be a Business Advisory Council consisting of:

- (a) the Vice-Chancellor;
- (b) a person appointed by the Benefactor or his successor in title;
- (c) the Peter Moores Dean of the Saïd Business School;
- (d) the Associate Dean of Executive Education;
- (e) the Faculty Dean;
- (f) the Chief Operating Officer;

and not fewer than fifteen persons drawn from the international business community, appointed by Council after consultation with the Dean.

(2) The Business Advisory Council shall appoint a chairman from among its members.

(3) The period of office for appointed members shall be three years. Appointed members may be re-appointed for one further term of office.

(4) The functions of the Business Advisory Council shall be to advise the School Board on the needs of the business community in respect of business education, research, and training, corporate engagement and careers. The members of the Advisory Council will individually and collectively leverage their own knowledge and expertise to inform, challenge, and debate the School's strategy, as articulated by the School Board.

6. These regulations may be modified or replaced in whole or in part by further regulations or statutes, so long as the Trustees of the Saïd Business School Foundation shall first have approved the modification or replacement

(1) in the case of regulations 1–3 and 5–6 by a four-fifths majority; and

(2) in the case of regulation 4 by a simple majority.'

Congregation

2 November 2 p.m.

¶ Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 25 October, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose one or more of the resolutions below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the resolutions shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

1 Voting on Resolution authorising use of space within the Primary Care Trust building at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter

Explanatory Note

Under the terms on which the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter site was purchased, the University is required to construct a new Primary Care Trust (PCT) building to replace the Jericho Health Centre. The three-floor building proposed by the University will provide approximately 750 sq.m. net usable space per floor.

A resolution allocating one floor of this building to the Department of Public Health and Primary Care was passed by Congregation on 1 December 2009.

Following discussions with the PCT, it is clear that its space requirements will be met by one floor of the building. It is therefore proposed that one floor be allocated to the PCT.

It is proposed that the remaining floor be allocated to Oxford University Press.

Text of Resolutions

(i) That one floor (approximately 750 sq.m. net usable space) in the Primary Care Trust building to be constructed at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter, be allocated to the Primary Care Trust;

(ii) That one floor (approximately 750 sq.m. net usable space) in the Primary Care Trust building to be constructed at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter, be allocated to Oxford University Press.

2 Voting on Resolution authorising use of the site of the Physical and Theoretical Chemistry Laboratory and the allocation of space in the Robert Hooke Building

Explanatory Note

The site of the Physical and Theoretical Chemistry Laboratory together with the parking area immediately in front of the building, is proposed as the location for a new Chemistry Research Laboratory. This new laboratory will provide improved teaching facilities and will achieve the Department's long-standing objective of consolidating teaching and research activity currently split across three buildings.

In addition, the temporary allocation of space in the Robert Hooke Building (formerly the Earth Sciences building) is proposed as part of the decant strategy for this project.

Text of Resolutions

(i) That the site of approximately 3,500 sq.m., which includes the site on which the Physical and Theoretical Chemistry Laboratory currently stands, be allocated to the Department of Chemistry for the construction of a new building.

(ii) That approximately 2,765 sq.m. net useable space in the Robert Hooke Building building be allocated to the Department of Chemistry on a temporary basis from 12 October 2010 until 30 September 2013.

3 Voting on Resolution authorising use of a site in front of the Clarendon Laboratory Lindemann Building

Explanatory Note

The Sciences Area masterplanning process identified a development site in front of the Clarendon Laboratory Lindemann Building. This site is proposed as the location for a new building for the Department of Physics. The building, which would be occupied primarily by Theoretical Physics, will contribute towards the achievement of the long-term objective of consolidating the Department in a single location.

Text of Resolution

That the site of approximately 1,700 sq.m. located in front of the Clarendon Laboratory Lindemann Building be allocated to the Department of Physics for the construction of a new building.

General notice

Corrigendum: Advanced German Translation 2011

Please note the following change in examining conventions in the Final Honour School for examination Trinity term 2011 onwards.

PAPER XII: SPECIAL SUBJECTS

Advanced Translation

The course will be examined by a portfolio consisting of three exercises:

1. A translation of a text (or excerpt of a text) of 2,500–3,000 words in length, selected by the student; the text should be of a certain difficulty in order to present challenges to the translator; it is not a requirement that the text not be already translated, but where a text has already been translated, the student will be expected to comment on the justification for a new translation and to address in her/his introduction the different approach adopted. The selected texts will normally be in German, for translation into English. However, students of native-speaker competence in German may opt to translate from English into German. (40% of the mark for the paper).

2. An introduction of 2,000–2,500 words (excluding footnotes and bibliography) to the above translation, setting out the reasons for the selection of the text or excerpt in question together with an account of the approach adopted and detailing choices made in respect of specific identified problems and challenges. The purpose of the introduction will be to make transparent the decisions which lie behind the translation as submitted. Students will be encouraged to apply terminology learned in the course of the seminars for the paper and to incorporate such reference to their reading in translation theory as may be relevant to explaining their choices, but demonstration of knowledge of theories of translation is not the main object of the exercise. (30% of the mark for the paper).

3. A comparative analysis, 2,000–2,500 words in length (excluding footnotes and bibliography), of two different published translations (German–English) of the same source text (or excerpt of a text), to be supplied as a common exercise for all participating students by the special subject tutor in week 5 of the term during which the paper is being taught. The text or excerpt, given in two translations, should be long enough to give a clear impression of the characteristics of each translator's approach and choices: ca. 3–5 pages. (30% of the mark for the paper).

The text for translation should not be by an author that forms the subject of an extended essay or that is offered as a prescribed author. The bibliography of the translation will include a list of existing translations of the text, or a statement that to the best knowledge of the student, there are no published translations of it. The course tutor will be permitted to read and comment on a draft of the introduction and a draft of the translation; the latter will normally have been presented for seminar discussion. As a formative exercise, a comparative analysis of two different translations of the same text (or excerpt), different from the one set for assessment, will be treated in one of the seminars for the paper in order to introduce techniques and terminology. The comparative analysis done for assessment will then be written without further input from the tutor. Examiners will have regard to accuracy and appropriateness of renderings in the translation, and the intellectual quality of the introduction and the comparative analysis.

Method of Assessment: B(3).

Visiting Professorships

Conferment and reconferment of the title of Visiting Professor

The Medical Sciences Board has conferred the title of Visiting Professor of Knowledge Management on Sir Muir Gray, MB ChB MD Glas; for a further period of five years from 1 January 2010.

Advertising enquiries

Email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk
Telephone: 01865 (2)80548
Fax: 01865 (2)70178

Post: Gazette Advertisements,
Public Affairs Directorate,
University Offices,
Wellington Square,
Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline

Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges

Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £20 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in 'Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements' below.)

External advertisers: £25 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.

For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length

The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment

Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit-card or debit-card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

Note. Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the web-site. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque

Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note. Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency. If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General

1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be e-mailed automatically to the e-mail address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges

6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at <http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm>.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer

7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers' Warranty and Indemnity

13. The advertiser warrants:

(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.

(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person's intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette

16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

University of Oxford: Head of the Humanities Division

Head of the Humanities Division

The University is seeking an academic of distinction in any field of the Humanities to head this large, highly diverse and internationally renowned academic division. The priority for the next Head of Division will be to provide leadership and vision in taking forward the Division's strategic agenda for research and teaching. This is a full-time senior management position within the University, with responsibility for academic and administrative leadership. It provides an exciting opportunity to shape the development of the Humanities at Oxford building on and extending its international reputation for research and teaching. The appointment will commence on 1 October 2011 or as soon as possible thereafter and will be for an initial period of five years.

Please see the further particulars at http://www.ox.ac.uk/about_the_university/jobs/fp/ for more details about the post and for full instructions before making an application. Applications, including a covering letter and full CV, and naming three referees, should be received no later than Tuesday 30 November 2010, by Dr Gwen Booth, Personnel Officer, Senior Appointments at professorships@admin.ox.ac.uk. If you have a query about how to apply, please contact Mrs Elaine Eastgate at professorships@admin.ox.ac.uk or telephone: +44 (0) 1865 280189.

Oxford Teaching Awards 2009–10

This year's awards were announced at a reception in Rhodes House on Tuesday, 19 October, in the presence of the Vice-Chancellor who presented the winners with certificates. The citations below are extracts from the reports of the divisional or departmental bodies that judged the awards.

Humanities

This year, Humanities reserved the use of its awards to acknowledge excellence through the award of project grants.

Dr Alexandra da Costa

Faculty of English; St Hilda's

Dr da Costa is a Research Fellow and Tutor in Medieval Literature. Her project will trial a short immersion course in medieval language and literature.

Dr Diane Purkiss and Dr Alexandra da Costa

Faculty of English; Keble and St Hilda's

Dr Purkiss is Tutorial Fellow in English, and Dr da Costa is a Research Fellow and Tutor in Medieval Literature. Their project will run a series of seminars linking Middle English and Early Modern literature.

Dr Jan Fellerer

Faculty of Modern Languages (Sub-faculty of Russian); Wolfson

Dr Fellerer is a University Lecturer in Non-Russian Slavonic Languages. His project will further develop the course materials for the first year of the Russian ab initio course.

Dr Martyn Harry

Faculty of Music; St Anne's and St Hilda's

Dr Harry is University Lecturer in Music. His project will train students in the use of digital audio and music notation software.

Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences

Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences has used its awards to acknowledge excellence in teaching both in established staff and in new teachers, and also to acknowledge the support of teaching. In addition, there is one project grant.

Professor Gavin Lowe

Computing Laboratory; St Catherine's

Professor Lowe is a Professor of Computer Science. He is being recognised for the significant contribution he made to the department during his tenure as Director of Teaching, for designing and teaching a new course at undergraduate and Masters level, which has received excellent feedback; and for the development of the new degree in Computer Science and Philosophy.

Professor Stephen Pulman

Computing Laboratory; Somerville

Professor Pulman is Professor of Computational Linguistics. He is being recognised for his consistently excellent teaching as judged by student feedback and the popularity of his course, as well as his many valuable contributions to the department. These include the supervision of a large number of DPhil students and MSc student projects.

Dr Irena Voiculescu

Computing Laboratory

Dr Voiculescu is a Departmental Lecturer in the Computing Laboratory. She is being recognised for designing and teaching a new undergraduate course, which has received excellent feedback, as well as many other valuable contributions to the department such as consistent participation in access events and designing training material for class teaching.

Professor Michael Worthington

Department of Earth Sciences

Professor Worthington is a Senior Research Fellow. He is being recognised for his consistently excellent teaching, as judged by student feedback, and his many valuable contributions to the organisation of teaching and examining.

Dr Jane Frew

Department of Engineering

Dr Frew, the Deputy Administrator (Academic) in the Department, is being recognised for her support of teaching. For many years, she has played the lead role in the administration and smooth running of the Department's courses. Her dedication, efficiency and attention to detail are exemplary. She has established an excellent relationship with staff and students alike, based on her approachable personality and her willingness always to help.

Professor Alison Noble

Department of Engineering; Wolfson

There have been two very important developments in graduate teaching in the Department in recent years: the establishment of the MSc in Biomedical Engineering, and the creation of an RCUK Centre for Doctoral Training in Healthcare Innovation. Professor Noble has played an absolutely central role in both of these developments, which have not only involved a great deal of hard work, but have also required imagination and flair in developing new teaching programmes.

Dr David Watkin

Department of Inorganic Chemistry

Dr Watkin is the Head of the Chemical Crystallography Laboratory. He is being recognised for his superb teaching style coupled with a remarkable ability to teach complex subjects such as crystallographic mathematics and least-square refinement. All his students hold him in the highest regard.

Dr John Murphy*Department of Materials; St Anne's*

Dr Murphy is a Royal Academy of Engineering Research Fellow, and all the teaching he does is wholly voluntary. In recent years, he has contributed substantially to the teaching of the Department's undergraduate programme covering a full range of duties more typical of a University Lecturer and Tutorial Fellow. His reflective approach to the development of his teaching skills is exemplary, and it is clear from a wide range of feedback that he is an excellent teacher whose approach is greatly appreciated by the students and much valued by his academic colleagues.

Mrs Lyn Richmond*Department of Materials*

Mrs Lyn Richmond, an outstanding member of the Department's clerical support staff, is being recognised for her support of teaching. She provides superb support to the academic staff and to our undergraduates and research students and is always willing to go the extra mile. Comments about her include the following: 'Lyn's support and help for students and members of the Department is unparalleled... She knows everyone's names, and exactly whom to contact if you need help.... She is incredibly friendly and very supportive of students at times of stress such as when they are about to give a talk or hand in a thesis.' She makes an exceptional contribution to the support, organisation and planning for undergraduates and graduate students and is an excellent example of a good citizen.

Dr Andrew Dancer*Department of Mathematics; Jesus*

Dr Dancer is nominated for the excellence of his undergraduate teaching, supported by evidence from lecture questionnaires from the whole year group, and for his significant contribution as coordinator of the Taught Course Centre.

Dr Richard Earl*Department of Mathematics; Worcester*

Dr Earl is nominated by the mathematics undergraduates at Worcester for the excellence of his teaching; this is supported by excellent lecture questionnaire returns and very positive feedback on outreach activities.

Dr Jan Obloj*Department of Mathematics*

Dr Obloj is nominated for the excellence of his graduate lectures on Mathematical Finance, in which he took on two hard courses at an early stage in his career; he is also nominated for his very positive input into graduate recruitment and training, including supervision and DPhil examining.

Dr Christoph Reisinger*Department of Mathematics; St Catherine's*

Dr Reisinger is nominated for the excellence of his graduate supervision at an early stage of his career, and for his substantial input into the curriculum redesign for the MSc in Mathematical Finance.

Mr Philippe Trinh*Department of Mathematics; Balliol*

Mr Trinh, a doctoral research student, is being acknowledged for the excellence of his class teaching in Viscous Flow, where his enthusiasm, energy and attention to detail were highly appreciated. He was nominated both by his supervisor and by the Mathematics Undergraduate Representative Committee via the Joint Consultative Committee with Undergraduates. He is commended also for having undertaken an educational development course and writing a project on mathematical education.

Dr Mark Moloney*Department of Organic Chemistry; St Peter's*

Dr Moloney is being recognised for his outstanding commitment to teaching, obtaining a Diploma in Teaching to further his lecturing and teaching abilities. Over the last ten years he has had a heavy examining load as well as making a valuable contribution to the general running of the undergraduate course which has been changed twice during this time.

Professor David Manolopoulos*Department of Physical and Theoretical Chemistry; St Edmund Hall*

Professor Manolopoulos is being recognised for his outstanding ability to teach and to explain clearly the difficult concepts of Maths and Physical Chemistry, as well as his ability to motivate his students.

Professor Stephen Blundell*Department of Physics; Mansfield*

Professor Blundell achieves the highest standard in lecturing. His ability to communicate and make students fully understand material is second to none. He makes sure students leave the lectures with a full understanding of the subject, and the consequences of any theory fully explored. Professor Blundell is extremely motivational, and is also easily approachable and will spend time giving students complete explanations for any questions. From the feedback, 97% of students found his thermodynamics lectures useful.

Dr Anthony Dyson*Department of Physics*

Dr Anthony Dyson is an outstanding demonstrator, taking time to help each student with their work and fully explaining the theory behind each practical class.

In doing so, he makes the practicals enjoyable and easy to complete. Typically, he uses a variety of models to explain the experiments, and will then test the students' understanding with a challenging question. He provides 'what feels like a tutorial' for each practical.

Professor Paul Ewart*Department of Physics; Worcester*

Professor Paul Ewart has produced an exceptional set of lectures. Full of information and entertaining with the occasional joke, Professor Ewart managed to make the course understandable at the same time as interesting. Professor Ewart is particularly able to present seemingly complicated topics at a clear and concise level. He is known for the quality of his lecture notes: clear and informative, they provide students with exactly the right amount of material for understanding the subject, while providing an insight into the consequences of the theory.

Professor Nick Jelley*Department of Physics; Lincoln*

This project was initiated through the accreditation of the BA and MPhys physics courses by the Institute of Physics. This grant will enable Professor Jelley and colleagues to undertake and develop two of the project ideas discussed with the accreditation panel. One project will be to develop 'essay' writing skills. Another project will be to develop a group project for the second-year cohort. It is envisaged that the group work will take the form of an intercollegiate competition where the second-year students will work (possibly in college groupings) on a presentation.

Dr Roosa Leimu*Department of Plant Sciences*

Dr Leimu is employed as a departmental demonstrator to assist with the delivery of our Ecology courses. She has far exceeded our expectations in all areas of teaching, giving of her time unstintingly with regard to lectures, tutorial provision and examining. We wish to recognise her outstanding contribution.

Dr Nicolai Meinshausen*Department of Statistics; Somerville*

Dr Meinshausen is being recognised for his teaching of Statistical Data Mining, a course taken both by fourth-year undergraduates and by MSc students. His well-structured presentation and interesting practical sessions, at an appropriate level for his varied audience, contributed to an excellent and very successful course.

Dr Matthias Winkel*Department of Statistics*

Dr Winkel has been made an award by the divisional committee for his excellent teaching, particularly in the course in Actuarial Science which spans a number of different departments and is extremely well received by the students.

Dr Thomas Kemp*Department of Zoology; St John's*

Dr Kemp retired from a University Lectureship in September 2009 but agreed to continue teaching both his FHS courses in 2009–10 so there would not be a gap in provision. In his 38 years of lecturing in Oxford in Biological Sciences he has made a huge contribution to the leadership and development of undergraduate teaching as well as being an effective lecturer and tutor as evidenced by student feedback. He has been Course Organiser for various modules, developed and designed new courses, served as Chair of the Examinations Subcommittee for a number of years and was also co-chair of a committee that reviewed and radically redeveloped the Biological Sciences course.

Medical Sciences

Medical Sciences has made a Major Educator Award and Excellent Teacher awards to acknowledge excellence in teaching and the design and organisation of teaching, and it has also acknowledged excellence in the support of teaching. In addition, there is an award for a young teacher and researcher for his exceptional contributions to the educational development of research students.

Dr Richard Boyd*Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics; Brasenose*

Dr Boyd is being recognised with a Major Educator Award for his outstanding leadership of educational activity in the Medical Sciences Division over a period of five years, between 2003 and 2008. He has raised the profile of education within the most research-intensive division of the University, defined the aims of the division's teaching, and put strategies in place to achieve those aims. Dr Boyd has always promoted an inclusive dialogue and a culture in which ideas about education are not limited by subject, departmental or divisional boundaries. This has encouraged joined-up thinking with regard to all aspects of education, bridging divides between pre-clinical and clinical medicine, promoting links with Psychology and Biochemistry, and sustaining relationships with NHS partners.

Dr Mark Wormald*Department of Biochemistry; Corpus Christi*

Dr Wormald is being recognised as an Excellent Teacher for a range of contributions he has made within his department. He has improved the Biochemistry admissions process to make it more transparent for both applicants and tutors, and is heavily involved in access initiatives and widening participation activities at departmental, college and university level. Dr Wormald also provides training and support for new teachers within the department, and plays a significant role in organising and teaching on the undergraduate Biochemistry course, receiving consistently high student feedback for the teaching he delivers.

Dr Tim Littlewood*Department of Clinical Haematology; Christ Church*

Dr Littlewood is being recognised with an Excellent Teacher Award for his sustained commitment and enthusiasm for teaching. He successfully addresses the communication and ethical aspects of medicine, and is frequently cited by students as a role model for developing an open, honest and caring manner in a specialty where there is a frequent need to communicate intellectually complex and emotionally difficult information to patients.

Dr Daniel Bulte*Department of Clinical Neurology; Wolfson*

Dr Bulte is being given an Excellent Teacher Award in recognition of his excellent teaching on, and development of, the Teaching Skills Stage 1 course 'Preparation for Learning and Teaching at Oxford'. The course is offered collaboratively by the Medical Sciences Division and the Oxford Learning Institute, its aim being to introduce senior graduate students and research staff to theories of teaching and learning within the context of tuition at Oxford. Every course has consistently been rated as excellent by attendees.

Professor Brian Rogers*Department of Experimental Psychology; Pembroke*

Professor Rogers is being recognised with an Excellent Teacher Award for the quality of his teaching and his commitment to students' individual needs. Professor Rogers successfully communicates his enthusiasm for Experimental Psychology to students, and receives consistently positive student feedback. He also played a major role in the design and implementation of the course format in use today, and introduced a system that fully integrates tutorial provision with lecture courses, thereby ensuring equity of provision for undergraduates across the colleges.

Dr Simon Draper*The Jenner Institute, Nuffield Department of Medicine; Merton*

Dr Draper is being recognised as an Excellent Teacher for his supervision of DPhil students within the Jenner Institute of the Nuffield Department of Clinical Medicine. Dr Draper gives students confidence in their abilities as researchers and consistently goes out of his way to make sure students receive the pastoral support they need as well as appropriate academic supervision. His scientific advice and feedback is consistently pragmatic and sound, but always delivered with encouragement.

Professor Herman Waldmann*Sir William Dunn School of Pathology; Lincoln*

Professor Waldmann is receiving an Excellent Teacher award for his strong advocacy of undergraduate teaching within the Sir William Dunn School of Pathology over the last 16 years. As Head of Department, Professor Waldmann has ensured that all principal investigators share in undergraduate teaching and examination duties. He maintains a close interest in pathology teaching through his regular attendance at the departmental teaching committee, his impromptu visits to pathology practical classes, and the close attention he pays to student feedback forms, as well as his own active contribution to teaching.

Dr Helen Christian*Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics; St Anne's*

Dr Christian is being recognised as an Excellent Teacher for her contributions to teaching Pre-clinical Medicine and Physiological Sciences students. In particular, she has demonstrated successful leadership in bringing about innovations and improvements to histology (microscopic anatomy) classes, which have been very well received by students. She has also been praised for the clarity and thoroughness of her lectures, and for producing model hand-outs.

Professor Zoltan Molnar*Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics; St John's*

Professor Molnar is being recognised as an Excellent Teacher for his contributions to lecturing and practical class teaching for Pre-clinical Medicine and Physiological Sciences students, for which feedback is extremely positive. He has developed extensive e-learning materials to accompany his classes, and has also demonstrated successful leadership in relation to the Neuroscience teaching cluster within his department. This has led to improvements in the mentoring of newly appointed academics and in the better distribution of teaching loads.

Dr Jan Schnupp

Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics; St Peter's

Dr Schnupp is being recognised as an Excellent Teacher for the very positive feedback received on his teaching from both Physiological Sciences and Pre-clinical Medicine students, and for his overall contribution to the Physiological Sciences course. Dr Schnupp's teaching focuses on basic neurological physiological mechanisms and on his major subject—audition. His lectures are cited as being clear and concise, interesting and enjoyable.

Dr Robert Wilkins

Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics; St Edmund Hall

Dr Wilkins is being given an Excellent Teacher Award in recognition of his contributions to lecturing and practical class teaching for Pre-clinical Medicine and Physiological Sciences students, for which he regularly receives some of the highest student feedback scores. Dr Wilkins has also revised and developed areas of the syllabus for which he is responsible, and has improved the admissions process for Pre-clinical Medicine and Physiological Sciences to make it more robust and efficient. Additionally, he has been very active in the development of the Division's new Biomedical Sciences course.

Miss Carlyn Cook

Clinical Medical School

Miss Cook is receiving a Learning Support award in particular recognition of her work as Elective Coordinator for the Medical School. Electives involve students from other medical schools in the UK and around the world coming to Oxford on placement as part of their studies, for several weeks or months at a time. Miss Cook has consistently exceeded the requirements of her role by developing provision for Elective students and by actively supporting them during their time at Oxford: she helps them to integrate into the academic and social community and to make the most of their experience here; she has produced a handbook specifically tailored to the needs of Elective students, and arranged for feedback mechanisms to help improve the programme. The measure of Miss Cook's impact is that Elective students have such a positive experience at Oxford that they return to pursue further study and to work.

Mr Peter Ward

Department of Experimental Psychology

Mr Ward is receiving a Learning Support Award in recognition of his long-standing technical support of the undergraduate teaching laboratories within the Department of Experimental Psychology. He has exceeded the duties of his role in becoming a key member of the team organising and delivering the undergraduate Experimental Psychology course. In particular, through the many revolutions in digital technology that have occurred during his service, which spans several decades, Mr Ward has played a leading role in assimilating, implementing, and overseeing computer applications both in practical teaching and in course administration. He has always carried out his duties with energy, commitment and skill, and his unassuming but outstanding readiness to master new technologies and adapt them to the needs of the course has earned the respect and gratitude of both students and teachers alike.

Miss Nicola Gregg

Department of Paediatrics

Miss Gregg is receiving a Learning Support Award for her exceptional coordination of the Paediatrics course, which forms part of Year 5 of the medical programme. The Paediatrics course is held in high regard within the Medical School and this success is in no small part attributable to Miss Gregg's organisational skills: she demonstrates great flexibility in timetabling teaching to fit around consultants' busy schedules whilst minimising disruption to students' learning, and she goes the extra mile to ensure that students have a positive experience while on the course. She receives exceptional feedback from students and consultants alike and her enthusiasm and cheerfulness are personal attributes that allow her to carry out her duties so effectively. Miss Gregg is an invaluable and indispensable member of the Paediatrics teaching team.

Mrs Paula Savin

Department of Pharmacology

Mrs Savin is receiving a Learning Support Award in recognition of her long-standing and invaluable contribution to single-handedly supporting teaching activities within the Department of Pharmacology. Her role has expanded significantly during her tenure; however, Mrs Savin has remained exceptionally industrious throughout and always has the best interests of the department at heart. She also displays an outstanding balance of persuasion with diplomacy when interacting with academics and demonstrates continued commitment and dedication to student needs, particularly those from overseas.

Social Sciences

Social Sciences has acknowledged exceptional teaching by a DPhil student and used the remainder of its awards to acknowledge excellence through the award of project grants.

Mr Cavit Pakel

Department of Economics; University College

Mr Pakel is a DPhil student who teaches on the Year-1 Econometrics course of the MPhil in Economics. He is being recognised for his excellence in teaching as attested by student feedback and with the support of his department.

Professor James Edelman

Department of Law; Keble

Professor Edelman is Professor of the Law of Obligations and is the Faculty Mooting Officer. He is being recognised for his apposite and thoughtful project proposal to introduce moot court competitions as part of developing the Legal Research and Mooting Skills Programme. He is supported by the Faculty's IT Training and Development Officer.

Dr Rachel Murphy

School of Interdisciplinary Area Studies/Sociology; St Antony's

Dr Murphy is being recognised for her project proposal to introduce a two-day workshop to promote the intellectual development of the School of Interdisciplinary Area Studies shared research methods course.

Dr Laura Rival

Queen Elizabeth House; Linacre

Dr Rival is being recognised for her team project to create a new option in 'Development, Environment, and Health', shared by Queen Elizabeth House, the Department of Public Health and the School of Geography and the Environment.

Department for Continuing Education

Continuing Education continues its practice of using the scheme to acknowledge excellence through the award of project grants.

Dr Clare Morgan

Kellogg

The Master of Studies degree in Creative Writing developed by Dr Morgan has an innovative and flexible course design that allows students from the UK and overseas to study together in residential periods in Oxford. Thanks to Dr Morgan's industry and the challenging standards she sets, the MSt has quickly become a prestigious award in the field, with impressively high student application rates and a growing cadre of graduates achieving prizes and distinctions for their published work. Dr Morgan's project will increase the scope of the course by adding a focus on different genres of writing.

Dr Mark Smith, Dr Elizabeth Gemmill and Dr Adrienne Rosen

Kellogg

Dr Smith and his two colleagues, Dr Gemmill and Dr Rosen, oversee a rich and varied programme of courses in English Local and Social History, successfully leading the field in the use of online learning to extend the constituency of people who can study the subject at Oxford. Their project will build on this experience by developing a one-year undergraduate Certificate in Local and Family History, which will exploit to the full the Department for Continuing Education's flexible and online learning capacity.

Bodleian Libraries

For teaching support.

Ms Louise Clarke

Social Science Library

Ms Louise Clarke is Librarian in Charge of the Social Science Library. She is being recognised for her focus on interdisciplinary work, her dedicated effort providing a good example of what we hope all subject librarians aspire to.

Ms Nia Roberts

Health Care Libraries

Ms Nia Roberts is the Reader Services Librarian, Knowledge Centre, Health Care Libraries. She is being recognised for the wide range of activities undertaken in applying her teaching and learning skills.

Mr James Shaw with Mr Roger Mills, Mrs Juliet Ralph, Mr Matthew Searle, Mrs Ljilja Ristic, Mrs Karine Barker and Ms Isabel McMann

Radcliffe Science Library

Mr James Shaw is a Team Leader at the Radcliffe Science Library. Mr Shaw and his colleagues are sharing a Team Award for their group effort, for enabling good library public relations, and for learning from each other and working in a non-traditional way to support teaching and learning.

OUCS OxTALENT Awards

OxTALENT Awards are given annually to acknowledge excellence in the use of technology in teaching and research. OxTALENT winners whose use of IT represented outstanding teaching or learning support are being recognised with Oxford Teaching Awards.

Dr Emma Smith

Faculty of English; Hertford

Dr Smith is being acknowledged for her use of podcasting. Last year, she released a series of six lectures, 'Not Shakespeare: Elizabethan and Jacobean popular theatre', introducing six plays from the Elizabethan and Jacobean theatre. She was completely self-sufficient in producing her podcasts: she records her lectures with her own equipment, creates her own mp3 files, and then uploads them to her WebLearn site. She provided a photograph to be used as an iTunes U album cover, and provided detailed descriptions of all her talks. This meant that the series could be added to iTunes U quickly, and it subsequently raced into the Oxford top ten, with 700 downloads a week at peak.

Mr Benjamin Spagnolo

Department of Law; Magdalen

Mr Spagnolo is a DPhil student who has recently started teaching. He is being acknowledged for his use of WebLearn to support a course or programme of study. To support undergraduate intercollegiate mooted competitions, he has developed an online system such as is used by many real courts. It enables students to receive and file information as 'counsel' and transmits the files appropriately between 'counsel' and 'judges'. The system has allowed him to organise sixty courts, each with four counsel and a judge, and to ensure that the right documents go to the right people at the right time.

Dr Barbara Gabrys

Department of Materials

Dr Gabrys is being acknowledged for her use of technology in learning spaces. She has introduced the use of hand-held 'clickers' to enable students to respond directly to questions posed by a lecturer or seminar leader. This technology is aimed at raising individual participation when students are being taught in a group. Evaluation forms returned by the students showed that they enjoyed this kind of involvement in teaching sessions, and the answers that they made using the clickers showed that they were engaged and had understood the material being taught.

Dr Elizabeth Frazer and Dr Scott Peterson

Department of Politics; New College and Balliol

Dr Fraser and Dr Peterson are being acknowledged for their use of WebLearn to support a course or programme of study. In developing 'WebLearn for teaching politics' they have experimented with different tools to see what works best for communication, feedback and interaction. The chat room in particular proved very popular on the night of the recent general election and for the protracted discussions which followed.

Ms Victoria Brown and Miss Rachel Woodruff

Department of the History of Art

Ms Brown and Miss Woodruff are being acknowledged for their use of WebLearn to support a course or programme of study. They are using WebLearn as an interactive platform to engage students and enrich teaching both inside and outside the classroom. Their site allows for the creation of small communities of students within the History of Art to encourage communication, interaction and exchange in a 'safe' environment, whilst allowing space for cross-cohort communication and bringing the undergraduate and graduate communities together. As an image-orientated department, it was important for them to have a platform to utilise and promote the analogue and digital collections, which are an intrinsic part of the Department's activities.

Changes in Regulations

Corrigendum: Use of the Facilities of the Bodleian Libraries

When changes were made to various regulations concerning the Bodleian Libraries (Gazette Vol. 140, p. 610, 18 February 2010), amendments to cross-references in one set of regulations were overlooked.

In regulations 32 and 33 of Libraries Curators' Regulations 1 of 2006 concerning the use of the facilities of the Bodleian Libraries (made by the Curators of the University Libraries on 12 June 2006, approved by Council on 10 July 2006, Gazette, Vol. 136, p. 1391, as amended on 12 July 2007 and 18 February 2010, Vol. 137, pp. 1359-60; Vol. 140, p. 610), delete 'Where breach or attempted breach of Regulations 7-12 above' and substitute 'Where breach or attempted breach of regulations 8-14 above'.

Corrigendum: Museum of the History of Science

When changes were made to Statute VIII, concerning libraries, museums and scientific collections, and the University Press (amended with effect from 2 March 2010, Gazette Vol. 140, p. 329, 3 December 2009), a consequential change to the regulations was overlooked.

In regulation 5 of Council Regulations 5 of 2003 concerning the Museum of the History of Science (made by Council on 16 October 2003, Gazette Vol. 134, p. 138, as amended on 5 May 2005, 17 November 2005, 22 March 2007 and 15 January 2009, Gazette Vol. 135, p. 926; Vol. 136, p. 342; Vol. 137, p. 926; Vol. 139, p. 507), delete 'in accordance with section 9 of Statute VIII' and substitute 'in accordance with section 8 of Statute VIII'.

Changes to Regulations

1. Education Committee

Proposal to amend the regulations governing the Postgraduate Diploma in Paediatric Infectious Diseases: communication from the Continuing Education Board

With immediate effect

In Examination Regulations 2010, p 1006

Delete from p. 1040, l. 44 to p. 1042, l. 5 and insert:

'1. The course will consist of lectures, written assignments and online Interactive case studies in the field of paediatric infectious disease. The course may be taken on a part-time basis over a period which shall normally be of two years' duration but shall not exceed three years' duration.

2. Every candidate must normally:

(a) Attend a residential course held annually in Oxford entitled "Infection and Immunity in Children".

(b) Attend a second residential course held annually in Oxford entitled "Infection and Immunity in Children" (with a different course syllabus each year).

(c) Attend the residential PENTA-ESPID (Tr@inforPedHIV) training course in paediatric HIV medicine.

(d) Complete Online PENTA-ESPID(Tr@inforPedHIV) module in paediatric HIV medicine.

(e) Actively participate in seven ESPID Online Case Rounds.

(f) Actively participate in one four week PENTA-ESPID(Tr@inforPedHIV) Online Case Discussion in paediatric HIV medicine.

(g) Actively participate in six online multiple choice sessions.

3. Every candidate shall be required to satisfy the examiners in the following:

(a) Active participation, to the satisfaction of the Course Director, in all parts of the course.

(b) A written assignment consisting of either:

i. An audit of clinical practice in paediatric infectious disease of no more than 4000 words.

Or

ii. A case study and literature review of no more than 4000 words.

And

iii. A short oral presentation.

(c) A written assignment consisting of either:

i. A dissertation in an area of special interest of no more than 8000 words.

Or

ii. A project report describing a research study in the field of paediatric infectious diseases undertaken by the candidate of no more than 8000 words written in the style of a scientific paper with abstract, introduction/background, methods, results and conclusion.

(d) An examination consisting of multiple choice questions in paediatric infectious diseases covering the topics outlined in the schedule for training in paediatric infectious disease summarised below.

The assignments under 3(b) and 3(c) shall be forwarded to the examiners c/o Registry, Department of Continuing Education, 1 Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JA, for consideration by such date as the examiners shall determine and of which they shall notify candidates. The assessed work will, in normal circumstances, be submitted through an electronic submission system.

Candidates may be required to attend a viva voce examination at the end of the course of studies at the discretion of the examiners.

The examiners may award a distinction to candidates for the Postgraduate Diploma

6. A candidate who fails to satisfy the examiners in the assignments under 3(b) and 3(c) or the examination under 3(d) above may normally be permitted to resubmit work in respect of the part or parts of the examination which they have failed on not more than one occasion which shall normally be within one year of the original failure.'

Changes to Regulations

2. Humanities Divisional Board

Academic Committee

Correction to Examination Regulations 2010:

Honour Moderations in Classical Archaeology and Ancient History

With immediate effect

In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 73, delete ll. 44–6 and substitute:

'The prescribed plays are Acharnians and Lysistrata. Compulsory passages for comment will be set from these. Candidates will also be expected to be familiar with Frogs.'

[Note: The syllabus prescribed in Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 73, was included in error, and will apply for the first time in the academic year 2011/12. The syllabus remains unchanged from the prescription in Examination Regulations 2009.] Changes to Regulations

MEDICAL SCIENCES BOARD

(a) Preliminary Examination in Biomedical Sciences

With effect from 1 October 2011 (for first examination in 2012)

1 In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 58, after l. 8 insert:

'Biomedical Sciences

Medical Sciences Division'

2 Ibid., p. 62, after l. 5 insert:
'Biomedical Sciences

3rd'

3 Ibid., p. 105, after l. 19 insert:

'Special Regulations for the Preliminary Examination in Biomedical Sciences

1. The subjects of the Preliminary Examination in Biomedical Sciences shall be:

- (1) Systems
- (2) Cells, Molecules and Genes
- (3) Mathematics and Statistics

2. The syllabus, number of papers, and their format shall be as prescribed by regulation by the Medical Sciences Board.

3. A candidate shall be deemed to have passed the examination if he or she has satisfied the Moderators in all three subjects.

4. Candidates must offer all three subjects at one examination, provided that a candidate who has failed in one, two or all three subjects may offer that number of subjects again on one further occasion.

5. The Moderators may award a Distinction to candidates of special merit who have satisfied them in all three subjects at a single examination.

B

One written paper will be set in each subject. The duration of the written papers will be three hours for subjects 1 and 2, and two hours for subject 3.

All candidates shall be assessed as to their practical ability in coursework under the following provisions:

(a) The Course Director, or a deputy, shall make available to the Moderators, at the end of the fifth week of the term in which the examinations are held, evidence showing the extent and the standard to which each candidate has completed the prescribed coursework.

(b) Coursework cannot normally be retaken. Candidates whose attendance or performance is deemed unsatisfactory may be required by the Moderators to submit to further examination. Failure to satisfy the Moderators in the coursework associated with an examination paper will normally constitute failure of that examination paper.

Schedule

1. Systems

a. Body: cardiovascular; respiratory; renal and gastrointestinal systems

b. Brain: introduction to neuroscience; neuroanatomy overview; sensory; motor; neural development; learning and memory; sleep, dreams, and consciousness

c. Behaviour: memory; language; awareness and attention; decision-making and rationality; disorders; social; genetics of diseases

2. Cells, Molecules and Genes

a. Cells: cell division and cell cycle; inter- and intra-cellular signalling; excitable tissues; membrane transport; general principles of pharmacology

b. Molecules: DNA/RNA structure; protein structure; lipids and membrane structure; energy metabolism

c. Genes: fundamentals of genes; molecular biology techniques

3. Mathematics and Statistics'

(b) Preliminary Examination in Physiological Sciences

With effect from 1 October 2011

1. The subjects of the examination shall be:

- (1) Neurophysiology
- (2) Introduction to Philosophy
- (3) Introduction to Probability Theory and Statistics
- (4) Introduction to Psychology

2. A candidate shall be allowed to offer themselves for examination in one, two, or three subjects.

3. A candidate shall be deemed to have passed the examination if he or she shall have satisfied the Moderators in three subjects.

4. In the case of candidates who have satisfied the Moderators in three subjects in a single examination the Moderators may award a Distinction to those of special merit.

B

(1) Neurophysiology

Excitable Tissues. Membrane potential, ion pumps. Action potential, refractory period. Receptor potentials. Neuromuscular transmission. Synaptic mechanisms.

Chemical Transmitters. Storage and release of transmitter. Removal and synthesis of transmitter. Selected drugs acting on the nervous system.

Efferent Mechanisms. Muscle contraction. Muscle receptors. Spinal reflexes. Higher motor centres. Autonomic nervous system.

Afferent Mechanisms. Hearing. Vision. Somaesthetic system, including pain.

One three-hour paper will be set.

(2) Introduction to Philosophy

As specified for the Preliminary Examination for Philosophy, Politics, and Economics.

(3) Introduction to Probability Theory and Statistics

This examination is intended to test the candidate's understanding of the elements of probability theory and of the principles of statistics as applied to the design and analysis of surveys and experiments and to the interpretation of the results of such investigations. The topics below are more fully detailed in Definitions and Formulae with Statistical Tables for Elementary Statistics and Quantitative Methods Courses, which is prepared by the Department of Statistics. Copies of this will be available at the examination.

Descriptive statistics and statistical presentation using graphs and simple measures of central tendency and dispersion. Frequency distributions. Samples and populations. The addition and multiplication laws of probability; conditional probability and Bayes' Rule. The binomial, Poisson and normal distributions: their properties and uses and the relationships between them. Statistical inference using sampling distributions, standard errors and confidence limits. Common uses of z, t, chi-square and F tests and nonparametric tests including tests of hypothesis for the mean, median or proportion of a single population or for the difference between two or more populations, goodness-of-fit tests and tests of difference between two population distributions.

The analysis of 2-way contingency tables using chi-square tests. Linear regression and correlation.

A comprehensive list of formulae together with statistical tables will be available at the examination.

One three-hour paper will be set.

(4) Introduction to Psychology

Methods and topics in: development; individual differences; social behaviour; animal behaviour; the neural basis of behaviour; perception; learning; memory; language; cognition; skills; abnormal behaviour.

One three-hour paper will be set.

For papers (3) and (4) only, examiners will permit the use of any hand-held pocket calculator subject to the conditions set out under the heading 'Use of calculators in examinations' in the Regulations for the Conduct of University Examinations.

(d) Preliminary Examination in Psychology, Philosophy and Physiology

With effect from October 2011

1 In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 59, delete l. 32-3.

2 Ibid., p. 62, delete l. 31-2.

3 Ibid., p. 153, delete from l. 12 to p. 154, l. 41.

(e) Honour School of Cell and Systems Biology

With effect from 1 October 2012 (for first Part I examination in 2013, and first Part II examination in 2014)

1 In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 64, after l. 6, insert:

'Cell and Systems Biology

Medical Sciences Division'

2 Ibid., p. 171, after l. 50, insert on a new page:

'SPECIAL REGULATIONS FOR THE HONOUR SCHOOL OF CELL AND SYSTEMS BIOLOGY

1. The subject of the Honour School of Cell and Systems Biology shall be all aspects of the scientific study of the development and functioning of living organisms with particular but not exclusive reference to mammals.

2. No candidate shall be admitted to examination in this school unless he or she has either passed or been exempted from the First Public Examination.

3. The examination in this school shall be under the supervision of the Medical Sciences Board, which shall make regulations concerning it.

4. The examination in Cell and Systems Biology shall consist of two parts: Part I and Part II.

5. No candidate shall be admitted to the Part II examination in this school unless he or she has passed the Part I examination in this school.

6. The examination for Part I will take place during Week 0 or 1 in Trinity Term of the candidate's second year. The examination for Part II will take place during Trinity Term of the candidate's third year.

7. In addition to the form of examination prescribed below, candidates may be examined viva voce in either part of the examination.

8. Candidates for Part II may offer themselves for examination in one or more of the Supplementary Subjects. The Supplementary Subjects available in any year will be notified to students annually during Trinity Term. Account shall be taken of a candidate's results in any such subject in the candidate's overall classification in the Honour School of Cell and Systems Biology. Candidates awarded a pass in a Supplementary Subject examination may not retake the same Supplementary Subject examination.

PART I

1. Candidates will attend lectures and practicals in subjects totalling five full options from a list published in the University Gazette by Week 8 in Trinity Term in the year preceding the examination. The handbook for the course will specify which options are recommended to proceed to particular options in Part II.

2. Options offered from the Honour School of Experimental Psychology Part I will be examined by Papers I-IV as specified for that examination. Candidates will be expected to show knowledge of the appropriate components of the papers relating to their chosen option or options.

3. All other options will be examined by one-hour papers requiring short answers. Shorter papers will be set on half options. Candidates will be required to offer papers in each option or half option that they have chosen.

4. Candidates will be required to undertake practical work as specified in the course handbook which will constitute part of the examination. The Course Director, or a deputy, shall make available to the Examiners, at the end of Week 9 of Hilary Term in which the examinations are held, evidence showing the extent and the standard to which each candidate has completed the prescribed practical work. Practical work cannot normally be retaken. Candidates whose attendance or performance is deemed unsatisfactory may be required by the Examiners to submit to further examination. Failure to satisfy the Examiners in the practical work associated with an examination paper will normally constitute failure of that examination paper.

PART II

1. Each candidate must offer timed written examination papers and a project report based on a research project.

2. The options of the school shall be:

A Neuroscience

B Molecular Medicine

C Myocardial, vascular and respiratory biology

D Infection and Immunity

E Signalling in health and disease

as specified for the Honour School of Medical Sciences.

2. Each candidate must offer 4 written papers: Paper 1 for two chosen options, Paper 2, and Paper 3 as specified for the Honour School of Medical Sciences, except that Paper 1 for the second chosen option will require candidates to answer 2 questions in 2 hours.

3. The Research Project

The research project will normally be carried out in the Trinity Term of the candidate's second year and the Michaelmas Term of the candidate's third year.

(i) Form, subject and approval of the project

The project shall consist of original experiments done by the candidate alone or in collaboration with others (where such collaboration is, for instance, needed to produce results in the time available).

A list of potential supervisors and their research interests shall be published no later than the end of Week 6 of Hilary Term in the academic year preceding the examination. Candidates should normally discuss their intended project with the potential supervisor and their tutor before submitting a project outline to the course administrator no later than noon, Friday of Week 0 of Trinity Term of the academic year preceding the examination. Decision on the application shall be made by the Course

Director, or a deputy, and communicated to candidates by Friday of Week 1 of the same term.

(ii) Submission of the Project Report

The length and format of the Project Report based on the project shall be according to guidelines published by the Medical Sciences Board in Week 6 of Hilary Term of the academic year preceding the year of examination. Material in a candidate's Project Report must not be duplicated in any answer given in a written examination paper. Project Reports previously submitted for the Honour School of Cell and Systems Biology may be resubmitted. No Project Report will be accepted if it has already been submitted, wholly or substantially, for another Honour School or degree of this University, or for a degree of any other institution.

Project Reports (three copies) must be sent to the Chairman of Examiners, Honour School of Cell and Systems Biology, Examination Schools, High Street, Oxford, not later than noon on the Friday of Week 1 of Hilary Term in the academic year in which the candidate intends to take the examination. The copies shall be accompanied (in a separate sealed envelope) by a certificate signed by each candidate indicating that the research project is the candidate's own work and that the supervisor has commented on no more than the first draft of the Project Report. In the case of laboratory-based work that has been produced in collaboration, the certificate shall indicate the extent of the candidate's own contribution.

In exceptional cases, where through unforeseen circumstances a laboratory-based project produces no useable results (i.e. not even negative or ambiguous results), the candidate may apply through his or her college to the Course Director, or a deputy, for permission to submit a concise review of the scientific context and the aims of the work that was attempted in place of the normal Project Report. Such an application must be accompanied by supporting evidence from the supervisor of the project. The concise review to be submitted in such circumstances should be comparable in length to the Report of a successful laboratory-based project and will be presented orally to the examiners and be examined viva voce in the usual way for a research project. The examiners will be advised that substantive results could not be produced.

In all cases, the examiners shall obtain and consider a written report from each supervisor indicating the extent of the input made by the candidate to the outcome of the project and also any unforeseen difficulties associated with the project (e.g. unexpected technical issues or problems in the availability of materials, equipment, or literature or other published data).

(iii) Oral Assessment of project-based written work

In addition, each candidate shall make a brief oral presentation of their project to a group of two examiners (or examiners and assessors appointed to ensure an adequate representation of expertise), after which, the candidate shall be examined viva voce on the project. The form of the presentation to the examiners shall be specified in guidelines published by the Medical Sciences Board.

4. The weighting of marks for the five exercises required of each candidate shall be 25 per cent for the Project Report based on the research project, 15 per cent for Papers 1, 2 and 3, except that Paper 1 for the second chosen option will carry 10 per cent of the marks. Marks carried forward from the Part I examination will account for the remaining 20 per cent for the candidate's overall result for the Honour School of Cell and Systems Biology.

(f) Honour School of Neuroscience

With effect from 1 October 2012 (for first Part I examination in 2013, and first Part II examination in 2014)

1 In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 65, after l. 33, insert:

'Neuroscience

Medical Sciences Division'

2 Ibid., p. 380, after l. 14 insert on a new page:

'SPECIAL REGULATIONS FOR THE HONOUR SCHOOL OF NEUROSCIENCE

1. The subject of the Honour School of Neuroscience shall be all aspects of the scientific study of the nervous system.

2. No candidate shall be admitted to examination in this school unless he or she has either passed or been exempted from the First Public Examination.

3. The examination in this school shall be under the supervision of the Medical Sciences Board, which shall make regulations concerning it.

4. The examination in Neuroscience shall consist of two parts: Part I and Part II.

5. No candidate shall be admitted to the Part II examination in this school unless he or she has passed the Part I examination in this school.

6. The examination for Part I will take place during Week 0 or 1 in Trinity Term of the candidate's second year. The examination for Part II will take place during Trinity Term of the candidate's third year.

7. In addition to the form of examination prescribed below, candidates may be examined viva voce in either part of the examination.

8. Candidates for Part II may offer themselves for examination in one or more of the Supplementary Subjects. The Supplementary Subjects available in any year will be notified to students annually during Trinity Term. Account shall be taken of a candidate's results in any such subject in the candidate's overall classification in the Honour School of Cell and Systems Biology. Candidates awarded a pass in a Supplementary Subject examination may not retake the same Supplementary Subject examination.

PART I

1. Candidates will attend lectures and practicals in subjects totalling five full options from a list published in the University Gazette by Week 8 in Trinity Term in the year preceding the examination. The handbook for the course will specify which options are recommended to proceed to particular options in Part II.

2. Options offered from the Honour School of Experimental Psychology Part I will be examined by Papers I-IV as specified for that examination. Candidates will be expected to show knowledge of the appropriate components of the papers relating to their chosen option or options.

3. All other options will be examined by one-hour papers requiring short answers. Shorter papers will be set on half options. Candidates will be required to offer papers in each option or half option that they have chosen.

4. Candidates will be required to undertake practical work as specified in the course handbook which will constitute part of the examination. The Course Director, or a deputy, shall make available to the Examiners, at the end of Week 9 of Hilary Term in which the examinations are held, evidence showing the extent and the standard to which each candidate has completed the prescribed practical work. Practical work cannot normally be retaken. Candidates whose attendance or performance is deemed unsatisfactory may be required by the Examiners to submit to further examination. Failure to satisfy the Examiners in the practical work associated with an examination paper will normally constitute failure of that examination paper.

PART II

1. Each candidate must offer timed written examination papers and a project report based on a research project.

2. Each candidate must offer 4 written papers: Paper 1A, Neuroscience, and Paper 2 as specified for the Honour School of Medical Sciences; two advanced options as specified for the Honour School of Experimental Psychology Part II.

3. The Research Project

The research project will normally be carried out in the Trinity Term of the candidate's second year and the Michaelmas Term of the candidate's third year.

(i) Form, subject and approval of the project

The project shall consist of original experiments done by the candidate alone or in collaboration with others (where such collaboration is, for instance, needed to produce results in the time available).

A list of potential supervisors and their research interests shall be published no later than the end of Week 6 of Hilary Term in the academic year preceding the examination. Candidates should normally discuss their intended project with the potential supervisor and their tutor before submitting a project outline to the course administrator no later than noon, Friday of Week 0 of Trinity Term of the academic year preceding the examination. Decision on the application shall be made by the Course Director, or a deputy, and communicated to candidates by Friday of Week 1 of the same term.

(ii) Submission of the Project Report

The length and format of the Project Report based on the project shall be according to guidelines published by the Medical Sciences Board in Week 6 of Hilary Term of the academic year preceding the year of examination. Material in a candidate's Project Report must not be duplicated in any answer given in a written examination paper. Project Reports previously submitted for the Honour School of Cell and Systems Biology may be resubmitted. No Project Report will be accepted if it has already been submitted, wholly or substantially, for another Honour School or degree of this University, or for a degree of any other institution.

Project Reports (three copies) must be sent to the Chairman of Examiners, Honour School of Cell and Systems Biology, Examination Schools, High Street, Oxford, not later than noon on the Friday of Week 1 of Hilary Term in the academic year in which the candidate intends to take the examination. The copies shall be accompanied (in a separate sealed envelope) by a certificate signed by each candidate indicating that the research project is the candidate's own work and that the supervisor has commented on no more than the first draft of the Project Report. In the case of laboratory-based work that has been produced in collaboration, the certificate shall indicate the extent of the candidate's own contribution.

In exceptional cases, where through unforeseen circumstances a laboratory-based project produces no useable results (i.e. not even negative or ambiguous results), the candidate may apply through his or her college to the Course Director, or a deputy, for permission to submit a concise review of the scientific context and the aims of the work that was attempted in place of the normal Project Report. Such an application must be accompanied by supporting evidence from the supervisor of the project. The concise review to be submitted in such circumstances should be comparable in length to the Report of a successful laboratory-based project and will be presented orally to the examiners and be examined viva voce in the usual way for a research project. The examiners will be advised that substantive results could not be produced.

In all cases, the examiners shall obtain and consider a written report from each supervisor indicating the extent of the input made by the candidate to the outcome of the project and also any unforeseen difficulties associated with the project (e.g. unexpected technical issues or problems in the availability of materials, equipment, or literature or other published data).

(iii) Oral Assessment of project-based written work

In addition, each candidate shall make a brief oral presentation of their project to a group of two examiners (or examiners and assessors appointed to ensure an adequate representation of expertise), after which, the candidate shall be examined viva voce on the project. The form of the presentation to the examiners shall be specified in guidelines published by the Medical Sciences Board.

4. The weighting of marks for the five exercises required of each candidate shall be

25 per cent for the Project Report based on the research project and 55 per cent in total for the four written papers. Marks carried forward from the Part I examination will account for the remaining 20 per cent for the candidate's overall result for the Honour School of Neuroscience.'

In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 249, l. 43 - l. 48, delete:

'The Head of Department, or deputy, shall inform the examiners by the end of the noughth week of the Trinity Term in which the Part I examination is to be held (a) as to which candidates have failed to satisfy the requirement to undertake practical work, and (b) as to which candidates have failed to satisfy the requirement to submit portfolios.'

and substitute:

'The Head of Department or deputy shall inform the examiners by the end of Week 0 of the Trinity Term in which the Part I examination is to be held as to which candidates have (a) failed to satisfy the requirement to undertake practical work or (b) failed to submit a portfolio.'

(h) Special Regulations For Philosophy In All Honour Schools Including Philosophy

With effect from 1 October 2012 (for first Part I examination in 2013, and first Part II examination in 2014)

In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 408, after l. 16, insert new section:

'Psychology and Philosophy

Candidates may take at most five subjects in Philosophy. All candidates must take eight subjects in total. Candidates may only take subjects in Psychology if they offer Psychology Parts I and II.

Candidates who take one subject in Philosophy may take any subject, except 121, in conformity with the General Regulations. Candidates who take two subjects in Philosophy must take at least one of 101, 102, 104, or 125. Those offering three or more Philosophy subjects must choose at least two from the above list. Their further subjects taken in Philosophy must be chosen in conformity with the General Regulations.'

(J) HONOUR SCHOOL OF PSYCHOLOGY AND PHILOSOPHY

With effect from 1 October 2012 (for first Part I examination in 2013, and first Part II examination in 2014)

1 In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 66, after l. 6, insert:

'Psychology and Philosophy

Medical Sciences Division and Faculty of Philosophy'

2 Ibid., p. 443, after l. 41 insert on a new page:

'SPECIAL REGULATIONS FOR THE HONOUR SCHOOL OF PSYCHOLOGY AND PHILOSOPHY

A

1. All candidates shall be examined in Psychology and Philosophy.

2. No candidate shall be admitted to the examination in this school unless

(a) he or she has either passed or been exempted from the First Public Examination; and

(b) he or she has satisfied the Moderators for the Preliminary Examination in Psychology and Philosophy in the subject Introduction to Probability Theory and Statistics or has passed the Qualifying Examination in Statistics for this school.

The Head of the Department of Experimental Psychology may dispense a candidate from the Qualifying Examination in Statistics in cases where it is clear that the candidate has reached an adequate standard in Statistics by virtue of previous study and qualification.

3. The examination shall consist of two parts. Part I shall consist of papers in Psychology. Part II shall consist of papers in Psychology and Philosophy.

4. No candidate shall be admitted for the Part II examination in this school unless he or she has passed the Part I examination.

6. The Examination Board shall comprise such of the Public Examiners in the Honour School of Experimental Psychology as may be required, and such examiners in Philosophy as are nominated by a committee of which the two elected members shall be appointed by the Board of the Faculty of Philosophy.

7. The examinations in this school shall be under the joint supervision of the Medical Sciences Board and the Philosophy Faculty Board which shall make regulations concerning them subject always to the preceding clauses of this sub-section.

B

Candidates must take five papers for Part I and six papers for Part II. The five papers for Psychology Part I shall count as two papers for the Final Honour School.

The examination for Psychology Part I shall be taken during Weeks 0 and 1 of Trinity Term of the candidate's second year. The examination for Psychology Part II and for Philosophy shall be held during Trinity Term of the candidate's third year. The dates of submission for assessed work are those prescribed in sections 2-3 below.

The subjects in Psychology shall be those specified in 2. Psychology below; and in Philosophy those listed in the Special Regulations for Philosophy in all Honour Schools including Philosophy.

Candidates may offer either a research project or a library dissertation in Psychology, or a thesis in Philosophy.

There are further restrictions on the choice of subjects and requirements to be satisfied which are set out below.

The highest honours can be obtained by excellence in either branch of the School, provided that the candidate has taken sufficient subjects in the branch and that adequate knowledge is shown in the other branch of examination.

Every candidate shall give notice to the Academic Registrar and Secretary of Faculties of all papers being offered not later than Friday in Week 8 of Michaelmas Full Term preceding the examination.

2. PSYCHOLOGY

PART I

1. The five written papers as specified for Part I of the Honour School of Experimental Psychology will be set:

Paper I Biological Bases of Behaviour

Component parts: (i) Cognitive Neuroscience, (ii) Behavioural Neuroscience.

Paper II Human Experimental Psychology 1

Component parts: (i) Perception, (ii) Memory, Attention, and Information Processing.

Paper III Human Experimental Psychology 2

Component parts: (1) Language and Cognition, (ii) Developmental Psychology. Paper IV Social Psychology, and Individual Differences and Psychological Disorders.

Component parts: (i) Social Psychology, (ii) Individual Differences and Psychological Disorders.

Paper V Experimental Design and Statistics

Candidates will be required to answer essays and short answer questions in four of the eight components of Papers I-IV. All candidates are required to offer Paper V.

Candidates who wish to be deemed eligible for Graduate Basis of Registration (GBR) for the British Psychological Society (BPS) must ensure that the components they select provide coverage of all five of the areas defined in the GBR curriculum. In order to achieve this, candidates must offer one component from each of four areas, chosen from the five areas prescribed below:

1. Cognitive Neuroscience or Behavioural Neuroscience from Paper I 2. Perception; or Memory, Attention and Information Processing; or Language and Cognition from Papers II and III; 3. Developmental Psychology from Paper III; 4. Social Psychology from Paper IV; 5. Individual Differences and Psychological Disorders from paper IV.

In addition, candidates must sit additional short answer questions covering one component from the remaining fifth area.

The other requirements for BPS Graduate Membership are set out in Part II below.

Qualifying Examination in Statistics

Any candidate who has not satisfied the Moderators for the Preliminary Examination for Psychology and Philosophy in the subject Introduction to Probability Theory and Statistics must pass a Qualifying Examination in Statistics before being admitted for examination in the Honour School. The Head of the Department of Experimental Psychology shall have the capacity to dispense a candidate from the examination in cases where it is clear that an individual has reached an adequate standard by virtue of previous study and qualification.

The syllabus and paper set for the examination shall be that for the subject Introduction to Probability Theory and Statistics in the Preliminary Examination in Psychology and Philosophy.

For all papers in Psychology and for the Qualifying Examination in Statistics, the examiners will permit the use of any hand-held pocket calculator subject to the conditions set out under the heading 'Use of calculators in examinations' in the Regulations for the Conduct of University Examinations.

Practical work

Candidates will be required to undertake practical work, as specified by the Head of the Department of Experimental Psychology, and this will constitute a part of the examination. In exceptional circumstances the Proctors may dispense a candidate from the specified requirements on the recommendation of the Head of Department or deputy.

Candidates shall submit to the Chairman of Examiners, Honour School of Psychology and Philosophy, Examination Schools, High Street, Oxford, not later than Week 10 in Hilary Term preceding the term in which the Part I examination is to be held, portfolios containing reports of their practical work completed during their course of study for Part I. These portfolios shall be available to the examiners as a part of the examination. Each portfolio shall be accompanied by a certificate signed by the candidate indicating that the portfolio submitted is the candidate's own work. This certificate must be submitted separately in a sealed envelope addressed to the Chairman of Examiners. Where the work submitted has been produced in collaboration, the candidates shall indicate the extent of their own contributions. Reports of practical work previously submitted for the Honour School of Psychology and Philosophy may be resubmitted but reports will not be accepted if they have already been submitted, wholly or substantially, for another Honour School or degree of this University, or for a degree of any other institution. The Head of Department or deputy shall inform the examiners by the end of Week 0 of the Trinity Term in which the Part I examination is to be held as to which candidates have (a) failed to satisfy the requirement to undertake practical work or (b) failed to submit a portfolio. Candidates in category (a) will be deemed to have failed Paper V. Candidates in category (b) will be deemed to have failed the entire Part I examination. The Head of Department or deputy shall also make available records showing the extent to which candidates have adequately pursued a course of practical work. The examiners shall take this evidence into consideration along with evidence of unsatisfactory or distinguished performance in each portfolio of practical work.

A candidate who fails the Part I examination may retake the examination once only, in the Long Vacation of the same academic year as the original examination. The highest mark that can be awarded to a candidate retaking the examination is a Pass.

PART II

Candidates must offer six papers for Part II. At least one and at most three of the papers must be in Psychology, the others to be chosen from those available in Philosophy below. Candidates taking three papers in Psychology may offer a Research Project or a Library Dissertation in place of one of the three Psychology papers. Candidates may substitute one paper from the list below in place of one of the Psychology Advanced Options:

Animal Behaviour

General Linguistics

Phonetics and phonology.

In order to be deemed eligible for Graduate Membership of the BPS, candidates must take at least two subjects in Part II Psychology.

Written papers, research project, and Library Dissertation:

Each candidate will be examined in either one, two or three areas of Psychology by means of one, two or three written papers, each of three hours or two written papers, each of three hours, and either a research project or a Library Dissertation. The written papers will be selected from the list of at least 12 options approved by the Medical Sciences Division and published at the Department of Experimental Psychology. A list of options will be posted in the Department of Experimental Psychology not later than noon on Friday of Week 5 of Hilary Term in the year preceding that in which the examination is taken.

Research Project

As specified for the Honour School of Experimental Psychology.

Library Dissertation

As specified for the Honour School of Experimental Psychology.

Candidates will be required to undertake practical work, as specified by the Head of the Department of Experimental Psychology, and this will constitute a part of the examination. In exceptional circumstances the Proctors may dispense a candidate from the specified requirements on the recommendation of the Head of Department or deputy. Candidates shall submit to the Chairman of Examiners, Honour School of Psychology and Philosophy, Examination Schools, High Street, Oxford, not later than Week 10 in the Hilary Term preceding the term in which the Part II examination is to be held, portfolios containing reports of their practical work. These portfolios shall be available to the examiners as part of the examination. Each portfolio shall be accompanied by a certificate signed by the candidate indicating that the portfolio submitted is the candidate's own work. This certificate must be submitted separately in a sealed envelope addressed to the Chairman of Examiners. Where the work submitted has been produced in collaboration, the candidates shall indicate the extent of their own contributions. Reports of practical work previously submitted for the Honour School of Psychology and Philosophy may be resubmitted but reports will not be accepted if they have already been submitted, wholly or substantially, for another Honour School or degree of this University, or for a degree of any other institution. The Head of Department or deputy shall inform the examiners by the end of Week 0 of the Trinity Term in which the Part II examination is to be held as to which candidates have failed to satisfy the requirement to undertake practical work. Failure to satisfy the requirement to undertake practical work will result in the candidate's final degree classification being lowered by one class. Candidates who fail to submit a portfolio will be deemed to have failed the entire Part II examination. The Head of Department or deputy shall also make available records showing the extent to which candidates have adequately pursued a course of practical work. The examiners shall take this evidence into consideration along with evidence of unsatisfactory or distinguished performance in each portfolio of practical work.

3. PHILOSOPHY

Candidates must satisfy both the General Regulations, and those relating specifically to Psychology and Philosophy in the Special Regulations for Philosophy in all Honour Schools including Philosophy.

Notes on elections: 25 November

Where it is specified in the above list that the nominee must be from among certain persons 'working in' a Department or other institution, both the nominee and the nominators must be persons so working at the time of the election.

Nominations in writing for the elections on 25 November, by four members of Congregation other than the candidate, will be received by the Elections Office at the University Offices, Wellington Square, up to 4 p.m. on Thursday, 28 October.

Council has decided that nominations should show for each signatory the name and college or department in block capitals. Any names which are not so shown may not be published.

At least one nomination in respect of each candidate must be made on an official nomination form. Copies of the form are obtainable from the Elections Office or from the Elections Office website.

Candidates are invited to include with their nomination forms, a written statement of no more than 250 words, setting out his or her reasons for standing and qualifications for the office being sought. In the event of a contested election, these statements will be available online <http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/> and published in the Gazette dated 11 November.

Voters may wish to wait until they have read these notes before returning their ballot papers.

Ballot papers will be sent out to members of Congregation as soon as possible after the closing date for nominations. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 25 November.

For further information about the committee or body concerned, please contact the individual Secretary, either via the email links above, or as listed in the University of Oxford Calendar, 2010-11.

Where it is specified in the above list that the nominee must be from among certain persons 'working in' a Department or other institution, both the nominee and the nominators must be persons so working at the time of the election.

Nominations in writing for the elections on 2 December, by four members of Congregation other than the candidate, will be received by the Elections Office at the University Offices, Wellington Square, up to 4 p.m. on Thursday, 4 November.

Council has decided that nominations should show for each signatory the name and college or department in block capitals. Any names which are not so shown may not be published.

At least one nomination in respect of each candidate must be made on an official nomination form. Copies of the form are obtainable from the Elections Office or from the Elections Office website.

Candidates are invited to include with their nomination forms, a written statement of no more than 250 words, setting out his or her reasons for standing and qualifications for the office being sought. In the event of a contested election, these statements will be available online <http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/> and published in the Gazette dated 18 November.

Voters may wish to wait until they have read these notes before returning their ballot papers.

Ballot papers will be sent out to members of Congregation as soon as possible after the closing date for nominations. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 2 December.

For further information about the committee or body concerned, please contact the individual Secretary, either via the email links above, or as listed in the University of Oxford Calendar, 2010-11.

Advertising enquiries

Email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk

Telephone: 01865 (2)80548

Fax: 01865 (2)70178

Post: Gazette Advertisements,
Public Affairs Directorate,
University Offices,
Wellington Square,
Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline

Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges

Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £20 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in 'Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements' below.)

External advertisers: £25 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.

For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length

The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment

Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit-card or debit-card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

Note. Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the web-site. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque

Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note. Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency. If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General

1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be e-mailed automatically to the e-mail address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges

6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at <http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm>.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer

7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers' Warranty and Indemnity

13. The advertiser warrants:

(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.

(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person's intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette

16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council

Changes in Regulations

The Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 19 November.

Establishment of Professorship of Informatics

Explanatory Note

These changes, made on the recommendation of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council, establish a Professorship of Informatics held in the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division. The Professor will teach and undertake research in Informatics and Algorithms and will be on the establishment of the Computing Laboratory in the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division.

Text of Regulations

1 In SCHEDULE A of Council Regulations 3 of 2004, concerning statutory professorships, after 'Chichele Professor of the History of War' insert:

'Professor of Informatics'.

2 In Sect III of Council Regulations 24 of 2002, concerning individual professorships (Statutes, 2000, p. 442, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1461) insert new § 142 as follows and renumber existing § 142–56 as § 143–57:

§ 142. Professor of Informatics

1. There shall be a Professor of Informatics, who shall undertake research in and shall lecture and give instruction in that subject and generally promote its study in the University.

2. The professor shall be elected by an electoral board consisting of:

(1) the Vice-Chancellor, or, if the head of the college specified in paragraph (2) of this regulation is Vice-Chancellor, a person appointed by Council;

(2) the head of the college to which the professorship shall be for the time being allocated by Council under any regulation in that behalf, or if the head is unable or unwilling to act, a person appointed by the governing body of the college;

(3) a person appointed by the governing body of the college specified in paragraph (2) of this regulation;

(4)–(5) two persons appointed by Council;

(6)–(9) four persons appointed by the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Board.

3. The professor shall be subject to the General Provisions of the regulations concerning the duties of professors and to those Particular Provisions of the same regulations which are applicable to this chair.'

Advertising enquiries

Email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk

Telephone: 01865 (2)80548

Fax: 01865 (2)70178

Post: Gazette Advertisements,
Public Affairs Directorate,
University Offices,
Wellington Square,
Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline

Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges

Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £20 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in 'Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements' below.)

External advertisers: £25 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.

For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length

The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment

Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit-card or debit-card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

Note. Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the web-site. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque

Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note. Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency. If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General

1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be e-mailed automatically to the e-mail address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges

6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at <http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm>.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer

7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers' Warranty and Indemnity

13. The advertiser warrants:

(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.

(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person's intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette

16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

Congregation

30 November 2 p.m.

¶ Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 22 November, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to vote against, or propose an amendment to, the resolutions below

(see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the resolutions shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

Voting on resolutions to consult affected employees on the changes that have been proposed to the Universities Superannuation Scheme

Text of Resolutions

Congregation notes that the University as an employer has a statutory obligation, under the Occupational and Personal Pension Schemes (Consultation by Employers and Miscellaneous Amendment) Regulations 2006, to consult affected employees on the changes that have been proposed to the Universities Superannuation Scheme (USS).

Congregation further notes:

- (a) that persons who are active members of USS or are eligible to join the scheme have received as part of that consultation process a copy of a USS document outlining the proposed changes and a document from the Employers Pension Forum for Higher Education (EPF) which purports to explain 'why changes are needed' and that 'the proposed changes are considered by the employers to be right for the benefit of the scheme and its members'; and
- (b) that as the body representing all employee members of USS under the rules of the Scheme, the University and College Union has published on its website (at <http://www.ucu.org.uk/index.cfm?articleid=4598>) criticism of the process being followed by Higher Education employers in carrying out the consultation, and (at http://www.ucu.org.uk/media/pdf/q/9/USS_statement2_Oct10.pdf) a critique of the EPF document.

Believing that consultation, if it is to be meaningful, must seek the views of those consulted when the latter have been provided with all the information necessary for them to make an informed response, Congregation determines that the University will:

- (i) publish to all affected employees the alternative proposals for changes to USS put forward by the EPF and by UCU, together with supporting arguments for each;
- (ii) conduct a consultative ballot on those alternative proposals;
- (iii) publish the result of the ballot to scheme members within the University;
- (iv) send the ballot result to USS as the principal local response to the statutory consultation exercise; and
- (v) ensure all members of USS are able to engage in the process and that their comments are fully reflected in the institution's response to USS and that they are published locally.

Note on procedures in Congregation

¶ Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 160, as amended on 12 October 2004, Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

Notices

Consultative notice

Universities Superannuation Scheme (USS) Consultation

Following many months of discussions about changes to the USS pension scheme, a package of proposals put forward by the USS Joint Negotiating Committee has been accepted by the USS Trustee Board, subject to consultation with affected members and their representatives.

The consultation period runs from 20 October 2010 until 22 December 2010. During this period, USS members and those who are eligible to join USS, together with recognised employee representatives, have the opportunity to consider the proposed changes and provide their responses. Once the consultation period ends, the USS Trustee Board will consider all the comments received from affected members and their representatives before it decides on the final form of any changes.

To find out more about the proposed changes, and to provide your response, visit www.ussconsultation.co.uk. An information pack about the consultation has been distributed by post to those eligible to take part.

The proposed changes are supported by the Employers' Pension Forum (EPF), the national body representing the employers, but opposed by the University and College Union (UCU), which represents scheme members. Further information is available on their respective websites at www.employerspensionsforum.co.uk and www.ucu.org.uk.

To ensure that the USS Trustees receive your views, you should use the USS online consultation at www.ussconsultation.co.uk. The University will also pass on to the USS Trustees the views put to it by the Oxford representatives of the UCU.

General notices

Guidelines for Leave for Academic Staff

Ref. nos. ATC/1, EMS/11

1. Approval of applications for leave

All applications for leave from normal academic duties (sabbatical leave, leave to hold research awards, special leave etc.) must be accompanied by a recommendation from the individual's department or faculty board, as appropriate, and must also be approved by the divisional board which now has the authority to grant leave.

2. Sabbatical leave and dispensation from CUF lecturing obligations

The University's regulations in respect of sabbatical leave and dispensation from CUF lecturing duties are set out in Council Regulations 4 of 2004. Application forms and advice on individuals' entitlement may be obtained from:

Humanities—Ms Parsons, 34 St Giles', tel.: (2)70559, email: muriel.parsons@humanities.ox.ac.uk

Social Sciences Divisions and Continuing Education—Ms Hales, Hayes House, 75 George Street, tel.: (6)14857, email: michelle.hales@socsci.ox.ac.uk

Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division—Ms Sutcliffe, 9 Parks Road, tel.: (2)82588, email: sheila.sutcliffe@admin.ox.ac.uk

Medical Sciences Division—Ms Armitage, Medical Sciences Office, the John Radcliffe, tel.: (553) 21689, email: caroline.armitage@medsci.ox.ac.uk

Completed application forms (signed by the head of department where appropriate) should be returned to the head of the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division or the divisional contact shown above, as appropriate, for processing and for faculty board/divisional board approval.

3. Sabbatical leave in advance of entitlement

In some circumstances individuals may wish to take leave for purposes covered by the sabbatical leave scheme at a time when they do not have sufficient sabbatical entitlement. Such circumstances might include an unrepeatable opportunity to pursue academic interests, or a need to undertake fieldwork for a period exceeding one year. In such cases leave could be granted in whole or in part as sabbatical leave in advance of entitlement if a good academic case could be demonstrated.

4. Applications for leave to hold some public offices

Applications for leave to accept an appointment in the public service of national or international importance are normally granted by the divisional board, provided that:

- the purpose of the leave can be shown to be compatible with the academic interests of the department or faculty;
- the department or faculty (and the college in the case of joint appointments) supports the application and is able to cover the individual's duties including examining and graduate supervision;
- it is clear that the individual intends to return to university service after the period of leave.

Applications for leave to hold such offices should be made to the divisional secretary, faculty board secretary or other officer as notified locally.

5. Applications for certain research awards

Applications to national bodies of prestigious and competitive research awards (e.g. British Academy Research Readerships and Senior Research Fellowships, AHRC Research Leave awards, EPSRC Senior or Advanced Fellowships) are normally granted by the divisional board provided that the department or faculty (and the college in the case of joint appointments) supports the application and that appropriate arrangements can be made to cover the individual's duties, including examining and graduate supervision, should the application be successful.

Applications for research awards by members of the Humanities Division must be notified to the appropriate divisional research facilitator at least one month before the funder's deadline. The research facilitator will provide advice and support for the application, produce a budget and an OG (internal authorisation form required by Research Services) and will liaise with the Humanities Division and Research Services to obtain approval for the application. It is the responsibility of the applicant to obtain in advance the consent of the college (where appropriate) for any research leave application. Consent must be forwarded to the research facilitator and is required by Research Services as part of the internal checking and authorisation process. Note: all applications to outside bodies for research funding must be checked and authorised by Research Services. The AHRC will not accept applications directly from colleges: applications from CUF lecturers to that body can only be submitted via the relevant faculty.

6. Applications for special unpaid leave

Applications for leave other than those outlined above may be considered as applications for special unpaid leave. Applications may be considered if they meet one or both of the following criteria:

- i) providing academic benefit to the University;
- ii) providing a career development opportunity for the individual, hence aiding staff retention.

Activities under these criteria might include visiting another institution to study specialised laboratory techniques, taking up a visiting lectureship or visiting professorship at a prestigious department abroad, an extended period of fieldwork etc.

In all cases, it is essential that the consent of the college (where appropriate) and of the department/faculty board is obtained before an application is made to the divisional board. In considering applications, colleges and departments/faculty boards must be satisfied that the proposed leave fits with their overall plans and objectives, and it must be clear that the individual's duties for the college and for the department/faculty, including examining and graduate supervision, can be covered satisfactorily. Divisional boards will consider applications both on their own merits and in the context of overall operational needs, and will not approve applications which are prejudicial to the teaching and research of the department/faculty or which are not supported by the applicant's college.

Occasionally applications are made for leave to enable an individual to accept a fixed-term appointment in another academic institution (other than routine visiting appointments held during sabbatical leave). In such instances the college and the department/faculty board would need to be satisfied that the application was in line with their overall plans and objectives, as above, and that all operational requirements could be covered satisfactorily, before the application was put to the divisional board. Applicants would normally be expected to give a commitment to return to Oxford after the period of leave. It should be noted that the longer the appointment at the other institution, the less likely it is that leave will be granted.

Leave will not be granted, except in the most truly exceptional circumstances, to enable an individual to decide whether to accept a permanent post elsewhere.

It is recognised that some offers are made to individuals at short notice. Given the fact that all members of the academic staff have clear obligations to the University and to their college under the terms of their contracts, no such offer should be accepted without the support of the college and the department/faculty and the explicit approval of the divisional board. It is essential, therefore, that any prospect of such an offer is discussed, in confidence, with the college and with the divisional secretary or faculty board secretary at the earliest opportunity so as to avoid delays, and the possibility of refusal, if a firm offer is then made at very short notice.

All applications for special unpaid leave should be made to the divisional secretary, faculty board secretary or other officer as notified locally, who will also be able to advise on the likelihood of success of any application on the university side; the college's consent in appropriate cases must be obtained before an application is put to the divisional board.

7. Special paid leave

Divisions may, if they wish, with the concurrence of the college in relevant cases, grant additional paid leave outside sabbatical entitlement, funded from their own resources, to enable staff to undertake projects of mutual benefit to the individual and the University. Examples might include asking a member of staff to concentrate for a term wholly on considering revised teaching patterns across a whole subject area; or permitting a member of staff to teach at another university for a term to foster inter-institutional links, possibly as part of an exchange arrangement.

8. Stipendiary arrangements

Sabbatical leave and dispensation from CUF lecturing duties: leave will be granted with stipend (although it may be granted without stipend if taken for the purpose of holding a remunerated visiting appointment under 6 above).

Leave to hold a public office: leave will be granted without stipend.

Leave to hold a research award: the arrangements vary depending on the regulations governing the award, but it is normal for individuals holding such awards to continue to receive their usual university stipend, the awarding body either providing funds to make a replacement appointment or reimbursing the University for the individual's salary costs.

Special leave: leave will normally be granted without stipend, but see 7 above.

9. Implications for future entitlement to sabbatical leave or dispensation from CUF lecturing duties

Special leave does not count as qualifying service for the purposes of calculating future entitlement to sabbatical leave or dispensation from CUF lecturing duties. However it does not count against an individual's future entitlement. When special leave has been granted for the purposes of holding a public office or a research award, sabbatical leave is not normally granted in the period immediately preceding or following the period of special leave, although some flexibility may be exercised at the divisional board's discretion in respect of periods of special leave not exceeding one year, especially in connection with the holding of research awards.

St John's College: Display of Laudian Vestments

The College intends to open to the public its collection of medieval vestments on Saturday, 27 November, from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. The collection is displayed in the Garden Quadrangle and entrance, free of charge, will be via the Main Lodge.

Humanitas Programme

The Humanities Division is delighted to announce the launch of a new initiative for 2010/11: the Humanitas Programme.

Humanitas is a series of Visiting Professorships at Oxford and Cambridge intended to bring leading practitioners and scholars to both universities to address major themes in the arts, social sciences and humanities. Created by Lord Weidenfeld, the Programme is managed and funded by the Institute for Strategic Dialogue with the support of a series of generous benefactors and administered by the Humanities Division in Oxford and the Centre for Research in the Arts, Social Sciences and Humanities (CRASSH) in Cambridge.

Humanitas will welcome some twenty Visiting Professors, who will be appointed for a given academic year and invited to deliver a series of lectures, followed by a related symposium, workshop or masterclass for graduate students.

The Programme will include the following fields:

- Architecture
- Chamber Music
- Chinese Studies
- Classical Music and Music Education
- Comparative European Literature
- Contemporary Art
- Diplomacy and Statecraft
- Drama
- Economic Thought
- Film/TV
- History of Art
- History of Ideas
- Interfaith Studies
- Media
- Museums, Galleries and Libraries
- Opera Studies
- Popular Music
- War Studies and Terrorism
- Women's Rights

The Humanities Division is delighted to welcome Athol Fugard, the leading South African playwright, director and actor, to Oxford as the first Humanitas Visiting Professor in Drama, generously sponsored by Eric Abraham.

Further information on the Humanitas Programme can be found at : <http://www.humanities.ox.ac.uk/events/humanitas>.

Contested Election

MEDICAL SCIENCES DIVISIONAL BOARD

One person from among the members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies, of whom there shall be no more than one from each of the Department of Biochemistry, the Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics, the Sir William Dunn School of Pathology, the Department of Pharmacology and the Department of Experimental Psychology, elected jointly by the members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Clinical Medicine, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies.

Professor J.N.P. Rawlins, Wolfson MT 2014

The following nominations have been received:

O.J. Braddick, MA PhD Camb, MA Oxf, Fellow of Magdalen, Department of Experimental Psychology, Faculty of Psychological Studies

Nominated by:

K.E. Davies, Hertford, Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics

B.J. Rogers, Pembroke, Psychological Studies

I. Tracey, Pembroke, Anaesthetics

N. Yeung, University College, Experimental Psychology

Candidate statement:

I have been Head of Experimental Psychology since 2001, actively engaged in divisional governance on the Planning and Resources Committee (2001–2006), Educational Strategy Group (2005), chairing the Review of Physiological Sciences FHS (2006), and a Board member (2008–2010).

The Division works in a complex and demanding context, requiring relationships with the NHS as well as with other Divisions and Colleges, and needing to sustain excellence in diverse research and teaching areas. I would seek a balanced integration of these areas in Board discussions, keeping in view the diversity of the Division's activities. I believe the defining characteristic of a University is the synergy between research and undergraduate and graduate teaching, each activity gaining strength from the others.

I would be the only member of Experimental Psychology on the Board, bringing a special interest in neuroscience (a key strategic area for the Division but not strongly represented on the current Board), and in educational aspects of the Division's mission going beyond preclinical and clinical medicine. However, I believe my record on the Board will show that I take a broad and collegial view in promoting the interests of the Division as a whole.

The Division derives strength from internal and external interdisciplinary links. I greatly value such links in my own research (with Paediatrics) and between Experimental Psychology and other basic and clinical sciences, social sciences and humanities. I would aim to promote such links that allow the Division to benefit fully from Oxford's range of intellectual strengths.

Mark S.P. Sansom, MA DPhil Oxf, Student of Christ Church, Department of Biochemistry, Faculty of Biochemistry

Nominated by:

I.D. Campbell, St John's, Biochemistry

R.A. Dwek, Exeter, Biochemistry

J.A. Hodgkin, Keble, Biochemistry

E.J.C. Mellor, Queen's, Biochemistry

K.A. Nasmyth, Trinity, Biochemistry

D.J. Sherratt, Linacre, Biochemistry

Candidate statement:

Qualifications. I have held a joint appointment in Oxford for 19 years with a UL in Molecular Biophysics, and a Studentship in Biochemistry at Christ Church. I have undertaken a range of administrative duties. At University level I chaired the Oxford Supercomputing Centre (OSC), and I have been actively involved in (and currently co-direct) the Wellcome Trust Structural Biology graduate programme. Within Biochemistry, I have acted as head of the Laboratory of Molecular Biophysics for one year, and currently head the Research Laboratory of Molecular and Systems Biochemistry, one of five groupings within the Department responsible for research strategy and space planning. Within Christ Church I have held a number of posts, including Tutor for Graduates. Nationally, I have chaired the HECToR Science Board, responsible for the procurement of the UK national supercomputer. I therefore appreciate the competing academic and financial pressures within the University at all levels, and have wide experience of the development of large scale resources and training across the physical/biomedical sciences interface.

Reasons. There is a need to fully integrate research and teaching (both graduate and undergraduate) in order to maintain Oxford medical sciences as world-leading. During a period of transitions in funding models, we need to develop a strategy that supports research spanning from the fundamental to the translational. Within this context, we need to maintain high academic standards whilst developing innovative and well-resourced models of graduate student training.

General notes:

The nomination period for this election closed at 4 p.m. on Thursday 28 October 2010.

The following members of Congregation are entitled to vote in this election: members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Clinical Medicine, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies. Ballot papers were sent out to voters during the week of 8 November. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 25 November 2010.

For more information, please contact the Elections Office (elections.office@admin.ox.ac.uk).

Payment by cheque in foreign currency. If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General

1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be e-mailed automatically to the e-mail address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges

6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at <http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm>.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer

7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers' Warranty and Indemnity

13. The advertiser warrants:

(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.

(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person's intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette

16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations

Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 3 December.

(A) PROPERTY MANAGEMENT SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE PLANNING AND RESOURCE ALLOCATION COMMITTEE

Explanatory Note

In accordance with recommendations made in the Report of the Property Working Party, approved by Council in March 2010, the following changes in regulations establish a Property Management Subcommittee. The Subcommittee will report to PRAC and will have responsibility for the graduate accommodation, professorial and other residential accommodation, together with other parts of the Corporate Estate and let properties held in the Capital Fund not held for pure investment purposes, for which there may be a future functional use. A new Estates Committee, not established by regulation, will advise and report to the Investment Committee on the investment of rural and urban investments held by the University. An amendment to the Financial Regulations is also required to reflect the fact that the new subcommittee will have delegated authority in the context of the management of accommodation for sales and purchases involving amounts of up to £2m that are unrelated to capital projects.

Text of Regulations

1 In Part 3 of Council Regulations 15 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4634, 16 October 2002, p. 230), insert new regulations 3.97–3.100 below and renumber existing regulations 3.97–3.140 as 3.101–3.144:

Property Management Subcommittee of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee

3.97. The Property Management Subcommittee of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee shall consist of:

- (1) the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Planning and Resources), who shall chair the committee;

- (2) the Registrar;
- (3) the Director of Finance.

3.98. The committee shall:

- (1) supervise the management of accommodation held by the University, subject to a delegated authority level for sales and purchases involving amounts of up to £2m that are unrelated to capital projects¹;
- (2) establish and keep under review strategy, guidelines and policies concerning the matters under (1) above;
- (3) review and approve budgets and end of year accounts;
- (4) approve annual rent increases for graduate accommodation;
- (5) report matters under (1)–(4) above as appropriate, and submit an annual report, to the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council.

3.99. Accommodation held by the University shall be defined as graduate accommodation, professorial and other residential accommodation, and, where there may be a future functional use, the urban properties managed as an investment in the Corporate or Capital Funds.

3.100. The committee shall obtain external valuation advice concerning any purchase or sale transaction in excess of £750,000¹.

2 In the Financial Regulations (Council Regulations 1 of 2010, Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4923, 25 June 2010), amend regulation 5.3(1) as follows (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

'5.3 Real Property Not Held as an Investment

- (1) The purchase, leasing, or sale of all real property owned or leased by the University, which is not held as an investment, must be authorised by PRAC. In cases where the purchase, lease, or sale involves no more than £24,000,000 and is unrelated to a capital project, this authority has been delegated to the Property Management

¹ Expenditure on capital projects requires approval in accordance with regulation 1.5(2) of the University's Financial Regulations.

Subcommittee under Council Regulations 15 of 2002;

(B) BUDGET SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE PLANNING AND RESOURCE ALLOCATION COMMITTEE

Explanatory Note

The following amends the regulations concerning the membership of the Budget Subcommittee, removing the Registrar from the formal membership. The Registrar will continue to be present at meetings as an officer in attendance.

Text of Regulations

1 In Part 3 of Council Regulations 15 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4634, 16 October 2002, p. 230) concerning the Budget Subcommittee of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee (Gazette Vol. 140, p. 944, 6 May 2010, as amended on 25 June 2010, Vol. 140, p. 1277), delete regulation 3.12 and substitute (deleted text scored through, inserted text underlined):

'3.12. The Budget Subcommittee of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee shall consist of:

- (1) the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Planning and Resources) who shall chair the committee;
- (2) ~~the Registrar;~~

(3) one external person appointed by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee;

(4)–(7) five members of Congregation appointed by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee for their expertise in an area relevant to the remit of the committee, but ensuring cross-divisional membership;

(5) one person with expertise in Information and Communications Technology appointed by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee, who does not have responsibility for Information and Communications Technology provision by service units in the University Administration and Services and the Academic Services and University Collections¹;

2 This change in regulations shall be effective from 1 January 2011.

(C) COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN*Explanatory Note*

The change below notes the process for the approval of allowances paid to committee chairmen, following a decision to create a separate scale for these payments.

Text of Regulations

In Council Regulations 3 of 2004 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4703, 14 July 2004, p. 1269, as amended), after Table 6 insert the following:

'Particular provisions for committee chairmen

29. Any allowances payable in respect of the duties of committee chairmen shall be on a scale as determined from time to time by the General Purposes Committee, subject to the approval of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council as to the financial implications of any proposed amendments. The General Purposes Committee shall, on the recommendation of the Registrar, have discretion to determine in exceptional circumstances whether a chairman should be paid an allowance for a fixed term and the scale point to be paid in each case.'

Congregation 25 November

Election

Medical Sciences Divisional Board
Details are in 'Elections' section below.

Congregation 30 November 2 p.m.

¶ Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 22 November, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to vote against, or propose an amendment to, the resolution below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the resolution shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

The title for this agenda item has been amended from that published last week so that, in conformity with the request received from the members of Congregation, it now refers to one resolution, and to a consultative ballot on the proposed changes put forward by the Employers Pension Forum and the University and College Union.

Voting on resolution to conduct a consultative ballot on changes to the Universities Superannuation Scheme put forward by the Employers Pensions Forum and the University and College Union

Text of Resolution

Congregation notes that the University as an employer has a statutory obligation, under the Occupational and Personal Pension Schemes (Consultation by Employers and Miscellaneous Amendment) Regulations 2006, to consult affected employees on the changes that have been proposed to the Universities Superannuation Scheme (USS).

Congregation further notes:

- (a) that persons who are active members of USS or are eligible to join the scheme have received as part of that consultation process a copy of a USS document outlining the proposed changes and a document from the Employers Pension

Forum for Higher Education (EPF) which purports to explain 'why changes are needed' and that 'the proposed changes are considered by the employers to be right for the benefit of the scheme and its members'; and

- (b) that as the body representing all employee members of USS under the rules of the Scheme, the University and College Union has published on its website (at <http://www.ucu.org.uk/index.cfm?articleid=4598>) criticism of the process being followed by Higher Education employers in carrying out the consultation, and (at http://www.ucu.org.uk/media/pdf/q/9/USS_statement2_Oct10.pdf) a critique of the EPF document.

Believing that consultation, if it is to be meaningful, must seek the views of those consulted when the latter have been provided with all the information necessary for them to make an informed response, Congregation determines that the University will:

- (i) publish to all affected employees the alternative proposals for changes to USS put forward by the EPF and by UCU, together with supporting arguments for each;
- (ii) conduct a consultative ballot on those alternative proposals;
- (iii) publish the result of the ballot to scheme members within the University;
- (iv) send the ballot result to USS as the principal local response to the statutory consultation exercise; and
- (v) ensure all members of USS are able to engage in the process and that their comments are fully reflected in the institution's response to USS and that they are published locally.

Congregation 14 December 2 p.m.

¶ Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 6 December, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose one or more of the resolutions below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the resolutions shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

Voting on resolutions authorising use of sites at the Old Road Campus

Explanatory Note

The Old Road Campus was acquired by the University from the NHS in 1996. The site is now the focus for a significant proportion of the University's medical research, housing both general and specialist laboratories together with facilities for office-based research. In 1999, following the acquisition of further land and the completion of the first major new building on the site (the Henry Wellcome Building for Genomic Medicine), a master-planning exercise was undertaken to identify the main development plots. Since that time, the site has evolved rapidly. However, one area (the location of the original NHS buildings) has yet to be developed. It is proposed that space in that area be allocated for the construction of two new buildings: the Kennedy Institute and a new building for the Nuffield Department of Medicine (NDM).

The establishment of the Kennedy Institute in Oxford aligns with a key strategic aim of the Medical Sciences Division: to develop an institute capable of pursuing state-of-the-art biomedical research at both a basic and translational level in autoimmunity and inflammation. The facility will offer the ability to provide high-quality research space that will enhance recruitment and retention of high calibre researchers.

The new NDM facility would accommodate work on Structural Biology, a Target Discovery Institute and clinical trial activities. This project is closely aligned to high priority objectives of both the Medical Sciences Division and the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division, and each of the three components that would be incorporated into the facility will strengthen an aspect of the University's medical research position.

Text of Resolutions

(i) That a site at the Old Road Campus (providing approximately 3,710 sq.m. net usable space) be allocated for the construction of the Kennedy Institute;

(ii) That a site at the Old Road Campus (providing approximately 2,380 sq.m. net usable space) be allocated for the construction of a new building for the Nuffield Department of Medicine.

Note on procedures in Congregation

¶ Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). Election 25 November

Contested Election

MEDICAL SCIENCES DIVISIONAL BOARD

One person from among the members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies, of whom there shall be no more than one from each of the Department of Biochemistry, the Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics, the Sir William Dunn School of Pathology, the Department of Pharmacology and the Department of Experimental Psychology, elected jointly by the members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Clinical Medicine, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies.

Professor J.N.P. Rawlins, Wolfson MT 2014

The following nominations have been received:

O.J. Braddick, MA PhD Camb, MA Oxf, Fellow of Magdalen, Department of Experimental Psychology, Faculty of Psychological Studies

Nominated by:

K.E. Davies, Hertford, Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics

B.J. Rogers, Pembroke, Psychological Studies

I. Tracey, Pembroke, Anaesthetics

N. Yeung, University College, Experimental Psychology

Candidate statement:

I have been Head of Experimental Psychology since 2001, actively engaged in divisional governance on the Planning and Resources Committee (2001–2006), Educational Strategy Group (2005), chairing the Review of Physiological Sciences FHS (2006), and a Board member (2008–2010).

The Division works in a complex and demanding context, requiring relationships with the NHS as well as with other Divisions and Colleges, and needing to sustain excellence in diverse research and teaching areas. I would seek a balanced integration of these areas in Board discussions, keeping in view the diversity of the Division's activities. I believe the defining characteristic of a University is the synergy between research and undergraduate and graduate teaching, each activity gaining strength from the others.

I would be the only member of Experimental Psychology on the Board, bringing a special interest in neuroscience (a key strategic area for the Division but not strongly represented on the current Board), and in educational aspects of the Division's mission going beyond preclinical and clinical medicine. However, I believe my record on the Board will show that I take a broad and collegial view in promoting the interests of the Division as a whole.

The Division derives strength from internal and external interdisciplinary links. I greatly value such links in my own research (with Paediatrics) and between Experimental Psychology and other basic and clinical sciences, social sciences and humanities. I would aim to promote such links that allow the Division to benefit fully from Oxford's range of intellectual strengths.

Mark S.P. Sansom, MA DPhil Oxf, Student of Christ Church, Department of Biochemistry, Faculty of Biochemistry

Nominated by:

I.D. Campbell, St John's, Biochemistry

R.A. Dwek, Exeter, Biochemistry

J.A. Hodgkin, Keble, Biochemistry

E.J.C. Mellor, Queen's, Biochemistry

K.A. Nasmyth, Trinity, Biochemistry

D.J. Sherratt, Linacre, Biochemistry

Candidate statement:

Qualifications. I have held a joint appointment in Oxford for 19 years with a UL in Molecular Biophysics, and a Studentship in Biochemistry at Christ Church. I have undertaken a range of administrative duties. At University level I chaired the Oxford Supercomputing Centre (OSC), and I have been actively involved in (and currently co-direct) the Wellcome Trust Structural Biology graduate programme. Within Biochemistry, I have acted as head of the Laboratory of Molecular Biophysics for one year, and currently head the Research Laboratory of Molecular and Systems Biochemistry, one of five groupings within the Department responsible for research strategy and space planning. Within Christ Church I have held a number of posts, including Tutor for Graduates. Nationally, I have chaired the HECToR Science Board, responsible for the procurement of the UK national supercomputer. I therefore appreciate the competing academic and financial pressures within the University at all levels, and have wide experience of the development of large scale resources and training across the physical/ biomedical sciences interface.

Reasons. There is a need to fully integrate research and teaching (both graduate and undergraduate) in order to maintain Oxford medical sciences as world-leading. During a period of transitions in funding models, we need to develop a strategy that supports research spanning from the fundamental to the translational. Within this context, we need to maintain high academic standards whilst developing innovative and well-resourced models of graduate student training.

General notes:

The nomination period for this election closed at 4 p.m. on Thursday, 28 October 2010.

The following members of Congregation are entitled to vote in this election: members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Clinical Medicine, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies. Ballot papers were sent out to voters during the week of 8 November. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 25 November 2010.

For more information, please contact the Elections Office (elections.office@admin.ox.ac.uk).

Elections 2 December

Vacancy: One

One member of Congregation, not necessarily being members of any division and not in any case being nominated in a divisional capacity, who shall be elected by Congregation.

Dr A.W.M. Graham, From HT 2011
Balliol To MT 2013

Full details of Council's remit, composition, functions and powers can be found at: <http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/783-121.shtml>. Enquiries may be directed to the Head of the Council Secretariat (emma.rampton@admin.ox.ac.uk).

The following nominations have been received:

Tony Brett, MA Oxf, Computing Services

Nominated by:

K.M. Craddock, OUCS

D.C. Hastings, OUCS

W. Horn, OUCS

H.F. Morton, Somerville

M.J. Parrott, Brasenose

Candidate statement:

- Head of IT Support Staff services in Oxford University Computing Services, where I have worked since 2003.
- Institute of Molecular Medicine IT Manager 1993–1998
- Corpus Christi (Oxford) IT Manager 1998–2003
- Matriculated, Corpus Christi (Oxford) 1989, BA (hons) 1993, MA 1998

As a long-standing academic-related member of Congregation I offer the perspective of this institution's increasing number of academic-related staff to Council if elected. With the increasing emergence of 'third space'¹ professionals in the higher education sector I believe I would bring strategic advantage to Council in contributing to governance that balances the professional, academic and administrative needs of our world-leading institution with the management of its finances, services, and property.

I have a wide remit across the whole Collegiate University providing strategic direction to all units on ICT matters. I sit on divisional and departmental IT Committees and have conducted large- and small-scale reviews of IT provision in several departments and colleges. I regularly challenge units to ensure their IT strategy is in line with, and driven by, their overall strategy and aims. I am responsible to around 650 IT Support Staff at every level of seniority in all parts of the Collegiate University of Oxford. As a member of Oxford City Council I offer a unique insight into the civic context of our University.

Sarah E. Thomas, AB Smith College, MA PhD Johns Hopkins, MA Oxf, MS Simmons College, Fellow of Balliol, Bodleian Libraries

Nominated by:

C.A. Lewis, Dean of Christ Church, Faculty of Theology

F.A. Cairncross, Rector of Exeter

R.W. Ainsworth, Master of St Catherine's, Faculty of Engineering Science

K.E. Davies, Hertford, Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics

W.S. James, Brasenose, Dunn School of Pathology

R. Ounden, St Hugh's, Bodleian Libraries

S.P. Perry, Balliol, Faculty of English

A.E. Trefethen, Oxford e-Research Centre

Candidate statement:

As Bodley's Librarian I have the privilege of serving the entire University of Oxford as well as providing a service for the 'Republic of the Learned'. I would bring this same multi-lateral orientation to the responsibilities of Council. The role of Oxford's university librarian gives me a broad perspective on the university and requires me to understand and balance the needs of a variety of sectors in shaping our information policies and practices. A complex organisation, the Bodleian Libraries are one of the largest departments in the university and offer regular opportunities to interact with all divisions as well as the administrative, financial, legal, and other services of the university, such as estates and IT.

Now in my fourth year at Oxford, I have substantial experience as a member of the Buildings and Estates Subcommittee and of the Personnel Committee. As a professorial fellow at Balliol I have gained a deep appreciation of the value of the collegiate university.

My library career began at Harvard's Widener Library and I subsequently held positions at Johns Hopkins, Stanford, the Library of Congress, and Cornell, where I was University Librarian for a decade and adjunct professor of German. I hold an A.B. in German from Smith College, a M.S. in Library Science from Simmons College, and a Ph.D. in German from Johns Hopkins and have studied at universities in Hamburg, Freiburg, and Frankfurt. These diverse experiences would provide a useful foundation of reference on which to build contributions to Council.

General notes:

The nomination period for this election closed at 4 p.m. on Thursday, 4 November 2010.

All members of Congregation are entitled to vote in this election. Ballot papers were sent out to voters during the week of 15 November. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 2 December 2010.

For more information, please contact the Elections Office (elections.office@admin.ox.ac.uk).

Uncontested Elections

As the number of nominations received is no more than sufficient to fill the following vacancies, the candidates nominated below shall be deemed to be duly elected as of 4 November 2010; and, where the vacancies are to be filled for periods of different length, the candidate senior in academic standing shall hold office for the longer period (as per Council Regulations 17.22 and 17.26 of 2002; and Council Regulations 19.37 and 19.41 of 2002). For the purposes of elections, academic standing is as defined in Council Regulations 22 of 2002, Part 2: Academic Precedence and Standing, made by Council on 26 June 2002.

Fax: 01865 (2)70178

Post: Gazette Advertisements,
Public Affairs Directorate,
University Offices,
Wellington Square,
Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline

Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges

Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £20 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in 'Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements' below.)

External advertisers: £25 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.

For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length

The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment

Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit-card or debit-card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

Note. Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the website. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque

Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note. Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency. If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General

1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be emailed automatically to the email address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges

6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at <http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm>.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer

7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers' Warranty and Indemnity

13. The advertiser warrants:

(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.

(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person's intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette

16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

Gazette publication arrangements

Advertisers are asked to note that the remaining Gazettes of Michaelmas Term will be published on 25 November, and 2 and 9 December. Publication for Hilary Term will begin on 13 January. The usual deadline will continue to apply (see above).

Congregation

30 November 2 p.m.

¶ The title for this agenda item has been amended from that published on 11 November so that, in conformity with the request received from the members of Congregation, it now refers to one resolution, and to a consultative ballot on the proposed changes put forward by the Employers Pension Forum and the University and College Union.

Voting on resolution to conduct a consultative ballot on changes to the Universities Superannuation Scheme put forward by the Employers Pensions Forum and the University and College Union

Text of Resolution

Congregation notes that the University as an employer has a statutory obligation, under the Occupational and Personal Pension Schemes (Consultation by Employers and Miscellaneous Amendment) Regulations 2006, to consult affected employees on the changes that have been proposed to the Universities Superannuation Scheme (USS).

Congregation further notes:

(a) that persons who are active members of USS or are eligible to join the scheme have received as part of that consultation process a copy of a USS document outlining the proposed changes and a document from the Employers Pension Forum for Higher Education (EPF) which purports to explain 'why changes are needed' and that 'the proposed changes are considered by the employers to be right for the benefit of the scheme and its members'; and

(b) that as the body representing all employee members of USS under the rules of the Scheme, the University and College Union has published on its website (at <http://www.ucu.org.uk/index.cfm?articleid=4598>) criticism of the process being followed by Higher Education employers in carrying out the consultation, and (at http://www.ucu.org.uk/media/pdf/q/9/USS_statement2_Oct10.pdf) a critique of the EPF document.

Believing that consultation, if it is to be meaningful, must seek the views of those consulted when the latter have been provided with all the information necessary for them to make an informed response, Congregation determines that the University will:

- (i) publish to all affected employees the alternative proposals for changes to USS put forward by the EPF and by UCU, together with supporting arguments for each;
- (ii) conduct a consultative ballot on those alternative proposals;
- (iii) publish the result of the ballot to scheme members within the University;
- (iv) send the ballot result to USS as the principal local response to the statutory consultation exercise; and
- (v) ensure all members of USS are able to engage in the process and that their comments are fully reflected in the institution's response to USS and that they are published locally.

The following amendment will be taken into consideration:

The purpose of this amendment is to ensure that the consultation and ballot should take place with proper information available, and to invite USS, through the University, to make good the major defects in the existing consultation. As the requested further information may lead to consultation responses that cover more than the two choices in the ballot, we also remove the requirement that the ballot result be the 'principal' local response.

Replace 'as the principal local response' in (iv) by 'as part of the local response', remove 'and' from the end of (iv), replace the final 'in (v) by ';' and then add

'(vi) seek proper information from USS, in conformity with the guidance provided by the Department of Work and Pensions on the conduct of a formal consultation by employers on major changes in a pension scheme; this information should include a suitable range of worked examples; and

(vii) request USS to restart the consultation after this information is made available, with those who have already submitted responses being allowed to modify them; if USS refuses, re-start the local consultation.'

¶ At its meeting on 15 November, Council gave careful consideration to the resolution first published on 11 November (as amended on 18 November). Members of Council had reservations about the wording and the purpose of the proposed ballot but considered that a broad discussion in Congregation of pensions issues would be highly desirable. Council members took the view that the surest way to bring about such a discussion, given the way in which the relevant regulations are drafted, was to instruct the Registrar to declare the resolution unacceptable to Council.

At a special meeting on 23 November, Council considered the amendment set out above. Council similarly had reservations about the wording and purpose of the amendment but reiterated its wish for members of Congregation to have the opportunity for broad debate on these issues.

Council wishes it to be known that its decisions were taken not in any way in a spirit of confrontation, but to ensure an opportunity for wide discussion by the University's sovereign body around these important issues. Further information about the USS proposals may be seen on the University website (at http://www.ox.ac.uk/staff/staff_communications/update_on_major_issues/index.html#auniversities_superannuation_scheme_uss_consultation).

As a consequence of these decisions, debates will be held at the Congregation meeting on Tuesday 30 November. The structure of the meeting will be as follows: first, the amendment will be debated and a vote taken; thereafter, a debate and vote will be held on the resolution as amended or on the original resolution, as appropriate. Those wishing to speak in the debates in the Sheldonian Theatre will be expected to limit their contributions to five minutes. It may not be possible to call all those who wish to speak. Members of Congregation who wish to be scheduled to speak in the debate (subject to time constraints) are asked to email congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk by 10 a.m. on Monday, 29 November. It would be helpful if members of Congregation intending to speak would, in no more than 25 words: (i) identify which part of the proceedings they would like to address (the amendment, the resolution if amended, or the original resolution if the amendment is not carried); (ii) indicate, as appropriate, whether they wish to support or oppose the amendment, the resolution if amended, or the original resolution if the amendment is not carried; and (iii) explain broadly the topic about which they wish to speak. This will help to determine the order in which speakers are called. Speakers on the original resolution will only speak if the amendment is rejected; likewise, speakers on the amended resolution will only speak if the amendment is accepted. If time permits, those who have not indicated in advance an intention to speak will still be free to do so.

The Vice-Chancellor and the Proctors have determined that voting during the meeting will take place by paper ballot. Members of Congregation will be required to identify themselves on their voting slips by name and signature and by college/department or faculty and to deposit their own voting slips in ballot boxes at the doors of the House. Slips will be sorted and counted by the Proctors, and will subsequently be kept in strict confidence by the Proctors for a period of six days, after which they will be destroyed.

It is intended that a verbatim transcription of the debates will be published in the Gazette on 9 December and, before then, on the University website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-debate). As a result of time constraints, it will not be possible to check the verbatim report of the proceedings with individual speakers before publication. Speakers are therefore asked to provide their written texts, if available, to Mrs Ceri Benton (Council Secretariat) on the day of the debate, or to email them to congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk by 5 p.m. on Wednesday, 1 December.

For security purposes, all those attending are asked to bring their University Cards.

The Vice-Chancellor has decided that the wearing of gowns shall be optional on this occasion.

Congregation 2 December

Details are in 'Elections' section below.

Congregation 14 December 2 p.m.

¶ Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 6 December, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose one or more of the resolutions below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the resolutions shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

1 Voting on resolutions authorising use of sites at the Old Road Campus

Explanatory Note

The Old Road Campus was acquired by the University from the NHS in 1996. The site is now the focus for a significant proportion of the University's medical research, housing both general and specialist laboratories together with facilities for office-based research. In 1999, following the acquisition of further land and the completion of the first major new building on the site (the Henry Wellcome Building for Genomic Medicine), a master-planning exercise was undertaken to identify the main development plots. Since that time, the site has evolved rapidly. However, one area (the location of the original NHS buildings) has yet to be developed. It is proposed that space in that area be allocated for the construction of two new buildings: the Kennedy Institute and a new building for the Nuffield Department of Medicine (NDM).

The establishment of the Kennedy Institute in Oxford aligns with a key strategic aim of the Medical Sciences Division: to develop an institute capable of pursuing state-of-the-art biomedical research at both a basic and translational level in autoimmunity and inflammation. The facility will offer the ability to provide high-quality research space that will enhance recruitment and retention of high calibre researchers.

The new NDM facility would accommodate work on Structural Biology, a Target Discovery Institute and clinical trial activities. This project is closely aligned to high priority objectives of both the Medical Sciences Division and the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division, and each of the three components that would be incorporated into the facility will strengthen an aspect of the University's medical research position.

Text of Resolutions

- (i) That a site at the Old Road Campus (providing approximately 3,710 sq.m. net usable space) be allocated for the construction of the Kennedy Institute;
- (ii) That a site at the Old Road Campus (providing approximately 2,380 sq.m. net usable space) be allocated for the construction of a new building for the Nuffield Department of Medicine.

Notices

2 Voting on resolution approving the conferment of Honorary Degree

That the conferment of the Degree of Master of Arts, honoris causa, upon Lady Nancy Caroline Gayley Kenny, BA Vassar, PGCE Oxf, former Director of Alumni Relations at the University, former Secretary of the Oxford University Society, Fellow of St Peter's, be approved.

¶ If the resolution is approved, the degree will be conferred at a ceremony on 5 March 2010.

Note on procedures in Congregation

¶ Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463; email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

Statute Approved By Her Majesty in Council

Mr Vice-Chancellor has received a communication from the Clerk of Her Majesty's Privy Council, stating that on 21 July 2010 Her Majesty was pleased to approve the Statute concerning the publication of regulations, amending Statute VI, printed in Gazette, 10 December 2009, p. 357, and approved by Congregation on 19 January 2010, p. 444. This Statute shall be effective from 2 December 2010.

Notice of new arrangements: publication of changes to Examination Regulations in the Gazette

The Education Committee has approved new arrangements for the above, to take effect from the Gazette of 2 December 2010.

The print and online versions of the Gazette itself will in future include only the programme/subject title and a brief note of the nature of the change to regulations. A link will be provided to the full text of each change to regulations, which will be published separately online as a pdf document, at <http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/examinationregulations/>.

Divisional and other colleagues responsible for regulatory amendments should submit their changes for publication, as Word documents, to the editor of the Gazette, at gazette@admin.ox.ac.uk. It should be noted that these documents will now be published in full to the web audience of the Gazette. Staff involved in drafting amendment notices are asked to consult the Guidance Note and template available at <http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/examinationregulations/> which have also been separately circulated to interested parties.

Please address any queries to sally.powell@admin.ox.ac.uk, Education Policy Support, or to the editor of the Gazette as above.

Review of the Oxford University Museums

There is to be a joint review during Hilary term 2011 of the University's four principal museums: the Ashmolean Museum, the Museum of the History of Science, the Museum of Natural History, and the Pitt Rivers Museum. The terms of reference and the membership of the review committee are as follows:

ORGANISATION AND ADMINISTRATION

i. To explore the scope for greater collaboration and support between the museums, including the extent to which resources could be more widely shared and/or a stronger presence could be developed for the Oxford University Museums and Collections as an organisational unit.

GOVERNANCE

ii. To review the governance arrangements for the museums, individually and collectively, with particular reference to their fitness for purpose in delivering the vision (see v. below).

FUNDING

iii. To review current funding arrangements and identify possible alternative options by which financial sustainability can be achieved.

FUNDRAISING AND COMMERCIAL OPERATIONS

iv. To review current fundraising and commercial strategies across the museums with a view to optimising best practice and effectiveness.

VISION

v. To assist in articulating an agreed vision for the Oxford University Museums and Collections, incorporating both their role as departments of the University (including teaching and research) and their contribution to the world of museums and to the broader cultural landscape at local, national and international levels (including outreach activity).

MEMBERSHIP

Professor Ewan McKendrick (in the chair)
Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Academic Services and University Collections)

Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Planning and Resource Allocation)

A senior member of the University with museum experience (Warden of Wadham)

Two members of the academic divisions:

Professor Alex Halliday (Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences)

Professor Alan Bowman (Humanities)

Three external members:

Sir Robert Crawford (former Director of the Imperial War Museum)

Sir Mark Jones (Director of the Victoria and Albert Museum)

Professor Deborah Swallow (Director of the Courtauld Institute)

Submissions to the review committee are invited to be sent to the secretary to the review, Charles Shaw, at the University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford, OX1 2JD or by email to charles.shaw@admin.ox.ac.uk. These should arrive no later than Friday, 4 February 2011, though any submissions that are able to be submitted before then would be much appreciated.

Mathematical, Physical, and Life Sciences Division/Education Committee

REVIEW OF THE DEPARTMENTS OF PLANT SCIENCES AND ZOOLOGY

The Mathematical, Physical, and Life Sciences Divisional Board is undertaking a review of the departments of Plant Sciences and Zoology jointly with the Education Committee, as part of Council's programme of rolling reviews of departments. Given their common undergraduate programme (BA in Biological Sciences), it was agreed that the two departments be reviewed jointly. The review will be chaired by the Head of Division, Professor Alex Halliday, and will take place on 7, 8, and 9 March 2011.

The Review Committee would welcome written comments on matters falling within its terms of reference given below. These should be sent to the Mathematical Physical and Life Sciences Divisional Secretary and joint secretary to the Review Committee, Ms Mary Ann Robertson (email: maryann.robertson@mpls.ox.ac.uk) by Friday, 7 January 2011.

The Review Committee's membership is:

- Professor Alex Halliday, FRS, Head of Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division (Chair);
- Professor George Coupland, FRS, Director, Max Planck Institute for Plant Breeding Research;
- Professor Loren Rieseberg, FRS, Department of Botany, University of British Columbia;
- Professor Robin Weiss, FRS, School of Life and Medical Sciences, UCL;
- Professor Peter Hudson, FRS, Director, Huck Institutes of the Life Sciences, Pennsylvania State University;
- Professor Dianne Edwards, CBE, FRS, School of Earth and Ocean Sciences, Cardiff University;
- Professor George Ratcliffe, appointed by the Department of Plant Sciences;
- Professor Charles Godfray, FRS, appointed by the Department of Zoology;
- Professor Judith Armitage, Department of Biochemistry, appointed by the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division;
- Professor Paul Madden, FRS, Provost of Queen's College, appointed by the Education Committee.

The terms of reference of the review are:

1. To review the quality of academic activities in the departments, by reference to:

- international standards of excellence;
- action taken since the last review of the departments;
- planning statements at departmental and divisional levels, and in the context of the University's mission statement and strategic/corporate plan.

In particular:

- (a) the quality of the research of the departments, including their participation in interdepartmental, interdivisional, and interdisciplinary activities, their research profile and strategy, and future challenges and opportunities;
- (b) the quality of undergraduate and graduate programmes, and their delivery and related issues, including:
 - access and admissions;
 - curriculum design and programme structure;

- teaching, learning, and assessment;
- the relationship between teaching and research;
- academic and pastoral support and guidance;
- the provision and use of learning resources (including staff resources);
- specific arrangements for the pursuit of graduate studies;
- relationships with colleges;
- quality assurance mechanisms;

(c) the organisation of the departments, their management structures, and the relationship between the departments and the Mathematical, Physical, and Life Sciences Division, including such matters as:

- strategic planning (including relationship to the divisional five-year plan and the University's strategic/corporate plan);
- academic and non-academic staffing and recruitment;
- student number planning;
- terms of appointment for academic staff, including career development and equal opportunities issue;
- fundraising;

(d) the relationship (structural and operational) between units within the departments, and between the departments and cognate subject areas, and colleges to which it is linked in teaching and research.

2. To consider the current and long-term financial position of, and funding arrangements for, the departments, and their financial strategy.

Elections

Vacancies and retiring members

The lists below show the retiring member or members, and indicate the length of appointment, from MT 2010 unless otherwise stated.

Election 25 November

Contested Election

MEDICAL SCIENCES DIVISIONAL BOARD

One person from among the members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies, of whom there shall be no more than one from each of the Department of Biochemistry, the Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics, the Sir William Dunn School of Pathology, the Department of Pharmacology and the Department of Experimental Psychology, elected jointly by the members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Clinical Medicine, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies.

Professor J.N.P. Rawlins, Wolfson MT 2014

The following nominations have been received:

O.J. Braddick, MA PhD Camb, MA Oxf, Fellow of Magdalen, Department of Experimental Psychology, Faculty of Psychological Studies

Nominated by:

K.E. Davies, Hertford, Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics

B.J. Rogers, Pembroke, Psychological Studies

I. Tracey, Pembroke, Anaesthetics

N. Yeung, University College, Experimental Psychology

Candidate statement:

I have been Head of Experimental Psychology since 2001, actively engaged in divisional governance on the Planning and Resources Committee (2001–2006), Educational Strategy Group (2005), chairing the Review of Physiological Sciences FHS (2006), and a Board member (2008–2010).

The Division works in a complex and demanding context, requiring relationships with the NHS as well as with other Divisions and Colleges, and needing to sustain excellence in diverse research and teaching areas. I would seek a balanced integration of these areas in Board discussions, keeping in view the diversity of the Division's activities. I believe the defining characteristic of a University is the synergy between research and undergraduate and graduate teaching, each activity gaining strength from the others.

I would be the only member of Experimental Psychology on the Board, bringing a special interest in neuroscience (a key strategic area for the Division but not strongly represented on the current Board), and in educational aspects of the Division's mission going beyond preclinical and clinical medicine. However, I believe my record on the Board will show that I take a broad and collegial view in promoting the interests of the Division as a whole.

The Division derives strength from internal and external interdisciplinary links. I greatly value such links in my own research (with Paediatrics) and between Experimental Psychology and other basic and clinical sciences, social sciences and humanities. I would aim to promote such links that allow the Division to benefit fully from Oxford's range of intellectual strengths.

Mark S.P. Sansom, MA DPhil Oxf, Student of Christ Church, Department of Biochemistry, Faculty of Biochemistry

Nominated by:

I.D. Campbell, St John's, Biochemistry

R.A. Dwek, Exeter, Biochemistry

J.A. Hodgkin, Keble, Biochemistry

E.J.C. Mellor, Queen's, Biochemistry

K.A. Nasmyth, Trinity, Biochemistry

D.J. Sherratt, Linacre, Biochemistry

Candidate statement:

Qualifications. I have held a joint appointment in Oxford for 19 years with a UL in Molecular Biophysics, and a Studentship in Biochemistry at Christ Church. I have undertaken a range of administrative duties. At University level I chaired the Oxford Supercomputing Centre (OSC), and I have been actively involved in (and currently co-direct) the Wellcome Trust Structural Biology graduate programme. Within Biochemistry, I have acted as head of the Laboratory of Molecular Biophysics for one year, and currently head the Research Laboratory of Molecular and Systems Biochemistry, one of five groupings within the Department responsible for research strategy and space planning. Within Christ Church I have held a number of posts, including Tutor for Graduates. Nationally, I have chaired the HECToR Science Board, responsible for the procurement of the UK national supercomputer. I therefore appreciate the competing academic and financial pressures within the University at all levels, and have wide experience of the development of large scale resources and training across the physical/ biomedical sciences interface.

Reasons. There is a need to fully integrate research and teaching (both graduate and undergraduate) in order to maintain Oxford medical sciences as world-leading. During a period of transitions in funding models, we need to develop a strategy that supports research spanning from the fundamental to the translational. Within this context, we need to maintain high academic standards whilst developing innovative and well-resourced models of graduate student training.

General notes:

The nomination period for this election closed at 4 p.m. on Thursday, 28 October 2010.

The following members of Congregation are entitled to vote in this election: members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Clinical Medicine, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies. Ballot papers were sent out to voters during the week of 8 November. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 25 November 2010.

For more information, please contact the Elections Office (elections.office@admin.ox.ac.uk).

Election 2 December

Vacancy: One

One member of Congregation, not necessarily being members of any division and not in any case being nominated in a divisional capacity, who shall be elected by Congregation.

Dr A.W.M. Graham, From HT 2011
Balliol To MT 2013

Full details of Council's remit, composition, functions and powers can be found at: <http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/783-121.shtml>. Enquiries may be directed to the Head of the Council Secretariat (emma.rampton@admin.ox.ac.uk).

The following nominations have been received:

Tony Brett, MA Oxf, Computing Services

Nominated by:

K.M. Craddock, OUCS

D.C. Hastings, OUCS

H.F. Morton, Somerville

M.J. Parrott, Brasenose

Candidate statement:

- Head of IT Support Staff services in Oxford University Computing Services, where I have worked since 2003.
- Institute of Molecular Medicine IT Manager 1993-1998
- Corpus Christi (Oxford) IT Manager 1998-2003
- Matriculated, Corpus Christi (Oxford) 1989, BA (hons) 1993, MA 1998

As a long-standing academic-related member of Congregation I offer the perspective of this institution's increasing number of academic-related staff to Council if elected. With the increasing emergence of 'third space'¹ professionals in the higher education sector I believe I would bring strategic advantage to Council in contributing to governance that balances the professional, academic and administrative needs of our world-leading institution with the management of its finances, services, and property.

I have a wide remit across the whole Collegiate University providing strategic direction to all units on ICT matters. I sit on divisional and departmental IT Committees and have conducted large- and small-scale reviews of IT provision in several departments and colleges. I regularly challenge units to ensure their IT strategy is in line with, and driven by, their overall strategy and aims. I am responsible to around 650 IT Support Staff at every level of seniority in all parts of the Collegiate University of Oxford. As a member of Oxford City Council I offer a unique insight into the civic context of our University.

Sarah E. Thomas, AB Smith College, MA PhD Johns Hopkins, MA Oxf, MS Simmons College, Fellow of Balliol, Bodleian Libraries

Nominated by:

C.A. Lewis, Dean of Christ Church, Faculty of Theology

F.A. Cairncross, Rector of Exeter

R.W. Ainsworth, Master of St Catherine's, Faculty of Engineering Science

K.E. Davies, Hertford, Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics

W.S. James, Brasenose, Dunn School of Pathology

R. Ovenden, St Hugh's, Bodleian Libraries

S.P. Perry, Balliol, Faculty of English

A.E. Trefethen, Oxford E-Research Centre

Candidate statement:

As Bodley's Librarian I have the privilege of serving the entire University of Oxford as well as providing a service for the 'Republic of the Learned'. I would bring this same multi-lateral orientation to the responsibilities of Council. The role of Oxford's university librarian gives me a broad perspective on the university and requires me to understand and balance the needs of a variety of sectors in shaping our information policies and practices. A complex organisation, the Bodleian Libraries are one of the largest departments in the university and offer regular opportunities to interact with all divisions as well as the administrative, financial, legal, and other services of the university, such as estates and IT.

Now in my fourth year at Oxford, I have substantial experience as a member of the Buildings and Estates Subcommittee and of the Personnel Committee. As a professorial fellow at Balliol I have gained a deep appreciation of the value of the collegiate university.

My library career began at Harvard's Widener Library and I subsequently held positions at Johns Hopkins, Stanford, the Library of Congress, and Cornell, where I was University Librarian for a decade and adjunct professor of German. I hold an A.B. in German from Smith College, a M.S. in Library Science from Simmons College, and a Ph.D. in German from Johns Hopkins and have studied at universities in Hamburg, Freiburg, and Frankfurt. These diverse experiences would provide a useful foundation of reference on which to build contributions to Council.

General notes:

The nomination period for this election closed at 4.00 p.m. on Thursday 4 November 2010.

All members of Congregation are entitled to vote in this election. Ballot papers were sent out to voters during the week of 15 November. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4.00 p.m. on 2 December 2010.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency. If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General

1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be emailed automatically to the email address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges

6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at <http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm>.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer

7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers' Warranty and Indemnity

13. The advertiser warrants:

(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.

(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person's intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette

16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

Gazette publication arrangements

Advertisers are asked to note that the remaining Gazettes of Michaelmas term will be published on 2 and 9 December. Publication for Hilary term will begin on 13 January. The usual deadline will continue to apply (see above).

Congregation 30 November 2 p.m.

1 Approval on a division of amendment to resolution to conduct a consultative ballot on changes to the Universities Superannuation Scheme put forward by the Employers Pensions Forum and the University and College Union

Text of Amendment

The purpose of this amendment is to ensure that the consultation and ballot should take place with proper information available, and to invite USS, through the University, to make good the major defects in the existing consultation. As the requested further information may lead to consultation responses that cover more than the two choices in the ballot, we also remove the requirement that the ballot result be the 'principal' local response.

Replace 'as the principal local response' in (iv) by 'as part of the local response', remove 'and' from the end of (iv), replace the final '.' in (v) by ';' and then add

'(vi) seek proper information from USS, in conformity with the guidance provided by the Department of Work and Pensions on the conduct of a formal consultation by employers on major changes in a pension scheme; this information should include a suitable range of worked examples; and

(vii) request USS to restart the consultation after this information is made available, with those who have already submitted responses being allowed to modify them; if USS refuses, re-start the local consultation.'

[For: 181; against: 33]

2 Approval on a division of amended resolution to conduct a consultative ballot on changes to the Universities Superannuation Scheme put forward by the Employers Pensions Forum and the University and College Union

Text of Resolution

Congregation notes that the University as an employer has a statutory obligation, under the Occupational and Personal Pension Schemes (Consultation by Employers and Miscellaneous Amendment) Regulations 2006, to consult affected employees on the changes that have been proposed to the Universities Superannuation Scheme.

Congregation further notes:

(a) that persons who are active members of USS or are eligible to join the scheme have received as part of that consultation process a copy of a USS document outlining the proposed changes and a document from the Employers Pension Forum for Higher Education which purports to explain 'why changes are needed' and that 'the proposed changes are considered by the employers to be right for the benefit of the scheme and its members'; and

(b) that as the body representing all employee members of USS under the rules of the Scheme, the University and College Union has published on its website criticism of the process being followed by Higher Education employers in carrying out the consultation, and a critique of the EPF document.

Believing that consultation, if it is to be meaningful, must seek the views of those consulted when the latter have been provided with all the information necessary for them to make an informed response, Congregation determines that the University will:

(i) publish to all affected employees the alternative proposals for changes to USS put forward by the EPF and by UCU, together with supporting arguments for each;

(ii) conduct a consultative ballot on those alternative proposals;

(iii) publish the result of the ballot to scheme members within the University;

(iv) send the ballot result to USS as part of the local response to the statutory consultation exercise;

(v) ensure all members of USS are able to engage in the process and that their comments are fully reflected in the institution's response to USS and that they are published locally;

(vi) seek proper information from USS, in conformity with the guidance provided by the Department of Work and Pensions on the conduct of a formal consultation by employers on major changes in a pension scheme; this information should include a suitable range of worked examples; and

(vii) request USS to restart the consultation after this information is made available, with those who have already submitted responses being allowed to modify them; if USS refuses, re-start the local consultation.'

[For: 161; against: 25]

Congregation

Congregation 2 December

Congregation 14 December 2 p.m.

¶ Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 6 December, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose one or more of the resolutions below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the resolutions shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

1 Voting on resolutions authorising use of sites at the Old Road Campus

Explanatory Note

The Old Road Campus was acquired by the University from the NHS in 1996. The site is now the focus for a significant proportion of the University's medical research, housing both general and specialist laboratories together with facilities for office-based research. In 1999, following the acquisition of further land and the completion of the first major new building on the site (the Henry Wellcome Building for Genomic Medicine), a master-planning exercise was undertaken to identify the main development plots. Since that time, the site has evolved rapidly. However, one area (the location of the original NHS buildings) has yet to be developed. It is proposed that space in that area be allocated for the construction of two new buildings: the Kennedy Institute and a new building for the Nuffield Department of Medicine (NDM).

The establishment of the Kennedy Institute in Oxford aligns with a key strategic aim of the Medical Sciences Division: to develop an institute capable of pursuing state-of-the-art biomedical research at both a basic and translational level in autoimmunity and inflammation. The facility will offer the ability to provide high-quality research space that will enhance recruitment and retention of high calibre researchers.

The new NDM facility would accommodate work on Structural Biology, a Target Discovery Institute and clinical trial activities. This project is closely aligned to high priority objectives of both the Medical Sciences Division and the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division, and each of the three components that would be incorporated into the facility will strengthen an aspect of the University's medical research position.

Text of Resolutions

(i) That a site at the Old Road Campus (providing approximately 3,710 sq.m. net usable space) be allocated for the construction of the Kennedy Institute;

(ii) That a site at the Old Road Campus (providing approximately 2,380 sq.m. net usable space) be allocated for the construction of a new building for the Nuffield Department of Medicine.

2 Voting on Resolution approving the conferment of Honorary Degree

That the conferment of the Degree of Master of Arts, honoris causa, upon Lady Nancy Caroline Gayley Kenny, BA Vassar, PGCE Oxf, former Director of Alumni Relations at the University, former Secretary of the Oxford University Society, Fellow of St Peter's, be approved.

¶ If the resolution is approved, the degree will be conferred at a ceremony on 5 March 2010.

Note on procedures in Congregation

¶ Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

COUNCIL

Vacancy: One

One member of Congregation, not necessarily being members of any division and not in any case being nominated in a divisional capacity, who shall be elected by Congregation.

Dr A.W.M. Graham, From HT 2011 To Balliol MT 2013

Full details of Council's remit, composition, functions and powers can be found at: <http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/783-121.shtml>. Enquiries may be directed to the Head of the Council Secretariat (emma.rampton@admin.ox.ac.uk).

The following nominations have been received:

Tony Brett, MA Oxf, Computing Services

Nominated by:

K.M. Craddock, OUCS

D.C. Hastings, OUCS

H.F. Morton, Somerville

M.J. Parrott, Brasenose

Candidate statement:

- Head of IT Support Staff services in Oxford University Computing Services, where I have worked since 2003.
- Institute of Molecular Medicine IT Manager 1993–1998
- Corpus Christi (Oxford) IT Manager 1998–2003
- Matriculated, Corpus Christi (Oxford) 1989, BA (hons) 1993, MA 1998

As a long-standing academic-related member of Congregation I offer the perspective of this institution's increasing number of academic-related staff to Council if elected. With the increasing emergence of 'third space' professionals in the higher education sector I believe I would bring strategic advantage to Council in contributing to governance that balances the professional, academic and administrative needs of our world-leading institution with the management of its finances, services, and property.

I have a wide remit across the whole Collegiate University providing strategic direction to all units on ICT matters. I sit on divisional and departmental IT Committees and have conducted large- and small-scale reviews of IT provision in several departments and colleges. I regularly challenge units to ensure their IT strategy is in line with, and driven by, their overall strategy and aims. I am responsible to around 650 IT Support Staff at every level of seniority in all parts of the Collegiate University of Oxford. As a member of Oxford City Council I offer a unique insight into the civic context of our University.

Sarah E. Thomas, AB Smith College, MA PhD Johns Hopkins, MA Oxf, MS Simmons College, Fellow of Balliol, Bodleian Libraries

Nominated by:

C.A. Lewis, Dean of Christ Church, Faculty of Theology

F.A. Cairncross, Rector of Exeter

R.W. Ainsworth, Master of St Catherine's, Faculty of Engineering Science

K.E. Davies, Hertford, Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics

W.S. James, Brasenose, Dunn School of Pathology

R. Ovenden, St Hugh's, Bodleian Libraries

S.P. Perry, Balliol, Faculty of English

A.E. Trefethen, Oxford E-Research Centre

Candidate statement:

As Bodley's Librarian I have the privilege of serving the entire University of Oxford as well as providing a service for the 'Republic of the Learned'. I would bring this same multi-lateral orientation to the responsibilities of Council. The role of Oxford's university librarian gives me a broad perspective on the university and requires me to understand and balance the needs of a variety of sectors in shaping our information policies and practices. A complex organisation, the Bodleian Libraries are one of the largest departments in the university and offer regular opportunities to interact with all divisions as well as the administrative, financial, legal, and other services of the university, such as estates and IT.

Now in my fourth year at Oxford, I have substantial experience as a member of the Buildings and Estates Subcommittee and of the Personnel Committee. As a professorial fellow at Balliol I have gained a deep appreciation of the value of the collegiate university.

My library career began at Harvard's Widener Library and I subsequently held positions at Johns Hopkins, Stanford, the Library of Congress, and Cornell, where I was University Librarian for a decade and adjunct professor of German. I hold an A.B. in German from Smith College, a M.S. in Library Science from Simmons College, and a Ph.D. in German from Johns Hopkins and have studied at universities in Hamburg, Freiburg, and Frankfurt. These diverse experiences would provide a useful foundation of reference on which to build contributions to Council.

General notes:

The nomination period for this election closed at 4.00 p.m. on Thursday 4 November 2010.

All members of Congregation are entitled to vote in this election. Ballot papers were sent out to voters during the week of 15 November. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4.00 p.m. on 2 December 2010.

For more information, please contact the Elections Office. (elections.office@admin.ox.ac.uk).

For a properly-informed consultation on our pension scheme

As the Vice-Chancellor's Summary of the Council meeting of November 15th 2010 makes clear, Council has welcomed the opportunity provided by a Congregation resolution (of 11th November) for a broad discussion in Congregation on pensions issues. That discussion will take place at 2 pm on Tuesday 30th November in the Sheldonian Theatre. An amendment to the resolution has now been tabled and this flysheet explains why this was thought necessary.

Members of Congregation should be in no doubt that the reforms proposed to pensions by USS will affect almost all of us, including current employees and pensioners, and that almost all the proposed changes will have deleterious consequences for our pensions. As demonstrated in the article by Susan Cooper and Stephen Cowley in the Week 5 issue of Oxford Magazine, some future pension entitlements could be less than 50% of current entitlements; and the capping of inflation-indexed rises introduces further insecurity.

USS is in the process of consulting its members on the proposals. The amendment was proposed because the present consultation is flawed: the consultation process has not conformed with guidelines issued by the Department of Work and Pensions on the conduct of major pension reviews because members have not been given adequate information with which to judge the potential effects of the changes on them.

The University, as employer, cannot modify the USS proposals unilaterally. But they could be modified if the University and individuals make direct representations to the USS Trustees as part of the consultation.

The University has asked for further information from USS in order to provide its employees with appropriate information on which to base their response to the consultation. Cambridge has already done likewise but at the time of writing it is understood that no further information has been forthcoming.

Nevertheless whatever response USS makes to the University, it cannot address the second problem highlighted by the amendment. The consultation must be restarted because the present consultation---already half over---has been conducted without adequate information being provided. Whatever one's position on the details of the USS proposals, it is surely unacceptable that major changes could be made on the basis of such a flawed consultation process.

This is an important issue of direct relevance to all Congregation members. The motion and amendment provide our most effective route to influence the USS Trustees to think again. Cambridge's Regent House will soon be debating a motion similar to the one before Congregation. Staff at other UK universities do not have such democratic rights.

We urge all members of Congregation to attend this meeting, so that the views of the University can be put clearly and unequivocally to USS.

Flysheet: USS Pension Scheme Debate Congregation 30th November 2010

The resolution before Congregation on 30 November seeks to ensure both that members of the University's staff who are currently making contributions towards their pensions to the Universities Superannuation Scheme [USS], or who are eligible to do so, have adequate information on which to base their response to the consultation taking place on proposed changes to the scheme. It also seeks to ensure that USS members and those eligible to become members are individually balloted by the University on the proposals for change, and that the result of that ballot forms the basis of the University's own institutional response to the consultation.

The changes which are planned are ones that have been put forward by the employers' side on the USS Joint Negotiating Committee [JNC], through the Employers Pension Forum [EPF]. If implemented - the intended date of implementation is 1 April 2011 - they will fundamentally and for the foreseeable future dramatically change the scheme and reduce the pension benefits available to members through it.

The changes will:

- raise for most members the age at which they will be permitted to retire with an unreduced pension (the 'Normal Pension Age' [NPA])
- raise employee contribution rates
- change the basis for calculating inflation-proofing increases in pensions, in ways which are likely to lead to smaller increases than at present
- base pensions on career average earnings (revalued for inflation), rather than on final salary as at present, for new entrants to the scheme and for people rejoining it after a gap of more than six months.

They will, in fact, mean that all members and potential members of the scheme who have not already retired will almost certainly be worse off when they come to draw their pensions, and for many near the beginning of their careers pensions will be some thousands of pounds a year less than they would be under current arrangements. The total lifetime loss for some is likely to run well into six figures.

The EPF have justified the proposed changes on the need to secure the long-term safety of USS. In doing so they are taking advantage of the current public concerns about the nation's economic situation and about the affordability of existing pension schemes, but USS is not a scheme that is in any sense in crisis. It is a very large and fundamentally very safe scheme. Its huge financial resources dipped a little a couple of years ago, but not to the extent that urgent and drastic action was necessary, and they have recovered quite well in the most recent period. The scheme has to be formally valued every three years, and the next occasion for this will be March 2011. There is good reason to think that the valuation will show the scheme to be in good health, and it is therefore perverse to be pushing through detrimental changes when a favourable valuation is likely to follow in a matter of a small number of weeks.

Furthermore, alternative changes have been put forward by the University and College Union [UCU], which officially represents all employee members and potential members for USS purposes, whether UCU members or not, and which is the other body represented on the USS JNC. The JNC having been equally divided over the proposals for change, the EPF proposals were adopted only by the independent chair casting his vote in their favour.

The changes proposed by UCU would provide for some increases in employee contributions (on a tiered basis), and would raise the NPA for new entrants but leave it unchanged for all existing members of the scheme. These proposals by UCU would, we are confident, be fully sufficient to give what additional stability the scheme's finances might be thought to need. In so doing, the proposals would

- retain the final salary basis for pensions for all USS members
- protect the current basis for the calculation of inflation-proofing increases in pensions
- retain greater protection for members leaving and rejoining the scheme

For staff of the University of Oxford to be well enough informed to make a meaningful response to the consultation which the University, as employer, is required to conduct, they must have information about the alternative to the EPF proposals. So far, only the latter have been explained and advocated in the consultation documents that have been sent to all USS members by the University. That is why the resolution, if passed, will require that the UCU proposals are also circulated, with supporting arguments.

Additionally, in order that the University's institutional response to the consultation properly reflects the views of all its members, the resolution, if passed, will require that a ballot of all affected staff be conducted and the result used as the principal response from this institution.

Pensions may be very much at the front of the minds of colleagues who are approaching retirement. For many at an earlier stage in their career, they may well be rather further towards the back of the mind. But pensions constitute a very significant part of the set of rewards all USS members earn from their employment. They pay contributions out of their current salary in order to have the benefit of a pension. Similarly, the University pays a contribution to the scheme on their behalf towards that pension. Changes to USS which have the effect of increasing members' contributions and reducing the benefits eventually received are the same in effect as a reduction in pay. All the University's current and future USS-pensionable staff will be affected to a smaller or (in very many cases) a larger - frequently much larger - extent.

It is vital, therefore, that changes which are both unnecessary and very detrimental are not implemented. The passing of the resolution by Congregation on 30 November would be a significant step towards preventing that implementation. We therefore urge all our colleagues who are members of Congregation to attend the meeting and to vote in favour of the resolution.

Report of proceedings in Congregation, 30 November 2010

Debate on a resolution to conduct a consultative ballot on changes to the Universities Superannuation Scheme put forward by the Employers Pensions Forum and the University and College Union

The report of the debates in Congregation on 30 November on the resolution to conduct a consultative ballot on changes to the Universities Superannuation Scheme put forward by the Employers Pensions Forum and the University and College Union (see Gazette, 25 November, p. 240), and on an amendment to that resolution, is set out below.

At the close of the debate on the amendment to the resolution, the amendment was approved on a division [for: 181; against: 33].

At the close of the debate on the amended resolution, the amended resolution was approved on a division [for: 161; against: 25].

¶ Papers for the consultative ballot are being circulated with a closing date of 20 December.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: The business before Congregation is voting on a resolution to conduct a consultative ballot on changes to the Universities Superannuation Scheme put forward by the Employers Pension Forum and the University and College Union, and on an amendment to that resolution. Will you please be seated.

The resolution, which comprises the main business of today's meeting, was placed on the agenda of this meeting in the University Gazette, first published on 11 November. As noted in the Gazette notice, published on 25 November, an amendment to the resolution has been received. Therefore the amendment will be debated and voted upon; then a vote and a debate will take place on the original resolution as amended, or on the original resolution, as appropriate.

The procedure for today's meeting will therefore be as follows: I shall begin by asking the Registrar to read the resolution and the amendment. I shall then invite Professor Barbara Harriss-White to move the resolution, and Mr Terry Hoad to second it. I shall next invite Dr Sally Mapstone, Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Personnel and Equality), to oppose the resolution and Dr Stephen Goss to second that opposition. I shall then invite Mr Robin Briggs to move the amendment and Dr Sabina Lovibond to second it. I shall next invite Dr Mapstone to oppose the amendment and Dr Goss to second that opposition. The mover and opposer of the resolution have been asked to speak for no more than eight minutes, and their respective seconders to speak for no more than five minutes. The mover and opposer of the amendment and their respective seconders have been asked to speak for no more than five minutes.

After that, the debate on the amendment will be open to the House. I would ask all speakers to come forward and speak into the microphone, first giving their name and college or department. Speakers from the floor of the House should please follow the usual convention of not speaking for more than five minutes. May I draw the attention of speakers to the device positioned to the side of the lectern. This anti-loquitor device has green, amber and red lights to help speakers with the timing of their speeches. The amber light shows with one minute remaining and should encourage speakers to begin to wind up their remarks. Red means speakers are out of time and must conclude their remarks.

A number of members of Congregation have indicated a wish to speak, and I will endeavour to call them all but I cannot guarantee that I shall be able to do so. Priority will be given to those who have indicated in advance that they wish to speak and I would ask that additional speakers come forward to speak only if they have new points to add which have not already been raised by the other speakers.

In accordance with health and safety guidelines, the stenographer, who is helping us to transcribe today's proceedings, is entitled to a break after an hour and a half. Therefore if speeches are still being made at 3.30 p.m., I shall call for a five-minute break.

I would be grateful if any speaker who uses a written text would afterwards provide a copy of that text to Mrs Benton, the officer who is collecting such speeches, as this will be of assistance in preparing the published record of the debate, which will appear as a Gazette supplement as soon as possible, although I hope in the issue published on 9 December, but, of course, also on the University website. At the end of the debate, I shall give Dr Mapstone the right of reply on behalf of Council, and I shall give Mr Robin Briggs the right of the reply to the debate on the amendment. They will each have five minutes in which to do so. I remind them both that they should at that stage deal only with points raised during the course of the debate and should not introduce any new matters.

I shall then take a division on the amendment. This will be by written ballot, for which members of Congregation should have received voting papers as they entered the Theatre. Any members who have not will have an opportunity to collect a paper at the exits as they leave. Under Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002, a vote can only be taken at the close of the debate, and I regret that any members who are unable to stay until I call the vote on the amendment will therefore not have an opportunity to register a vote. I should stress that this means that a member may not leave a completed voting paper with another member. The Proctors, Pro-Proctors and Bedels who will be collecting the papers at the door at the close of the debate will accept only each member's single personal voting paper. I shall explain the detailed voting arrangements when the vote is to be taken.

After the vote on the amendment, a debate and vote will then be held on the resolution as amended, or the original resolution, as appropriate. The second vote will also be by written ballot. I now ask the Registrar to read the resolution and the amendment.

REGISTRAR: The following is the text of the resolution.

Congregation notes that the University as an employer has a statutory obligation under the Occupational and Personal Pension Schemes (Consultation by Employers and Miscellaneous Amendment) Regulations 2006 to consult affected employees on the changes that have been proposed to the Universities Superannuation Scheme.

Congregation further notes:

(a) that persons who are active members of USS or are eligible to join the scheme have received as part of that consultation process a copy of a USS document outlining the proposed changes and a document from the Employers Pension Forum for Higher Education which purports to explain 'why changes are needed' and that 'the proposed changes are considered by the employers to be right for the benefit of the scheme and its members'; and

(b) that as the body representing all employee members of USS under the rules of the scheme, the University and College Union has published on its website criticism of the process being followed by higher education employers in carrying out the consultation, and a critique of the EPF document.

Believing that consultation, if it is to be meaningful, must seek the views of those consulted when the latter have been provided with all the information necessary for them to make an informed response, Congregation determines that the University will:

- (i) publish to all affected employees the alternative proposals for changes to USS put forward by the EPF and by UCU, together with supporting arguments for each;
- (ii) conduct a consultative ballot on those alternative proposals;
- (iii) publish the result of the ballot to scheme members within the University;
- (iv) send the ballot result to USS as the principal local response to the statutory consultation exercise; and
- (v) ensure all members of USS are able to engage in the process and that their comments are fully reflected in the institution's response to USS and that they are published locally.

The following is the text of the amendment:

The purpose of this amendment is to ensure that the consultation and ballot should take place with proper information available, and to invite USS, through the University, to make good the major defects in the existing consultation. As the requested further information may lead to consultation responses that cover more than the two choices in the ballot, we also remove the requirement that the ballot result be the 'principal' local response.

Replace 'as the principal local response' in (iv) by 'as part of the local response', remove 'and' from the end of (iv), replace the final ':' in (v) by ';' and then add:

'(vi) seek proper information from USS, in conformity with the guidance provided by the Department of Work and Pensions on the conduct of a formal consultation by employers on major changes in a pension scheme; this information should include a suitable range of worked examples; and

(vii) request USS to restart the consultation after this information is made available with those who have already submitted responses being allowed to modify them; if USS refuses, restart the local consultation.'

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. Could I ask Professor Harriss-White to move the resolution.

Professor Barbara Harriss-White
(Wolfson College, Department of International Development)

Mr Vice-Chancellor and fellow members of Congregation, we are here today to discuss an employers' document on pension reform that has been sent to all of us with a request for responses. On the face of it, the problem is how to deal with the fact that we are living ever longer. The employers' proposals would raise the normal pension age to 65, and to 66 by 2020; increase existing members' contributions from 6.35 to 7.5 per cent; introduce a cap on the level of protection against inflation, and on the revaluation of deferred benefits; and for new entrants, exchange the final salary scheme, which I'll call FS, for a career average re-evaluated earnings scheme, with a nice acronym of CARE. USS members will then get significantly different benefits depending on the circumstances they experience in the course of their university service.

The season for consultation opened on 20 October and will close on 22 December. In this process, employers are bound to provide information to employees and their representatives. The clock is ticking and it is already two-thirds spent.

In proposing the resolution, I wish to make two points: one about information, and the other about procedure.

With respect to information, the guidelines of the Department of Work and Pensions require USS members to be provided with appropriate worked examples. Without these, we cannot make an informed response to the consultation, but the information provided by the USS on their website has been far from adequate. They seem to acknowledge this themselves, as they recently added twelve points of supplementary information to total the eighty-nine questions that they anticipate our asking, yet it is still inadequate. For instance, on the key issue of what individuals will lose, and what USS will save, by changing from FS to CARE, USS simulates CARE over three immediate years, but, according to Susan Cooper and Stephen Cowley's calculations in the Oxford Magazine, Week 5, the change will reduce pensions from a working lifetime of contributions by at least twenty per cent. This does not count any potential additional losses from the proposed cap on inflation protection. USS should have provided us with worked examples over typical careers.

Second, we need information on issues ignored by USS, or only very lately added to their website. The proposals seek to write the Consumer Price Index specifically into the rules as the basis for calculating pension increases, so that even if the government decided to do something different, and better, for 'official pensions' in the future, USS would remain stuck with the CPI, which is a lower rate of increase than the index we have now. We need to know the reasons why.

Then there is the matter of its impact. USS explains that this aspect of the proposal is 'straightforward and illustrations are unnecessary', I quote, but they then contradict themselves by saying that the impact 'is an impossible question to answer fully without sophisticated modeling'. Well after the deadline for USS to provide information, the website has, indeed, made a spirited attempt at modelling, which then shows significant losses to individuals, averaging five per cent per year over a twenty-year pension. The issue should have been prominently published so we could consider it properly. We also need to know the reasons for the proposal to cap the CPI at five per cent. Cooper and Cowley show that had this cap been applied in the 1970s and 1980s, it would have cut pensions by up to thirty-six per cent in real terms. Clearly, our pensions are not 'defined benefits' if inflation exceeds five per cent. We need expert advice on the exposure of our pensions and our pension fund to market risks, including inflation.

Third, certain pensions face a wall of discretion. We need more information on the exemption from CARE for staff who take more than six months but less than five years of time out for whatever reason: to work in industry, to work for the UN, to work abroad, to wait for a research grant to come, bringing up young children or caring for relatives. It is proposed that such cases will need 'pre-agreement' according to criteria which USS itself confesses are 'inexact'. They introduce a discretion associated with, and I quote, 'a reasonable expectation of a return to duty with that employer, or with an associated employer.' The USS advises haste in resolving such cases, suggesting that they appreciate that the CARE scheme is inferior to FS. We are entitled to know Oxford's criteria for exemptions from CARE, and USS should have provided a direct comparison. These reforms are likely to have the worst effect on women, because women earn less than men, and if breaks are taken to care for young children, it tends to be women who take them. We need to know the gender or the equalities impact of the reforms. This is devolved to each university. According to the proposal, it 'may be a requirement'. We should insist that it is a requirement here. In sum, the changes proposed will reduce both existing and future pensions. The academics who replace us will have a very much worse deal, and staff who intermit, defer, take early requirement or are made redundant, will be liable to have still poorer pensions. These are serious losses.

In considering our response, we're entitled to have timely and relevant information that has so far not been given. There is one last issue of information I wish to raise. The employers' proposal is not the only proposal for solving the problem posed by our living longer. There is a UCU proposal, but instead of it also being there for us to consider, it is buried under thick sediment on the USS website. Eight informed clicks; I can give the URL to anybody interested.

My second point concerns procedure, and it will be much more brief. The University's institutional response should represent the opinions of its staff. Under DWP rules, USS must consult the University, which must, in turn, consult its staff. So Oxford could, and it should, circulate the two alternative proposals for change to USS pensions; provide the arguments in support of each of them; test opinion in a ballot between them; and then use the ballot results to provide Oxford's institutional response to the USS board and, if necessary, the government.

If we, employers and employees of the University, are not in this together, one wonders at the reasons why. If we are in this together, we can today express our concern about the future of our profession, about recruitment and retention in higher education, as encapsulated in the question of pension reform. I therefore move the resolution, first, for a properly informed 4* consultation on the proposal to reform our pension scheme, which includes its equality impact; and, second, for a representation from Oxford University to the USS trustees which truly and clearly reflects the view of the staff of this University. Now, we want to get through the amendment as efficiently as possible and to have the main discussion on the resolution after the debate on the amendment, so I hope that we can develop a broad discussion of the proposal of the official alternative, and of many other alternatives later. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Could I call on Mr Hoad to second the resolution, please.

Mr Terry Hoad (St Peter's College)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, members of Congregation. We've just heard cogent arguments as to why fuller information is needed in the USS consultation process. In seconding the resolution, I will focus on just two questions on which fuller information is needed: how much change is required? and what alternative courses of action are available? The twelve-page USS consultation booklet provides just one side of rather bland text on 'the need for change'. It tells members that employers see the proposed changes as 'necessary to safeguard the long term sustainability of the scheme.' It tells them that, nevertheless, 'the scheme is not in crisis, although it is in danger of becoming unaffordable.' And it tells them that 'mounting financial and other pressures are putting a strain on the scheme.' The pressures are identified as being, firstly, the habit members have acquired of living longer, and so drawing their pensions for more years; higher than anticipated salary increases in recent years; and lower than expected investment returns and ongoing volatility in the markets.

There is not a scrap of quantification of the financial pressures on the scheme, but the impression is given, firstly, that the scheme is in a perilous situation, calling for swift and serious remedial action; and, secondly, that only changes set out in EPF proposals will suffice. Neither should be accepted. How seriously is the scheme in danger? Three relevant facts can be gleaned from the USS Members' Annual Report 2010. Last year, the value of the USS fund increased by £8.5 billion, an increase of around forty per cent. The proportion of the scheme's liabilities for future pensions that is covered by its accumulated funds rose from seventy-five per cent to ninety-one per cent. It has therefore moved back quite close to the figure of 103 per cent, which applied when the 2008 valuation took place. Finally, employee and employer contributions received exceeded benefits paid by £129 million. It has, indeed, routinely been the case for a good many years that USS contribution income has substantially exceeded benefits paid out. As the scheme matures, that is likely to change, of course, but the timescale will be moderately long.

All this is scarcely evidence justifying immediate major cutbacks in member benefits, but how will members know the flimsiness of the evidence unless provided with the relevant information? For very many of us, pensions are a pretty arcane subject; confident assertions, even if unsubstantiated, are all too likely to be accepted without question if no counter-argument is made. Will members see behind a veneer of talk about 'sustainability' to the employers' real claim: that they cannot afford the present arrangements? The EPF leaflet, 'USS—the need for reform', is more explicit. I quote: 'Employers are certainly unable to fund the rising costs of USS in its current form.' Can we accept that claim? Consider, because of constraints of time, just one point. Noting recent salary increases, the USS consultation booklet speaks of trends of higher than expected pay rises as 'one of the cost pressures on the scheme.' Salary increases and higher education have been less than extravagantly generous for some time, so talk of a trend of higher than expected pay rises strikes a risibly implausible note. Rather, universities were blessed with a significantly lower pay increase—0.5 per cent in 2009—than most had expected and, indeed, had budgeted for.

Let me turn more briefly to my second topic: alternative ways of addressing the situation. There is very little mention in the USS consultation booklet, and none in the EPF leaflet, of the fact that the University and College Union put forward a carefully worked out alternative set of proposals, some very close to the ones proposed by the employers. On the basis of the information in the consultation papers, would members know that the UCU proposals included raising the normal pension age for new entrants to the scheme? Would they know that those proposals included increases in employee contributions? Would they know that UCU had agreed that cost increases, which at present fall exclusively on the employers, would in future be shared between them and the employees? Would they know that actuarial advice taken by UCU supported the Union's belief that the changes it was suggesting would be fully sufficient to address the scheme's needs? Members of Congregation, I ask you to support the resolution which will enable staff members to make a properly informed response in the consultation.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. Could I ask Dr Mapstone to oppose the resolution.

Dr Sally Mapstone (St Hilda's College, English Faculty)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, Proctors, members of Congregation, I'm Pro-Vice-Chancellor

(Personnel and Equality), a member of Council elected by Congregation, and I'm also, like most people here, a member of USS, so I thus declare a conflict of interest in relation to this debate. In opposing the resolution I will set out why Council decided it was unacceptable. In the spirit of the broad discussion of pensions, which the Vice-Chancellor has agreed should be the context for our debate, I shall also be offering Congregation some comments on the University's position as an employer within the USS consultation.

I'm sure that today we're going to hear a range of views about the state of health of USS, the nature of its valuations, our place as a University within it, and the impact of the proposed changes. We will also hear, as we have done already, requests for further information from USS, though in the remarks that I shall be making in due course in relation to the amendment, I shall also be drawing the attention of Congregation again to the twelve supplementary questions and answers already referred to today that have now been added to the USS consultation website. Those questions and answers were requested by this University. As this example illustrates, I think that the University needs to be focused and realistic about the most effective ways in which it can influence the consultation that is currently taking place.

Council had two principal reasons for viewing both the resolution and the amendment as unacceptable. The first was that members of Council felt that Congregation should have the opportunity for broad discussion of pensions issues, and took the view that the surest way to bring about such a discussion was to instruct the Registrar to declare the resolution unacceptable to Council. The response in Council to the amendment was similar.

Everybody, I think, recognises that the changes to our pension scheme that directly affect us as employees and individuals are complex and challenging. They are complex because they involve taking on board both an understanding of the scheme now and in the future, and of the impact of changes within it upon oneself and upon others at different times and in different ways. They are complex because they involve assumptions about what the scheme is worth and what it might be worth, about how investments may perform, about how inflation may work, and about when you are going to die. They are also challenging because we know there are various live issues with which consideration of our pension scheme connects. These include Lord Hutton's review of public sector pensions, where the changes proposed may well be more radical than those being proposed for USS, and the ongoing debate on tuition fees. Getting to grips with all of this is itself a challenge, and thus this debate is further to be welcomed. We would intend to submit a transcript of this debate to USS on behalf of the University.

The proposals on which we're being consulted have been two years in the making and are the result of extensive discussion in the Joint Negotiating Committee of the USS, which, although a USS body, sits apart from the trustee board. The JNC consists of two stakeholder groups: five people appointed by Universities UK, and five people appointed by the UCU. It has an independent chairman. Proposals for change have come about as a result of concerns about the sustainability of the scheme, following a series of recent valuations, the last of which, at March of this year, showed a funding deficit of £2.7 billion. The employers and the unions take different views on the current state and long-term prognosis for the scheme, and we will certainly be hearing different views on this today, and different views were expressed on it in Council. The proposals that we should remind ourselves we're currently being consulted on, however, are those which were accepted by the Joint Negotiating Committee on 7 July of this year, when the chairman cast his deciding vote in favour of them. These were the proposals of the Employers Pensions Forum, proposals that also, as you have heard, have been put forward by the UCU members on the committee. The employers' proposals, once accepted, were subsequently accepted by the USS trustees at a meeting on 22 July and have been worked up into the form on which consultation is now taking place.

The employers' proposals retain final salary benefits for existing USS members. They introduced, for everyone under fifty-five, a normal pension age of sixty-five for future service, so that pensions taken from before that age are actuarially reduced to recognise the extra length of time over which the pension would be payable—important as a response to increasing longevity. They increase employee contributions, such contributions having remained broadly constant since the scheme was set up, and employers alone having borne the additional costs required by the scheme since its inception. They introduce cost-sharing between employers and employees in relation to any future increases. They introduce a new way of calculating benefits for new starters: this so-called CARE scheme reduces the strain on the scheme that arises from substantial salary increases close to retirement, which boost the pension without concomitant contributions to cover the full cost. They cap increases in pensions in payment in line with the CPI or five per cent, whichever is the lower, on future rights that are earned in the scheme. They cap increases in pensions in deferment in line with the CPI or 2.5 per cent, whichever is the lower. They introduce arrangements to permit flexible retirement after age fifty-five.

When a consultation of this sort takes place, there are statutory obligations on the employer. Under the terms of the Occupational and Personal Pension Schemes (Consultation by Employers and Miscellaneous Amendment) Regulations 2006, the University as an employer is required to consult on listed changes—which include certain of the USS proposals—with specified representatives of affected members and, after the consultation is complete, to forward the comments received to the trustees. Our recognised representatives are the UCU. Stephen Goss, who chairs the University's Joint Consultative Committee with the Oxford UCU will be talking next about our recent discussions with the Union. We should also note at this stage that the catchment of the present consultation has been expanded by USS and the employers to cover each individual affected member of USS, although that is not technically required.

I need now to share with Congregation the second reason that Council viewed the resolution and amendment as unacceptable. This lay in the reservations that some members of Council, as University trustees, had about aspects of the wording and purpose of the resolution and the amendment. In my remarks at this stage I will concentrate on the resolution and on the headline concerns about this. The resolution requires the University firstly to publish the alternative proposals for changes to USS put forward by the Employers Pension Forum and the UCU, together with supporting arguments for each, to conduct a consultative ballot on those alternative proposals and to publish the results to scheme members. The concern of some members of Council with this is that it advocates a process that is not part of the national consultation being undertaken by USS. There is no provision within the scheme rules for balloting members as an alternative to the JNC process in which the UCU have participated. The request is for a ballot on the 'alternative proposals', but nationally there are no alternative proposals on the table. The USS consultation is on one set of proposals originating with the employers, put forward by the JNC and worked up in their present form by the trustees. How meaningful to the consultation would be a ballot on something that is not part of the consultation itself?

The resolution also requires that the ballot response be sent to USS as the principal local response to the statutory consultation exercise. This is something, as we've heard, that has been changed in the amendment. The removal of this requirement is something that we would very much welcome, as we did not see how we could comply with the requirements of the statutory consultation by making a separate exercise the University's principal response. As noted, under the regulations, the response of the representatives, i.e. the one we will forward from the UCU, is the one strictly required.

Finally, Mr Vice-Chancellor, members of Council were concerned that this kind of exercise—time-consuming, resource intensive and tangential to the national consultation exercise itself—will distract from what should be the primary focus of this consultation period, considering the details of the proposals and seeking clarification, as we have been doing recently, of elements that would benefit from additional comment from USS. It was thus for this combination of reasons that Council took the decision it did, and I thus formally now oppose the resolution.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you very much. Could I ask Dr Goss to second the opposition to the resolution.

Dr Stephen Goss (Wadham College, Oxford Learning Institute)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, Proctors, and members of Congregation. I'm speaking this afternoon as Vice-Chairman of the Personnel Committee and I should like, please, to set this afternoon's discussion of the resolution in the context of two similar requests made recently to us by the UCU. The origins of the resolution can be traced specifically to a motion adopted in late August by the Oxford UCU. This motion asked the University to hold a consultative ballot on two sets of proposals—on the one hand, those approved by the JNC for implementation by the USS; and, on the other, the UCU proposals which were not supported by the JNC, and so which are no longer under consideration. The USS had, on behalf of the employers, devised a website to inform scheme members of the intended changes, and, as a supplement to the legally required consultations with the Union, to take a direct record of members' comments. When we met the Oxford UCU to consider their request for a ballot, none of us had seen the site as it had not been opened.

For officers of the University to have agreed to the Union's ballot could have been seen outside Oxford as indicating that we anticipated, even without having seen the USS site, that the questions which would be asked by the USS would be inappropriate or insufficient and we were concerned not to undermine the USS consultation by giving any such impression. When the USS site opened, it transpired that the areas addressed were wider ranging than required for statutory consultation, and the site offered scheme members the chance to comment specifically on each of six aspects of the proposed changes, and to make additional comments, including, if they wished, rejection of the entire package. As it had already taken two years of informed debate for the JNC to decide on their instruction to the trustees, it was clearly prudent, and also respectful of its intended audience, that the consultation should have been designed so as to tease out members' specific concerns, rather than just providing them with a yes/no ballot. The local ballot now sought by members of Congregation closely resembles the ballots sought by the Oxford UCU. Members will be given the choice between two sets of proposals—USS and UCU—and will also be able to comment. The USS consultation already provides well for collecting views on the proposals that the trustees are planning to implement, and a ballot on other proposals which the trustees are not considering could be misleading. It would be regrettable if providing the ballot were to suggest to members that voting for a set of proposals not under consideration could be more meaningful than commenting directly on the changes that the USS trustees are now bound to implement, subject to this consultation.

I would note in this context that, in early August, the national UCU made individual requests to all universities for a ballot on the two sets of proposals. Having had that request turned down, they decided to set up their own referendum and make it open to everyone, whether UCU member or not. It seeks a yes/no vote on only the USS proposals. The national UCU seems to have decided not to hold a referendum on its own proposals. We are now in a position where we can use the USS consultations site, which is designed to ensure that each individual can submit comments once only, and we can also use the national UCU referendum, which is open to all, including all those who have already had their say on the USS site. The resolution before Congregation proposes that we give Oxford staff a third chance to reject the substantive proposals and a second chance for free comment. It is difficult to see the need for Oxford staff to have so many opportunities to express their views, and it is equally difficult to see how such local preferment could be justified in a national context, especially since it is not possible to detect multiple voting.

Having called into question the appropriateness of the proposed ballot, I'm pleased now to acknowledge that it is very helpful that the proposed amendment would make a local ballot only a part of Oxford's response. Given our legal obligations, the requirement that the ballot should be our principal response would rightly have been a cause for concern. Furthermore, it is proper that we should not, in any way, subordinate our equality impact assessment of the USS proposals. That assessment is nearing completion and we are providing it to the UCU to inform their response in the statutory consultation. We are meeting to discuss the matter on Friday. Mr Vice-Chancellor, having offered these points in the spirit of Council's wish to facilitate a full debate on these matters, I should now like to second opposition to the resolution.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I now call on Mr Briggs to move the amendment.

Mr Robin Briggs (All Souls College)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, members of Congregation. My primary task for this afternoon is to explain the logic behind the amendment. This is a natural extension of the resolution, supported by those who drafted the latter, so its proposers hope that it can be approved quickly as the first step in moving to a general debate.

First, a few general remarks. This matter goes well beyond the individual interests of current members of USS. A sharp deterioration in the conditions of service of academic and academic-related staff, such as the proposed changes to the pension scheme would bring for new members in particular, would be a very bad thing for the University as a whole. We can expect discord due to pension rights that differ according to mere issues of career timing, and future recruitment and retention problems. However, it would seem that elsewhere University managers have thought differently and have often presented the changes as a done deal, presumably looking to their balance sheets. Oxford and Cambridge, with their exceptional democratic structures, may have a vital role to play in defending the general interest against such short-sighted attitudes. We cannot of our own accord vote the changes down nationally, but we can hold an open debate and require the University to consult properly. Ultimately, we must hope that when the USS trustees meet on 20 January, they can be persuaded, in part due to such measures, to refer the matter back for further negotiations.

The proposed ballot is one crucial instrument to that end, which the proposers of the amendment endorse very strongly. At a procedural level, I must stress that deleting the word 'principal' is a technical change to allow responses to further information and does not wish to downgrade—does not imply any wish to downgrade—the importance attached to this ballot or any future ballot.

The amendment strengthens the resolution by the very reasonable request that USS restart the consultation after providing adequate information. No date is specified in order to allow some flexibility to Council, and we recognise it is vital our reply be made by 22 December, both to meet our legal obligations and to ensure that USS cannot simply ignore our response. That should not preclude starting a second consultation after that date in order to remedy the deficiencies in the first. In this situation, the ballot alone would be an inadequate response to what we see as a major threat to the best interests of the University.

For the more senior members present, and even more for current pensioners like myself, the changes have only fairly modest effects. That's one reason why I'm making this opening speech as someone who has a less significant personal interest. In addition, as the chair of a body of pension fund trustees, I have myself already been obliged to undertake a certain amount of home study on procedures and regulations.

The amendment seeks to focus attention very precisely on the defects in the present consultation. This is a rather technical matter, so I hope you will bear with me as I try to unravel some of the complexities. We are operating under a set of rules laid out in this statutory instrument issued by the Department of Work and Pensions in 2006, already mentioned. When changes of certain specified kinds are proposed, employers must consult on amendments. So, Oxford University has the responsibility to consult, although the proposals come from USS. Both are under a duty to ensure that the consultation follows the rules, which includes the provision of full and adequate information. I do not believe that anyone could assert that with any confidence whatsoever about the present highly flawed exercise, which must surely lay both USS and Oxford open to an appeal to the Pensions Regulator.

What the statutory instrument actually says in Regulation 11 includes the following key requirements about information, which must be provided before the start of the consultation, not during it, and it must describe the listed change and state what effects it would or be likely to have on the scheme and its members, be accompanied by any relevant background information, and be given in such fashion and with such content as are appropriate to enable, in particular, representatives of affected members to consider, conduct a study of and give their views to the employer on the impact of the listed change on such members.

Then there is the supporting advice from the DWP, making it clear that worked examples of the type cited in the amendment should form part of the consultation. We can all read the sketchy document circulated by USS and see they have gone to some lengths to avoid giving figures: there are just two or three short and rather unhelpful answers. They would prefer to make reassuring statements of a general kind, and from calculations made by Susan Cooper and Stephen Cowley you will know why we should feel anything but reassured.

USS have very recently added some answers to questions on their website, much too late to count legally or morally. While some of them are more revealing than they may intend, I think it is actually misleading to tell us that changes have been agreed by the Joint Negotiating Committee, as we've also been told already in speeches today, without making really very clear that this was on the casting vote of the chair, and that such an agreement is, really, a form of words which is not, I think, entirely helpful.

In defence of the ungenerous accrual rate chosen for the new CARE arrangement, USS offers this justification: 'The changes proposed are intended by the employers to allow the employers to meet the costs of modifying the scheme's investment strategy by changing asset mix towards less volatile, risk-reducing assets with lower returns than equities. The proposed CARE-like structure has been put forward at 1/80th and 3/80ths level so that, in terms of overall costs to the employer, it enables this switch to lower-risk assets to take place whilst reducing the likelihood of employer contributions being raised above sixteen per cent.' So, this is a cut in benefit to achieve a cut in costs. The claimed advantage is allowing a change to a more conservative investment strategy, which will make their life easier at everyone else's expense and pass risk from the employers to the members. This change goes to the very heart of the dispute. I believe that USS has failed to offer any plausible explanation for how the trustees could see it as a decision which holds the balance between the interests of members and employers.

Behind all of this lies some notably clumsy legislation with which I've become familiar in my own trustee role. The valuation arrangements and the actuarial calculations combine to form something of a black art, open to much complex interpretation. Here I commend the analysis by the expert used by the UCU, who points out that the USS trustees and the Regulator should remember that in this case the employers are not commercial companies, so it is wholly rational for USS to take a different approach to risk from that used in many company schemes.

Our amendment seeks to bring some of these issues out into the open. Let me remind everyone that the USS trustees have a very clear statutory duty to respect the interests of both employers and members and to strike a fair balance between them. So, in the interests of British universities as a whole, and the future of our profession, Oxford should formally request correction to the current defective consultation. Our amendment strengthens the resolution so that it does just that. Mr Vice-Chancellor, I beg to move the amendment.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you, Mr Briggs. Could I call on Dr Lovibond to second the amendment.

Dr Sabina Lovibond (Worcester College)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, members of Congregation. Actually, colleagues, I'm going to forego my five minutes. I've undertaken to come here this afternoon and act as a formal seconder of the amendment, and I hereby do so.

As one of the proposers of the original resolution, I'm also a proposer and supporter of the amendment and I urge you to support it too, so I'll stop there to leave more time for debate.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you, Dr Lovibond. Could I call on Dr Mapstone to oppose the amendment.

Dr Sally Mapstone (St Hilda's College, English Faculty)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, Proctors, members of Congregation, there are, again, two reasons for Council taking the view that the amendment as put was unacceptable. The first was to ensure a broad debate of pension issues in Congregation. The amendment places emphasis on the information supplied within the consultation process and members of Council acknowledged concerns that the information provided to members of the scheme should be adequate. However, the second reason was that some members also have reservations, as university trustees, about the wording and purpose of the amendment in terms of the University's legal obligations as an employer within the consultation process. I will focus on the reservations so that Congregation can understand them.

In commenting on this it is necessary to give Congregation an indication of what, through dialogue with UCEA—the Universities and Colleges Employers Association—and with the Employers Pension Forum we understand USS's position to be. Putting forward the position of another party in the dispute of course risks one being attributed with what, recognising the danger of intruding a metaphor like this into Congregation, I may refer to as poodle status. I don't actually think that anyone would fancy being USS's poodle at the moment, and I hope you will appreciate that I'm not here to speak for USS perfectly disguised as a poodle. I am, rather, trying to explain to Congregation our understanding of USS's position; thus there may be limits about what I can say about that position in relation to points subsequently made in this debate.

The amendment requires the University to seek proper information from USS in conformity with the guidance provided by the Department of Work and Pensions on the conduct of a formal consultation by employers on major changes in a pension scheme, to include worked examples.

We understand that USS's position on this is that the consultation being carried out by employers in USS fulfils the legal requirements under pensions legislation. Indeed, advice provided to the trustee company by its legal advisers is that the consultation goes well beyond those requirements, which are established by the 2006 regulations. These regulations are illuminated by the DWP guidance, referred to in the amendment. That guidance itself has no legal force but USS, we understand, is of the view that it has complied with it. Thus, while some members of both Council and Congregation will be of the view that more detail should have been provided by USS and the EPF, this does not mean that the information is demonstrably legally inadequate, or would be ruled so if referred in due course to the Pensions Regulator.

That said, USS has, as we've already indicated, recently published additional information in response to requests to it from this University. On behalf of the University, twelve additional questions were sent to USS with the request that they be addressed on the Q and A part of the consultation website. As of this weekend they have been added to the website with answers under the heading 'Supplementary material'. When the website went live, it had indeed contained a statement in relation to the Q and As that, 'During the consultation additional Q and As may be added to the website.' We understand USS's position to be that these additional questions and answers are regarded as clarificatory and supplementary.

If the amendment is passed, a decision would need to be taken about the sufficiency of this supplementary information as far as the reference to 'proper information' in the amendment is concerned, and a decision will need to be taken on who is making that judgment. We've already heard the view expressed that the information is progress, but not enough, and that more information needs to be asked for. However, the implication of the amendment then is that if no 'proper information' is eventually provided by USS, the rest of the sequence of actions—requesting the USS to restart the consultation, and if that is refused restarting locally—falls away. We would request clarification on that from the proposers of the amendment. Whether or not more material can be obtained from USS, USS's position seems to be, as I've indicated, that any information provided by it in this context is clarificatory. This makes it highly unlikely that USS will agree to restart the consultation because it does not see itself as under any necessity or obligation to do so.

The amendment next goes on to posit that if additional information is made available and the consultation restarted by USS, those who have already submitted responses should be allowed to modify them. The amendment envisages this only in the circumstances in which additional information has been supplied by USS and a consultation restarted. What we can say to Congregation now, however, is that any member of USS wishing to modify what they have already said can set out their intended changes in writing and provide them to the University for forwarding to USS within the consultative period. This would be in addition to the statutory return we have to make by the set date and would ensure that we would return to USS not only the information we're required to return by law, but also the full range of comments provided to us by individual members.

The final point in the amendment is that if USS refuses to restart the consultation process, the University should restart the local consultation, and this was the point which gave members of Council most concern. Firstly, there are some sequencing issues here. As I've indicated, if the amendment is passed, a view will need to be taken on whether the supplementary information now supplied by USS is 'proper', or whether USS needs to be asked for supplementary supplementary information. If USS is still to be asked for further information, how is this to be correlated with the running of the consultative ballot? We have heard some comments on this already, but let me set this out as we currently understand it. In order for the ballot to be completed before the stated end of the consultation process on 22 December, it would be necessary to conduct the ballot as soon as possible, before the completion of the sequence of events that might involve asking USS for more information, and could involve asking USS to restart the consultation process. If USS declines to restart the consultation process—and every indication is that it will so decline—the University would be required to restart it locally. As the consultation process is a minimum of sixty days, this would mean that our local consultation process would refinish well after 22 December.

A key point here is that, as I explained in relation to the resolution, the University is required under law to complete its consultation with its recognised representatives and submit to USS their response by the end of the set consultation period. There are potentially serious penalties if it does not do so. We are concerned that if we restart the local consultation process, in circumstances in which USS nationally has not accepted any need for this, we and the Oxford UCU risk a muddled and incomplete response to the consultation that Oxford is obliged to return. The University's legal advice is that we will still be compliant with the 2006 regulations if we submit to USS an account of consultation with the UCU up to 22 December. We are concerned that the value of UCU's comments will be reduced if the University has undertaken to start additional local consultation which will effectively be running outside the statutory timetable.

In order to follow the requirements of the amendment, it might thus be necessary for the University to conduct one ballot while it asks USS for information, in order to get a response to that ballot by 22 December, and then, having restarted its local consultation because the USS has declined to do so nationally, conduct another ballot in the New Year and conclude its local consultation in February 2011. The changes to USS are due to be introduced in April.

Members of Congregation must thus decide if they think what is proposed in the amendment is the most effective way for the University to influence the current consultation. USS is required to consider the responses it receives within time to the consultation and, as a result, modifications to the proposals may be put forward for further discussion in the JNC. That being the case, I would encourage members of Congregation, whatever their position, to respond to the consultation via the USS website. We look forward now to hearing the other range of points members of Congregation will make in relation to the amendment and, in that spirit, Mr Vice-Chancellor, I move to oppose the amendment.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you, Dr Mapstone. Could I ask Dr Goss to second the opposition to the amendment.

Dr Stephen Goss (Wadham College, Oxford Learning Institute)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, Proctors and members of Congregation, in speaking now as seconder opposing the amendment, I shall be brief, though not quite as brief as Dr Lovibond.

Dr Mapstone has just described the procedural ambiguities arising from the amendment and also the difficulties with respect to timing and deadlines when it comes to implementing what is proposed. I should like to give a summary of the procedural questions that arise, and which I submit it would be helpful to have answered, for the information of members of Congregation, as they consider how to cast their votes.

Who will draft the specification of the further information that we have been told is still needed to satisfy Congregation? Who will then assess whether the information, if any, provided by the USS is such as to trigger clause (vii) so that we need to ask USS to restart the national consultation? Is it intended that the University should open the consultative ballot required by the resolution before the outcome of this correspondence with the USS is determined? Assuming that the consultative ballot is indeed started whilst discussions with USS continue, is it nevertheless accepted that the University must provide the responses from that ballot to the USS regardless of any subsequent decision to restart our local consultation? Is it accepted that the amendment makes no provision for further specific action by the University if the USS simply refuses to provide any supplementary information? If, having been asked to restart the consultation, the USS refuses to do so, the University is then required by the amendment to restart its local consultation. Is it intended this will involve a second consultative ballot in Oxford if one has already been undertaken? Is it intended that the University should restart its local consultation even if it turns out to be the case, as can be expected, that the outcome of the restarted process will be known too late to be taken into account by the USS? More straightforwardly, is it the intention either under the amended or the unamended resolution that the comments of members to be published locally should be just those comments submitted in the local ballot and that publication should be only with the consent of those submitting the comments?

Finally, if the responses to the ballot can be got ready for publication whilst the consultative period is still running, is it intended that they be published so that they can influence anyone who has not by then taken part in the consultation?

I submit that the answers to these questions would be helpful to members of Congregation in their understanding of the process that the amendment seeks to bring about. Furthermore, any clarification which can be provided whilst we are all together this afternoon will reduce the possibility of needless controversy arising as the procedures evolves. Mr Vice-Chancellor, given the uncertainty about the procedural implications of the amendment, I should now like to second opposition to the amendment.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you, Dr Goss. The debate on the amendment is now open to the House. Mr Briggs, do you wish to reply?

Mr Robin Briggs (All Souls College)

Yes, briefly, Vice-Chancellor. I think it's a rather remarkable debating technique to pose a whole series of questions of considerable complexity and difficulty and seem to require an answer on the spot. I think that speaks for itself. I don't wish to comment on it further, except to say that clearly it would be necessary for me to consult a whole group of people who have views on this, and it cannot be done this afternoon.

It was certainly no part of the wish of those moving either resolution or amendment, I think, to create legal difficulties for the University, and I think it should be understood by all that what we really wish is for Council to take responsibility—Council and its committees—for this matter in the light of this debate. That was how I read the original response of Council, as I understood it, and I'm rather bewildered that we should be presented with this kind of legal and technical minefield to which, as I say, I don't think I could possibly give any answers now. What I would simply stress again is that this is a very important matter: it has huge significance for the future of universities in this country and it is something where we are faced, in the view, I believe, of most members of this House, with a very flawed consultation. If I'm told that it is legal, then I suppose I have to accept that, although I think that on this matter, as others, there may well be different legal opinions and I do believe that a serious challenge could be mounted, and I would stress again that there is a requirement for information to be given at the start of the process, and that, plainly, has not been met with many of the matters that have been mentioned. That was one reason for wanting a restarted consultation on a proper basis.

I think that it is these general issues that we are here to debate rather than the minutiae, important and difficult though those minutiae might be, and so I urge the House to support the amendment.

Debate on the amended resolution

VICE-CHANCELLOR: As the amendment has been approved, under Regulation 3.19 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 the resolution as amended shall be put to the House. I shall now ask the Registrar to read the resolution as amended.

REGISTRAR: Congregation notes that the University as an employer has a statutory obligation, under the Occupational and Personal Pension Schemes (Consultation by Employers and Miscellaneous Amendment) Regulations 2006, to consult affected employees on the changes that have been proposed to the Universities Superannuation Scheme.

Congregation further notes:

(a) that persons who are active members of USS or are eligible to join the scheme have received as part of that consultation process a copy of a USS document outlining the proposed changes and a document from the Employers Pension Forum for Higher Education which purports to explain 'why changes are needed' and that 'the proposed changes are considered by the employers to be right for the benefit of the scheme and its members'; and

(b) that as the body representing all employee members of USS under the rules of the scheme, the University and College Union has published on its website criticism of the process being followed by higher education employers in carrying out the consultation, and a critique of the EPF document.

Believing that consultation, if it is to be meaningful, must seek the views of those consulted when the latter have been provided with all the information necessary for them to make an informed response, Congregation determines that the University will:

- (i) publish to all affected employees the alternative proposals for changes to USS put forward by the EPF and by UCU, together with supporting arguments for each;
- (ii) conduct a consultative ballot on those alternative proposals;
- (iii) publish the result of the ballot to scheme members within the University;
- (iv) send the ballot result to USS as part of the local response to the statutory consultation exercise;
- (v) ensure all members of USS are able to engage in the process and that their comments are fully reflected in the institution's response to USS and that they are published locally;
- (vi) seek proper information from USS, in conformity with the guidance provided by the Department of Work and Pensions on the conduct of a formal consultation by employers on major changes in a pension scheme; this information should include a suitable range of worked examples; and
- (vii) request USS to restart the consultation after this information is made available, with those who have already submitted responses being allowed to modify them; if USS refuses, restart the local consultation.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: The debate on the amended resolution is now open to the House. As before, I would ask all speakers to come forward and to speak into the microphone, first giving their name and college or department. Speakers from the floor of the House should please follow the usual convention of not speaking for more than five minutes. At the end of the debate I shall ask Dr Mapstone and then Professor Harriss-White whether they wish to deal with any of the points raised in the speeches. I take this opportunity to remind them that they should at that stage deal only with points raised during the course of the debate and should not introduce any new matters. I shall then take a division on the amended resolution. Again, this will be by written ballot for which members of Congregation will have been given a voting paper. Any member who does not have a voting paper will have an opportunity to collect one at the exits.

Professor Harriss-White, under the regulations the proposer of the resolution has the right to speak first in the debate on the amended resolution. Do you wish to speak first in the debate?

Professor Barbara Harriss-White
(Wolfson College, Department of International Development)

I wish to waive that right.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: I will call on Mr Bernard Suftrin.

Mr Bernard Suftrin (Worcester College, Computing Laboratory)

Bernard Suftrin, superannuated member of Worcester College. Dr Mapstone and I agreed during the voting that our predecessors must be made of sterner stuff than we are. Let us hope that our successors don't have to be made of sterner stuff than we are. Will the USS proposals, Vice-Chancellor and colleagues, serve Oxford's future needs? Will they serve the future needs of any leading UK university? I learned something about risk while serving on the Audit and Scrutiny Committee in the last four years. I learned about the risks to which complex systems are exposed by the tendency to a herd mentality among those who oversee parts of them. If we accede to the present USS proposals without giving them proper scrutiny, then we, and much of the UK university system, will be exposed to several big, and unjustifiable, needs. These include damage to our international competitiveness and damage to the commitment of our staff to our students.

A prominent company chairman, John Timpson, recently wrote defending defined benefit schemes. He wrote of the herd mentality he thinks has infected other company chairmen, actuaries and even the Pensions Regulator. He thinks, and I quote: 'It is amazing that funds which should be looking fifty years ahead should rely so heavily on short-term fluctuations in equity prices for making their judgments.' I think the USS trustees may have been infected by this herd mentality to the extent that they have forgotten that they are not overseeing the pension fund of a company on whose balance sheet pension liabilities must appear, but overseeing a healthy fund—the second largest in the UK—that has a very large current account surplus, and whose valuation has been rising since the crash of 2008, and is already within nine per cent of where it would need to be if every single UK university went bankrupt next year.

Let me address a couple of the risks the USS trustees will expose us to if they adopt the proposed structure unchanged. The first risk is that of damaging the international competitiveness of top UK universities like ours. The pension scheme has been an important part of the attraction of the job to many academics, so what is the point of saving money on pensions if the net effect is that we slip down the league because you become less effective at recruiting and retaining staff? These days we expect that our brightest young post-docs will move around the globe in mid-career, taking up fixed-term contracts in leading universities, in commerce and in industry, and when we advertise established posts we expect the best of them to apply, and we expect to make use of the knowledge, the experience and the networks they developed while away. But the proposed changes set in place a two-tier system in which those who remain UK academics for the whole of their career will be offered much higher benefits than those who move around. Why would anyone in their right minds want to come back to a second-class pension? The financial incentives are being changed to point in the opposite direction to our academic goals.

The second risk is of a deterioration of relationships between academics and their students and its effects on the long-term health of our university system. The implicit contract between us and the university system has been that academics accept lower pay during our careers in return for academic freedom and a decent and specified measure of security in our old age, but the capping of the inflation indexing at five per cent will surely catalyse a deterioration in relationships because academics will, in future, have to spend very much more time and energy trying to mitigate the unknowable risks that they might be exposed to in retirement.

We may no longer be able to spend the time to do a third reading of a thesis or spend an extra two weeks setting up a Master's project or an extra hour or two on a difficult tutorial question, or any of the countless other acts of generosity that contribute so much to the quality of our students' education but are not accounted for in the official narratives of our work. Capping inflation indexing takes away the reliability of the scheme for academics, but—unless high inflation is guaranteed—doesn't reliably make it cheaper for universities. In a period of even moderately high inflation, our pensioners will be pauperised if they live too long. This isn't good value for anybody. Leading universities need to ask whether USS is really serving their needs with these proposals. Fatalism is inappropriate today. This is not a done deal. We are the sovereign body of one of those two universities whose academics can make them think again when they are about to make a mistake. Our administration would be making a mistake if Oxford failed to conduct a proper employer's consultation, and they would be making a mistake if Oxford failed to insist that USS provide enough information for that consultation to take place, and they would be making a serious mistake with potentially epic consequences if Oxford failed to point out to the USS trustees the long-term damage that the proposed restructuring risks doing to the UK universities as a whole. Council needs the strongest possible mandate in talking to USS. I urge you to support the amendment and the motion.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. Sir Ivor Crewe.

Sir Ivor Crewe (Master of University College)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, Proctors, members of Congregation, I should declare an interest. In 2006 and 2007 I was a USS trustee, nominated by Universities UK, and in that period it quickly became clear to me that reforms in the benefit scheme were necessary if employers were to be protected against short notice significant increases in contributions which would threaten their own financial sustainability. This, incidentally, was the view taken not only by trustees drawn from the employers' side, but also by the independents amongst the USS trustees.

The case to reform has been strong for at least five years, and not just the last two years of negotiations on the Joint Negotiating Committee, and it is now urgent.

The risks to the long-term sustainability of the current USS scheme are well known: firstly, the increased longevity of academics, who know all about healthy lifestyles; secondly, the stretch in real salary level at the upper end of the scale, which obviously reflects a final salary scheme, not, as somebody said earlier, the overall increase in pay; and, thirdly, the increased use of early retirement on the generous USS terms by some universities as a means of restructuring their personnel. The USS actuaries have consistently underestimated the acceleration of these trends. There is no reason to believe that they will reverse and it would be prudent to assume that they will continue. The proposed reforms do not, in my view, go far enough. They are the minimum that can protect employers from unaffordable increases and contributions, and they are certainly modest compared with reforms in pension schemes elsewhere. They introduce to everyone under fifty-five a normal pension age of sixty-five for future service—a benefit, incidentally, to Oxford, where the average retirement age is sixty-six. Oxford has been for years subsidising USS member institutions with aggressive early retirement schemes.

They do increase employee contributions but, as we've already been told, such contributions have remained virtually the same since the scheme was set up and employers alone have had to bear the additional costs required by the scheme since its inception. They do introduce career average revalued earnings for new entrants, but that will reduce the cross-subsidy by the average academic for the minority of academic stars. The inflation metric does switch from RPI to the less favourable CPI, but the USS lawyers are quite clear that this is an unalterable government requirement. There is a cap on increases in pensions in line with the CPI or five per cent, whichever is the lower, and that would, of course, reduce the value of the pension in highly inflationary times, but there is also a proposed change to the USS rules which allows trustees to grant higher increases on a discretionary basis, subject to inflation and the availability of funds.

These terms are superior to those available in the private sector, which have closed down almost all defined benefit schemes, and we can be confident that they will compare favourably with public sector pension schemes after the reforms likely to be brought in by the Hutton Report. The Cooper-Cowley article in the Oxford Magazine refers to the superior deal available to some illustrative members of the Civil Service scheme, but that scheme is unfunded and very unlikely to survive. It is argued by the UCU and others that the future risks faced by the USS scheme are greatly exaggerated because, with the recent surge in equities, the March 2011 valuation is likely to be much more favourable than the March 2010 valuation. This is irresponsibly complacent: for one thing, bond yields have fallen to historic lows, so it is far from certain that the £3 billion deficit last March will have gone down significantly. Moreover, USS is a balance of cost scheme: employers have to meet the cost of any deficit at the triennial review. If that had happened to take place in 2009, when equities were very low, the cost to employers who must meet the deficit would have been enormous, and seriously destabilising to many institutions. If institutions go bankrupt, the strain increases on the remaining member employers, because USS is a 'last man standing' scheme.

My final point is a political one. The USS scheme may be a private scheme, but it is publicly funded. Employers' contributions come largely out of tuition fee income or government grant; from students, parents and taxpayers. Do those who wish to scupper these moderate reforms, and to associate this University with their scuppering, really believe that it is in the corporate interest of this University to be marked out by the public and politicians as the university that wants to charge higher fees but won't accept a mild reform of its very favourable benefits for the future generations of its academic staff?

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. Professor James Malcomson.

Professor James Malcomson (All Souls College, Department of Economics)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, fellow members of Congregation, I wanted to address the USS reform proposals from a slightly different angle than most of the speakers so far: that is from the point of view of the principles underlying defined benefit pension schemes.

Now, fortunately for my getting finished within five minutes, the economics primer material involved in this is pretty straightforward. Fundamentally, defined benefit pension schemes are about insurance. If you doubt that, ask yourself the question whether you would be willingly paying USS contributions if you knew for sure that you and all your dependents were going to be killed in a car accident the day after you retired and so none of them were going to benefit. No, you wouldn't. I wouldn't, certainly. So it's about insurance and that's what fundamentally defined benefits are all about. Now, insurance is based on the principle that the risk is carried by the party that is best placed to bear it, and I want to apply that principle to three of the particular reforms involved in the USS proposals. I would just wish to add that I am not opposed to all reforms: I wish to apply sensible principles of pensions to those reforms.

So, the first of these issues is the cap on inflation indexing. USS proposes to limit the inflation indexing to five per cent for pensions and to 2.5 per cent for deferred benefits, which would simply put the risk of high inflation onto the beneficiaries. It is hard to see any logic for this in principle. Beneficiaries have very little scope for hedging their pension entitlements against high inflation, but pension funds have lots. Equities are one way of doing it—they are a slightly risky way of doing it—but there are other ways of doing it too. There are inflation-indexed bonds and these are readily and widely available. So, pension schemes are, indeed, in a very good position to be able to hedge against high levels of inflation. Now, I haven't heard any logical case for these caps put forward by USS—not even on the recent additions to the USS website—so I'm just kind of left with the suspicion that they're really there to protect USS managers against making bad investment decisions in a very high inflationary period.

The second issue I want to talk about is the proposal that in future USS will use the Consumer Price Index, the CPI, rather than the Retail Price Index for indexing pensions and deferred benefits. Now, let's be clear: USS isn't bound by the government rules that it should use the CPI, as the government is proposing for other public sector pension schemes, so it can make decisions on the basis of principles of insurance, and on insurance principles, and in view of the investment possibilities that are available to the pension funds, the appropriate index is the one that insures pensioners against a decrease in their standard of living. A case for a proposed change should be made on that; not simply that CPI will cost people less and we should save a bit of money on the pension schemes as a result of that.

The third issue concerns the shift to a career average revalued earnings based pension rather than a final salary based pension. Now, CARE pensions, as the career average ones have come to be called, actually seem to me to provide better insurance when seen from the perspective of somebody starting out on an academic career, and be less open to the abuse that we've heard about of paying artificially inflated salaries towards the ends of people's working lives just before they retire. So, I personally actually think that would be a desirable change for USS if it were to be done in an actuarially neutral way. Again, it is presented as a desirable thing, but it is presented in a way in which it is very hard to see that it is actuarially neutral. I certainly haven't seen any evidence for that, and it certainly wouldn't be if, as proposed, the beneficiaries are going to accrue their rights at the same 1/80th per year of service as under a final salary pension scheme.

Now, just to give you a rough idea of the implications, because clearly this isn't a place for detailed calculations but, approximately speaking, if a final salary is double the starting salary in inflation-adjusted terms, and people move up from one to the other over the course of an academic career, then on the same accrual rate and on the same working lifetime, the pension under CARE is going to be seventy-five per cent of that final salary pension scheme. For that to be actuarially neutral, it would need to be that either the expected length of life of people after they retire—and you must remember that the proposals are that the retirement age will be increased would require this, or, indeed, that the investment would make that necessary. To my knowledge, USS has provided a detailed case for neither of these. So for these reasons, on the basis of the principle of good insurance, I strongly support the proposal as amended.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Mr Giles Kerr.

Mr Giles Kerr (Director of Finance)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, Proctors and members of Congregation. Part of my responsibilities as Director of Finance for the University is the identification of the financial risks facing the University and to ensure that Council and Congregation are made aware of those risks. My purpose today is, therefore, to outline the significance of pension risk to the University and the significance of pension costs in our budget. The provision of pension benefits is, of course, a very important part of the overall employment benefit package made available to the great majority of our staff, but it is also a very significant part of the University's budget. In 2009/10, for example, the University spent a total of £55 million on pension contributions. This cost is significant and it is also increasing. The cost of providing a guaranteed pension has increased sharply in recent years, and in 2009 pension contributions increased by £5 million a year when USS decreased the contribution rate to sixteen per cent of salary.

To put this figure into context, the University made a surplus in 2009 of only slightly more than this at £6.2 million, and in the previous year made a surplus of £1.2 million. The recent increase in USS pension contributions can, therefore, be the difference between balancing the budget and being in deficit. In 2009, when USS increased the rate of employer contributions to sixteen per cent, it did not rule out the possibility of further increases in the rate and, indeed, indicated that in the absence of change to the benefits structure, such further increases were likely. As indicated before, an increase of one per cent in the contribution rate is equivalent to a cost of £2.5 million per annum, and this cost will keep on rising each year in line with the increase in pay. In order to avoid the need for further increases, it has been necessary to bring forward changes to the benefit structure to the USS, and the changes are needed to bring the projected assets of the scheme into line with its projected liabilities. The changes also go some way towards managing the financial risks associated with the scheme.

For all of us who are members of the scheme, as we've heard earlier on today, one of the most important benefits we receive is a guarantee that we will get a pension based on how much we earn, irrespective of what happens to the assets and liabilities of that scheme.

As members of the scheme, we do not have to worry about how the scheme investments perform in the future, because it is the University and the other employers that bear that risk. If the investments don't perform as expected, it is the University that has to make up the gap between the pension we are guaranteed and the one that the scheme's assets will actually pay for. This financial risk to the University, and to all the other participating employers in USS, is a very substantial and volatile one. USS themselves publish figures that indicate just how big this risk can be and, for example, if the rate of interest of the scheme should be one per cent different to that assumed by USS, the impact on the scheme is a staggering £4 billion. To further illustrate this, we can just look at the recent history of the funding position, and in March 2008 the scheme was fully funded. A year later, it has a deficit of £5.4 billion, and by March 2010, the deficit stood at £2.7 billion. That's a very large figure and it is equivalent to about £20,000 for every active member of the scheme still contributing. If we multiply that number by the number of Oxford members in the scheme, our share of the deficit, crudely put, is about £120 million. This figure gives an indication of the scale of liabilities that the University could be facing if the scheme is not made more affordable. If we do incur further increases in pension costs, we certainly can't assume that the increasing costs of our pension provision will be met by our funders. As we know from a recently published comprehensive spending review, our teaching grant is to be cut by approximately £45 million per annum, and the science budget has been frozen, so we certainly can't look to government to help. We might be able to replace some of this lost funding with higher tuition fees, but I think it is obvious from recent events just a few yards from this building and elsewhere, that we cannot say by how much we will be able to increase the undergraduate fee, or how willing we will be to do so. We also know that many of our larger research funders will not be prepared to accept, and fund, ever increasing pension costs.

Now, before ending I'd also like to go back to one of the more insidious risks associated with participation in USS that Sir Ivor Crewe touched on. USS has this rather lovely phrase of being a 'last man standing' arrangement, and this means that in the event that any of the employers in USS is unable to fund its pension contribution and is forced to withdraw from the scheme, the amount of any shortfall in respect of the withdrawing employer has to be picked up by the remaining employers. In short, if one of the employers goes down, it's the remaining employers in the scheme that foot the bill. There are more than 400 employers in USS, and I suspect that not all are as financially strong as this University, and making the scheme affordable is, therefore, in the interests of all the employers, not just Oxford.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. Dr Wylie Horn.

Dr Wylie Horn (Computing Services)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, Proctors, members of Congregation, there are a number of points that I would like to raise in favour of the motion. I'd like to actually depart from my script just to respond to the points that Sir Ivor Crewe and Giles Kerr so eloquently made about the risks inherent to the employers made by short-term market fluctuations. What they both omitted to mention was the employers actually had the benefit during the 1990s of benefiting from payment holidays caused by market fluctuations in a more favourable direction, so these things can cut both ways.

To return to my speech, to begin with we shouldn't forget that the many colleagues who aren't members of Congregation but are members of the USS scheme would, had they had the opportunity to do so, have welcomed the opportunity to be here to press for a ballot to register their opposition to the changes that are being proposed. By voting for the motion, we're ensuring that their voice will also be heard. I'm going to highlight two other key points, one of which Terry has already covered, so I'll probably just dash through that, and that is: is there a case for changes to be made at all? To quote the USS employer consultation paper circulated to all USS members: 'Employers within USS are committed to the proposed changes as necessary to safeguard the long-term sustainability of the scheme.' However, the last actuarial report as of March 2010, conducted by Mercer Limited and published in September 2010, states in the summary, under point 5: 'Despite the deterioration over the two-year period from 2008, I can confirm that I am content with waiting until the 2011 valuation before reviewing or amending the current contribution rates.' The deterioration described still left the fund able to meet ninety-one per cent of its liabilities which, I would argue, is hardly a cause for undue pessimism. One has to ask why the employers' side on the JNC weren't willing to follow the actuary's advice and be content to wait until the next valuation before proposing changes which may not be necessary at all. Given that we are discussing the fate of a fund with a value of just over £30 billion as of 31 March 2010, it would seem sensible to wait a mere four months for the next triennial valuation before taking such far-reaching action.

Second, I believe we need to consider the integrity of the consultation process itself. I was disappointed by the extremely partial information that all USS members were sent by post last month. My disappointment was coupled with surprise at the inclusion of a paper from the Employers Pension Forum, hereafter referred to as the EPF, and compounded by the lack of any paper presenting the counter-arguments.

My initial surprise at the inclusion of the EPF document was heightened by the similarities between the two documents. For example, compare this from the EPF leaflet: 'As a result it seems likely that higher education could be facing significant cuts in public funding over this period', with this, from the USS document: 'As a result it seems certain that higher education will be facing significant funding cuts over this period.' Or, to give another example, compare this from the EPF document: 'In this environment, where institutions are facing a significant squeeze in their income, the failure to control pension costs can only lead to additional reductions in staff numbers, with a consequent impact on the student experience and research.' Compare that with this from the USS document (the words will be familiar to you): 'In this environment, failure to control rising pension costs can only lead to additional reductions in staff numbers with a consequent impact on the student experience and research.'

Finally, compare: 'The higher education sector is still significantly publicly funded and it would, understandably, be considered unacceptable to use additional public funds to meet increased pension costs', that from the EPF document. Compare with the USS document: 'The higher education sector is still significantly publicly funded, and it would understandably be considered unacceptable to use additional public funds to meet increased pension costs.'

Members of Congregation will, I am sure, forgive me for preparing this speech by peppering it with quotes from elsewhere; after all, I'm just following where others involved in the consultation have led. In light of this evidence, I'll leave all present to draw their own conclusions about the editorial provenance of this information presented to USS members. All we're proposing is that local USS members receive full and objective information so they can come to an informed conclusion about the proposed changes. The motion, if carried with the amendment, will ensure that happens. I urge you to support both the amendment and the motion.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Mr Roger Boden.

Mr Roger Boden (Bursar of Keble College, Chairman of the Estates Bursars' Committee)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, Proctors, members of Congregation, I should like to make two observations: the first on the resolution before us as it relates to the role of Congregation; the second on the proposed pension changes, as seen from a bursarial perspective. The University is a charity; Congregation is its sovereign body. When we meet in Congregation, we meet as charity trustees. Now, of course, Congregation routinely delegates its powers to Council, but that it is jealous of its powers there can be no doubt, as is evidenced by the governance debates five years ago. I rejoiced in that famous victory, a victory to which several signatories to the present resolution made very distinguished contributions. Can they really now be seeking to bind Congregation to a consultation response dictated in part not by its members, but by a ballot of university employees on proposals drawn up by a trade union? That surely undermines the authority of Congregation and is a derogation of its duty.

Outside this place, we are employees and USS scheme members, but in here we are trustees. We must be mindful of the conflict of interest. Outside, we naturally want the best possible deal for ourselves in terms of contributions as we work, and benefits when we retire. But in this place, we must leave aside personal interests: our duty is to make decisions that best support the objects of the University. We cannot in this place, where self-interest is prohibited, commit the University to a response to be determined in another place, where self-interest is legitimate. We are proud to be a self-governing academic community. That is not the same thing as a workers' co-operative. So, the resolution must be a matter of both principle and duty: it must be defeated.

Of course, were Congregation itself to determine that the proposed pension changes were not in the best interests of the University, that would be a different matter, but if we were debating a resolution to that effect, I would argue that it, too, should be rejected, and it is to the argument for rejection that I should now like to turn.

Like the University, colleges are charities; the members of their governing bodies are trustees. Their duty is to act in the college's best interests. Is it in the best interests of colleges that the USS proposals be implemented? The aim of a salary and benefits package is to attract and retain the best possible staff on the most economical terms, having regard to issues of equality. If the pension proposals were adopted, would our ability to attract and retain the best staff be impaired? I do not think so. The current USS package is, by common consent, a pretty good one—better than many in the public sector, better than almost all in the private sector. The trouble is, it is unaffordably generous, but even after implementation of the changes, it will still be a pretty good package, and better than most. So, unwelcome as the changes might be to us as employees, I doubt that they will affect Oxford's ability to retain us.

But might the changes deter prospective employees from applying? Well, for UK academics USS will still be the best deal going, and Oxford's competitiveness, relative to the rest of the UK higher education sector, will be unchanged. As to overseas applicants, does anyone here seriously think that, in deciding whether to take up a post at Oxford, the details of the USS scheme will weigh heavily in the balance?

The damage to Oxford's interest from implementation of the USS proposals is, frankly, negligible. What about the damage from non-implementation? Non-implementation would involve an increase in the average college's USS bill by about £50,000 per annum. That's roughly the cost of employing one CUF or two ULs. So there are constitutional and fiduciary reasons why Congregation must reject the resolution, and there are strong practical ones why it should too. Implementing the USS proposals will not damage the charities of which we are trustees: not implementing them almost certainly will. We have to act responsibly. We must reject the resolution.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Dr Rowan Tomlinson.

Dr Rowan Tomlinson (New College)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, members of Congregation, I did not expect in attending my first Congregation to be standing here behind the lectern, but the fact that I am here calling on my right to speak is testimony to the democratic values of our University, values that are currently being undermined by the failure to provide a full and proper consultation on the proposed changes to USS.

I've chosen to speak today because my particular status and situation mean I represent three constituencies of USS members who risk being particularly negatively affected by the changes to our pension system. I'm an early career academic, I'm on a fixed term contract, and I am a woman. All USS members would find themselves worse off under the proposed new regime, but it is arguably young academics and women in particular who could be hit especially hard by the proposal that those who take a break of six months or more may not be able to rejoin the final salary scheme. This apparently ill-thought-through proposal would be hugely damaging, but one might also wonder whether its likely impact on particular groups means that it flouts equality laws.

The academic job market has changed significantly in recent years. The days when my father, now a professor, was able to move straight from his doctorate into a permanent post are long gone. The most temporary of lectureships today attracts a flurry of hugely qualified applicants. The result of this is that many young academics find themselves at best in short-term jobs, sometimes cobbling together hourly paid teaching, or, worse still, without any kind of post at all. It is commonplace for extremely able young academics to find themselves without a job for periods of more than six months. To punish these academics further still, by not allowing them to rejoin the final salary scheme after a break in service not of their own volition, is simply unacceptable. But choice is something which I also wish to defend, and which is threatened by this particular proposal: the choice to work abroad for a spell—particularly precious to me as a linguist, and vital in this academic climate where we are urged to make international contacts and networks and to produce ‘world-beating’ research—the choice to take a career break for whatever reason, or to follow a related career path that could enhance one’s work as an academic; the choice to start a family, already a major decision for women in academic posts because of the perceived effects it has on our research outputs. Under the new regime, the loss of pension benefits that a six-month break might entail endangers these important choices.

The final point I’d like to raise is that I’m concerned that the proposed changes would affect recruitment. As it is, those of us who choose to enter academia opt for what we might call a front-loaded job, in the sense that the qualifications take a long time, during which we are likely to accrue debt, and many of us don’t start earning until our late 20s, if we are lucky. Compared to our peers, we are in a kind of arrested development. We are qualified later, which means we start paying National Insurance contributions later, and even then we’re likely to occupy jobs whose security is fragile, making such important steps as getting a mortgage very difficult. The good pension package has until now represented a reward for these years of not earning, or of earning precariously, or of earning a salary that is, by national standards, decent but which isn’t enough to allow a young academic to rent in Oxford’s housing market, let alone enough to buy a place of her own. Removing this benefit would not only be detrimental to existing members but could well deter people from pursuing a career in academia. One can envisage a return to the days when academia was a career choice for the more privileged, for whom worries over pensions were rather less of a concern. I urge you, therefore, not least on behalf of the many USS members who aren’t members of Congregation and so don’t have a voice in this debate, to use your vote to support the resolution and by so doing maintain the openness, discussion and democracy which this University has, until now, held dear. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Ms Margaret Watson.

Ms Margaret Watson (Bodleian Libraries)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, members of Congregation. Four years ago, I attended Congregation for the first time for the debate on governance. I saw then how highly the members of this University value its democratic processes and our right to be consulted on essential matters. I therefore find the situation today frankly rather strange. The changes proposed for USS are significant and far-reaching, and yet so far there has been no direct consultation between employer and employee in Oxford. Not only does this fly in the face of the University’s tradition of open discussion and debate, but also under the law, the University, our employer, has a legal obligation to consult us, its employees.

We have all received a brochure from USS and a leaflet from the Employers Pension Forum, and on the basis of these documents, and further information on a website, we were invited to make comments on the proposals under six headings. Setting aside the flaws in this—I quote the employers—‘narrative’ approach, it is no substitute for direct consultation between employer and employee.

Turning to the documentation, at first glance this might appear quite informative, but there are glaring omissions. For example, there is no mention of the fact that the Joint Negotiating Committee, the JNC, only adopted these proposals on the casting vote of the chairman and in the teeth of the fierce opposition of all the employee representatives. Now, I’m a librarian. It is part of my professional responsibility to collect, organise, make available and evaluate sources. My colleagues in the Bodleian and I do this every day, dealing with materials that range from the Magna Carta to social media: helping our readers to assess the authority, accuracy and quality of sources and compare them with alternative data is part of our work. So, if an undergraduate were attempting to write an essay on the merits of the USS proposals on the basis of the information that we have been given, I think I would strongly advise him to seek out more material, otherwise he would be relying on incomplete information assembled to support just one point of view. Further, an article by Susan Cooper and Stephen Cowley in the Oxford Magazine has shown that even the data provided in the worked examples is insufficient.

I have responded to the questions on the USS website, but I had to use section 7, ‘Other’, to comment on one aspect of the USS proposals that I consider to be manifestly unjust: the fact that a member leaving the final salary scheme for more than six months will not, except in very special circumstances, be able to rejoin it. Many of us, particularly women, must at some stage balance our career with responsibility for a young child, an aged parent, or someone who is sick, disabled or in special need. I myself once gave up a very good job because I needed to take care of my children. If I needed to do that in future, the years that I had accrued in USS before the career break would only count at the level of salary achieved before the break, inflated with just CPI and capped at 2.5 per cent, rather than counting at my final salary level, as now. Think how much more distressing these difficult decisions will be if we know that we risk losing membership of the final salary pension scheme, and that as well as making a choice about our immediate future, we are also putting the financial provision for our own old age on the line. I just leave that thought with you.

To conclude, the employee representatives on the JNC have acknowledged that some changes to the scheme are necessary to accommodate, for example, increased longevity. I urge the University to circulate these alternative proposals to all of us as part of a formal, local consultation process. It is only fair that we should be provided with both sets of proposals and supporting arguments, and then allowed to choose between them. I believe that the University, as our employer, has both a legal and a moral responsibility to consult us directly in this way, and I therefore appeal to you to vote for consultation, to vote for democracy, and to support the resolution.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Professor Susan Cooper.

Professor Susan Cooper (St Catherine’s College, Department of Physics)

We all want a sustainable pension scheme. Academic life is very busy. We have neither the time nor the money to invest efficiently ourselves. Part of the deal has been, until now, a good pension scheme we could trust. Many of us have even invested more with USS as additional voluntary contributions. I initially assumed USS was being reasonable in their proposed changes—times are hard everywhere. Then Stephen Cowley called me and told me of his initial calculations, which we then refined and extended. The more I looked into it, the more concerned

I got. 'Trust' and 'USS' are no longer words I easily put together, but I hope we can convince the USS trustees of the deeply flawed nature of both this consultation and the proposals and get them to ask the Joint Negotiating Committee to think again.

We have been given many words but few facts. As the main reasons for the changes, we are told that 'the life expectancy of an individual retiring today is many years longer than it was when the scheme was set up in 1975.' Undoubtedly true, but how many is 'many'? This is not serious information. An EPF spokesman told the Guardian it had increased from six to eight years in 1974 to twenty years now. An EPF press release said the increase was thirteen years, which is the same, so apparently that is their number. It just sounded wrong to me, so I looked up longevity data and found only about five years' increase, possibly eight. My trust was not restored.

However, the longevity increase is the serious issue: no one-off change could make the pension scheme sustainable in the face of this continuing increase. Either our pensions need to continually decrease—and I find suddenly going to fifty per cent of my pay frightening enough—or we need higher contributions during our working lives, which we can't afford, or we simply have to work longer. If longevity increases by three years, we need to work about two years longer and get one year extra retirement time, paying in at the same rate and getting the same pension as now. This increase of normal retirement age is both necessary and sufficient to make the scheme sustainable. Once this is clear, one wonders why the list of proposed changes is so long, complicated, and patently unfair—making benefits depend on the timing of a person's career, and with capping taking the inflation risk away from the pension fund, which has expert investors who should know how to deal with it, and putting it onto pensioners who can't.

Although it hasn't been well publicised, recent additional information makes it clear that the real motivation is to abandon their current investment policy for a much more conservative one. The need for this is highly questionable, as the UCU actuarial advice has explained; the trustees just need to have a robust discussion with the Pensions Regulator.

That the cuts are cuts has still not been admitted by USS. How many of you know what your career average revalued earnings are now and what you can expect them to be at retirement? CARE is a lot less transparent than a final salary scheme, so it is the clear duty of the employer in consulting on such a change to give us some typical worked examples. They haven't, but Stephen Cowley and I have. Even if inflation weren't a problem, the reduction would be about twenty per cent for a typical academic. Why haven't they told us this? A non-transparent scheme is a good way to introduce cuts without people realising it. If cuts really are necessary, they should be made explicit and justified, and not hidden in the ironic acronym of CARE. CARE with a higher accrual rate wouldn't be a cut and would avoid those promoted to very high salaries late in their careers getting a pension they haven't paid for, but it requires trusting the pension fund not to meddle with the parameters. A simpler way is to keep final salary pensions for our basic salaries—say those within the nationally agreed pay scales—and to put any additional amount into a direct contribution scheme. A core reliable pension would be kept, with the extras costing less.

I conclude that this is not a properly informed consultation and most of the proposed changes are not what is needed. Most deeply affected are those just entering our profession, upon which the future of our universities rests, but the effect on them has been obscured. USS should restart the consultation with proper information provided at the beginning. Better yet, both sides should go back to the negotiating table and try again. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Dr Todd Huffman, please.

Dr Todd Huffman (Lady Margaret Hall, Department of Physics)

Let me start by thanking the Vice-Chancellor and Council for responding to today's motion in a way that ensured it would be discussed at Congregation, its sovereign body. Oxford is one of only a tiny number of universities whose sovereign bodies are composed of their scholars. This means that we have a forum where important issues such as this one can be debated when required. If this debate and its outcome attract the attention they deserve outside Oxford, they could contribute to averting serious hardship in future for all academics in the USS scheme.

It took reading Professor Cooper and Cowley's article in the Oxford Magazine before I realised that I would need to do a similar exercise as they did, but tailored to my own specific circumstances. I will need to look up RPI and CPI and try to find some sort of historical context that reflects what is likely to come about in the next thirty years. I will then try several different scenarios to estimate the margins of error and self-assess my own risks. After this I will need to assess how much of my current income I will need to sacrifice, regardless of tax efficiency, to acceptably reduce my own individual risk of impoverishment in old age. This is the crux of the matter: as pointed out by Professor Malcomson, I have to calculate my own risks. I then have to make my own best guess and take sufficient income hit today to guard against all unreasonable, but still quite possible, scenarios. Mr Kerr admits the risks to the University are high, so the answer is to put that risk onto me.

A proper set of documentation, provided by USS within a properly conducted consultation exercise, would at least give me a one-stop resource for this process. There might even be an example which matches my own financial situation, close enough to give me a rough understanding of my circumstances.

The documentation does not provide this. In fact, the documentation that's been provided has the stench of propaganda. The documentation even attempts to create an artificial 'us' versus 'them' atmosphere by pointing out, as the first line in a USS flysheet, that I will receive a final salary pension under this scheme, and that is a good thing. Obviously this is 'good' for me, but by implication 'bad' for anyone new or returning. This is merely one of the worst examples in a set of documentation full of imprecision, disingenuous value judgments, and quite low on useful facts. I need enough information to understand my own risks, so that I might intelligently comment on the scheme. I do not need to be patronised.

Regardless, though, I cannot understand why I even need to assume some of these risks alone. Is not this spreading of risk one of the reasons for a retirement fund in the first place, and the spreading of risk is even more highly leveraged in a fund as large as USS? I understand that our fund managers collectively received about £3 million in bonus compensation. They must, therefore, be doing their job and mitigating risk on our behalf.

I will end here and simply encourage Congregation to vote in favour of the amended resolution, a strong vote in favour will direct our Vice-Chancellor and our Council to make the serious point that any palate of cuts which substantially increases the financial risk to individual members during their time of retirement is unpalatable. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Mr Sebastian Rahtz.

Mr Sebastian Rahtz (Computing Services)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, members of Congregation, I'd like to speak in favour of the motion before you. I may note in passing the ingenuity of the arrangements which probably have solved the problem for us by forcing us to sit in this cold building for several hours, probably taking some years off our lives and thereby millions off the scheme. I'm not offering myself here as an expert in pension finance, nor am I drawing some kind of line in the sand about the level of pension I demand to be given, or the amount of money I or the University contribute. I'm taking a more folksy attitude towards this.

I am deeply concerned about the effects the proposed changes would have on recruitment, on the perception of benefits, and the pernicious attack on career breaks, and in answer to the earlier rhetorical question posed (do people when they apply for jobs here look at the USS benefits?), the answer is an unequivocal 'yes, thank you'. That's not the point of my intervention. What I ask instead is that the work of the Universities Superannuation Scheme, and Oxford University's relationship with it, should move into a more modern world.

As part of my job at the University Computing Services I'm involved in a number of academic and administrative projects which have three things in common with other developments happening all around us. Firstly, an emphasis on exposing the data behind research, an attitude graced, perhaps surprisingly, with the name of the Fourth Paradigm by the e-Research community—and the Humanities scholars amongst you may have thought this was, in fact, the first paradigm to relate things to data. For me, the most exciting trend in academic research at the moment is the idea, finally realised, of an open, published, repeatable audit trail from raw data to final analysis, something which our environmental colleagues at East Anglia are now espousing rather late in the day. Secondly, the assertion that information which comes to us from on high can and should be questioned, is the second meme of our times, and it can be improved upon.

The concept behind social networking—and I can hear you cringe when I say it—crowd sourcing, Wikipedia, and open source software, the idea that many eyes and many minds can shed new light on problems is easy to dismiss as a populist fad, but its benefits now seem to be becoming incontrovertible. This is the other side of exposing data, knowing that other people may find different answers. We no longer trust the single answers fed to us by secretive bodies, which have been amply illustrated by previous speakers. Thirdly, the notion of accountability in local decision-making. Much as one may pour scorn on David Cameron's apparently risible 'big society'—and how many of you thought you would come and hear that in an Oxford University consultation—it has yet its basis in the laudable idea that people should be involved and take responsibility as far down the chain as is practical. Oxford University is, after all, the ultimate example of subsidiarity, as many of us know to our cost.

Now, what do all these platitudes (which, of course, underlie—and this is the important point—the business of what we at the University have been doing for the last thousand years) have to do with the USS and their proposals to change our pension arrangements, and thus this University's response? USS have failed in their simple duty to give all of their members information on all the alternatives to the solution that they propose. They sent me a leaflet explaining their plans with details on how these might affect me, and left it at that. The UCU—of which I'm not a member, I may note—has alternatives, I'm aware by anecdotal evidence from meeting people in corridors. Individuals, such as the laudable Professor Cooper preceding, have presented analyses, but these have not even-handedly been sent to me. I happened to read the issue of the Oxford Magazine, not something one would normally do. They have not even-handedly been sent to all members of USS to give them a basis on which to respond to consultation. The open data test has simply failed. This University has plans to make a reply to the USS consultative process, but has taken no steps to inform itself as to what the USS members in Oxford know or feel about the changes. On what basis is it therefore going to make the response? The local decision-making test has failed.

This motion asks Congregation to do something that is right, that is sensible, and that meets the long traditions of our institution, and I therefore urge you to vote in favour of the motion.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Mr Undy.

Mr Roger Undy (Saïd Business School, Green Templeton College)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, members of the Congregation, I was not intending to speak but I've been prompted by a number of comments, particularly by Dr Goss, and the reason for that, as well as being a member of the Saïd Business School and Green Templeton College, and—I hesitate to mention this, given Mr Boden's speech—also President of the Oxford UCU, I thought I ought to comment a little bit on what UCU was doing. But I hope I can assure Mr Boden that I'm in no sense hoping to pull down the columns of the Sheldonian. Indeed, in 1995/96, I conducted a programme for the New Labour shadow cabinet: surely that must assure everybody that I'm not the revolutionary or the person that's intending to destroy this University, as Mr Boden seems to think. But back to Dr Goss. As a university lecturer teaching MBAs, I'm quite used to some of the extreme comments you get about trade unions and other social organisations, but in my teaching I used to say there's a continuum between joint regulation and unilateral management action, and trade unions are somewhere in there trying to move it to a more, it might be called, collegiate activity, rather than one of unilateral action.

But towards the unilateral action end is joint consultation, and when we went to the joint consultation meeting, at which we tabled our motion, asking for something as revolutionary as a ballot of members of the USS, and, even more revolutionary, that we be given information about alternatives that the employers were proposing, at the start of that debate—there was really no debate—at the start of that debate I looked down the table to Dr Goss and I said, 'I presume we're going to finish up with a failure to concur,' and at that stage we hadn't even started to discuss it. The reason was that at that meeting, although we made arguments, it was very clear that people outside that meeting had decided that our proposal was not going anywhere, and we considered it an important proposal, and a group of us got together—not all in the Union, from other parts, from Congregation—and decided to move this motion. Of the 200 people signing this motion, they were split more or less straight down the middle, fifty-fifty, non-UCU members and UCU members.

So we come to this motion on the basis of representing Congregation, not of representing the Union, and when asked, after we'd moved this motion in an informal meeting, was I in a position to withdraw it, I said no, because this motion was one that Congregation owned, and on that basis I urge Congregation to support it. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Dr Mapstone, do you wish to reply to the debate?

Dr Sally Mapstone (St Hilda's College, English Faculty)

I'll do so briefly, Mr Vice-Chancellor. As you can see, I've got my coat. That's primarily because it's cold in here. It's been informative and instructive to hear the various points made by members of Congregation. Concern about the impact of the proposed changes clearly clusters in a number of areas, particularly over the impact of the shift from RPI to CPI and the related caps, where the kind of modelling that could be done is clearly very extensive. There are also concerns, which I entirely recognise, about the shift to CARE, particularly so far as researchers and women are concerned, points made very effectively, I thought, in Dr Tomlinson's excellent speech.

I would want to reiterate the point that's been made—that the University has conducted an equality impact exercise in relation to the proposals, which it will be sharing with the UCU and which it will be forwarding to USS. I would, if I may, just reiterate the point in relation to the University's duty to consult—and I'm sorry if this is tiresome to members, but I'm not sure that everybody has entirely understood it. The statutory obligation is to consult with the recognised trade unions, the recognised representatives, and that is what we shall be doing. Members of Congregation should understand that if the amended resolution were to be passed, the University will take care to pursue what Congregation has determined it should do, but it won't be inapparent—and indeed I concede that it was apparent—from our opening remarks, that this is not straightforward. The University will seek to run the consultative ballot as soon as possible in order to complete it before the conclusion of the statutory consultation period.

As Congregation has also deemed that it should seek additional information from USS, it will embark upon the sequence of events that follow from that, which may lead to a restart of the local consultation process and a sequence of events outside the statutory consultation period.

I would like to say that I think it's slightly hard to levy the accusation that we were concerned with technicalities here. It seems to me that it's our obligation to try to understand the will of Congregation, and that was the reason for which we focused on those particular details, and we will certainly need to go on focusing on them. The preamble of the resolution and the amendment invite you to accept two assertions: first, that financially the scheme is only in need of very minor change. The UCU asserts this. It's not the view taken by the EPF or by the USS or by the University's Director of Finance. Second, that the original terms of the consultation were legally inadequate: the proponents of the amendment assert this. Others—USS, as a professionally run pension scheme, and their lawyers—disagree, and perhaps it is notable that no representations seem to have been made by UCU about this nationally.

Members of Congregation should consider the value, as it will be perceived by USS, of the ballot explicitly predicated on those assertions, and which invites people to choose between two sets of proposals, only one of which is available, and set against that the value of considered and informed comments, many of which we've heard today, but I would very strongly recommend should be made in the standard USS consultation in relation to the only proposals which are actually under consideration. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you, Dr Mapstone. Professor Harriss-White, do you wish to reply to the debate?

Professor Barbara Harriss-White
(Wolfson College, Department of International Development)

Yes, please. Mr Vice-Chancellor, and members of Congregation. We've sat through a very cold afternoon hearing a whole series of issues, some of which have been quite contested, and I don't want to summarise them, I simply want to remind people before they vote on what they were. There was the issue of the urgency of the reform: if it ain't broke, don't fix it. There was the issue of the size of the deficit, the health of the scheme. There was the issue of volatility in the future and in the past versus prudence. There were the issues of sustainability and how else to cope with the fact a) that we live longer, and b) that there are some high flyers who get an incredibly high pension.

There were issues to do with the principles of USS, and there were issues raised about the UCU alternative. The UCU may be a fringe group in Oxford, but they are the official representative of the workers and they carry the national burden of negotiating rights and their alternatives do need taking seriously. The employee representatives do have a scheme that increases pension age, that increases employee contributions, that increases cost-sharing for future contributions instead of it being just the responsibility of the employers, but you wouldn't know that. In other words, there is not no alternative, and, in this general climate of not having enough information to make the informed responses that we're being asked to make, I think it's not unreasonable that that alternative, which exists on the USS website, be made available to people in Oxford. We then heard a lot of procedural questions of great complexity, some of which, such as the allegation that there was no alternative proposal in the legal consultation, refer back to the fact that we don't have adequate information, or that the adequate information is very, very deep, it's very hard to find on the website, and that even when we have some information we don't have adequate justification, that's another point.

As Professor Mapstone has just reminded us, it is really up to the University to decide now how to fulfill its obligation to consult staff. There are a whole series of questions about timetabling and, again, what I would say is that it's in our procedure, it's for the Council to decide whether we like this or not, and we must trust our Council. Dr Goss referred to procedural uncertainty and all kinds of legal technicalities, but one might ask: what are the University's plans for our own institutional response? There are many other issues. There was a spat between Sir Ivor Crewe saying that the CPI was non-reformable and Professor Malcomson saying: yes, they can reform it if they want to. Mr Boden talked about Congregation, us here, being the sovereign body, and so we can, as a sovereign body, decide to act as trustees for non-Congregation people who pay into USS, and I suggest that we act in that way this afternoon.

Last but not least, several very eloquent contributions talked about the scholarly embargo. Almost all of us could have earned much, much more in the private sector or even, let's face it, in government, but we trade in our relatively low salaries for a decent pension. When the very principles of university life are in jeopardy, and when higher education, which is the jewel in the Great British crown, is being threatened, then these pension proposals make university life less attractive to the best of our young scholars, including our young scholars from overseas. The debates on the amendment and the resolution have been extremely helpful to all of us. Thank you for making it possible. In moving the resolution, one finds that the proposals are very likely to be harmful. They are not actuarially neutral and they are not adequately justified. They seem to transfer risk from the fund to us. We also find that the consultation has not been conducted in a properly informed way—a very nice contribution from Margaret Watson—and that the procedure for consultation has so far been flawed.

The resolution and the amendment invite USS to make good the defects in this consultation, especially to provide an appropriate range of worked examples, and especially—and Dr Tomlinson, we thank you—the example that I also raised about gender equalities impacts.

If the University has done this research, when is it going to give it to us? We're over two-thirds of the way through this period of consultation. There will be much useful information for staff when they consider their own responses to the consultation, so we, the proposers of the resolution, urge members of Congregation to support the amended resolution. Thank you.

Council and Main Committees

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations

Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 24 December.

(A) VALUE FOR MONEY COMMITTEE

Explanatory Note

These changes, made on the recommendation of the General Purposes Committee of Council and supported by the Audit and Scrutiny Committee, establish the Value for Money Committee as a subcommittee of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee so as to embed the pursuit of value for money more firmly within the University's processes and culture; and consequently revise the composition and terms of reference of the Value for Money Committee. There are also associated changes to the regulations of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee and of the Audit and Scrutiny Committee.

Text of Regulations

1 In Council Regulations 15 of 2002, concerning committees reporting directly to Council (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), delete existing regulations 3.135-3.140, concerning the Value for Money Committee, and substitute:

'Value for Money Subcommittee of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee'

3.135. The Value for Money Subcommittee of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee shall consist of:

- (1) a person appointed by Council as chairman of the committee, who shall also be a member of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee;
- (2)-(5) a member of Congregation from each of the academic divisions with relevant expertise, appointed by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee;
- (6) a member of Congregation from within Academic Services and University

Collections with relevant expertise, appointed by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee;

(7) a member of Congregation from within the University Administration and Services with relevant expertise, appointed by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee;

(8) the Chairman of the Domestic Bursars' Committee;

(9) one external person appointed by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee who shall have relevant experience at a senior level within either the public or the private sector.

3.136. (1) The subcommittee may co-opt up to three additional members.

(2) The persons co-opted need not be members of the University.

3.137. (1) The initial period of office on the subcommittee shall be three years.

(2) No person shall serve on the subcommittee for more than six years in total.

3.138. In addition to subcommittee members, the Director of Purchasing shall normally attend all meetings.

3.139. The subcommittee shall meet at least once a term.

3.140. The subcommittee shall be responsible for:

- (1) developing and maintaining strategy, policy and guidance setting out the University's objectives in the pursuit of value for money as defined in regulation 2.17 (6) of Council Regulations 15 of 2002;
- (2) developing and implementing strategies to promote and support the pursuit of value for money throughout the University, including within planning and decision-making processes at all levels, to ensure that value for money is embedded within the University's operations and culture;
- (3) adopting and disseminating value for money good practice;
- (4) raising the profile of value for money across the University.'

2 In Part 2 of Council Regulations 15 of 2002, concerning the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4634, 16 October 2002, p. 226, as amended), add new regulation 2.14 (19) as follows and renumber existing regulation 2.14 (19) as 2.14 (20):

'2.14 (19) the Chairman of the Value for Money Subcommittee of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee;'

3 Ibid., add new regulation 2.17 (6) as follows and renumber existing regulations 2.17 (6)-(10) as 2.17 (7)-(11):

'2.17 (6) the embedding within the University's processes and culture of greater economy (minimising the cost of an activity), greater efficiency (the relationship between the output of goods and services and the resources used to produce them) or greater effectiveness (the extent to which objectives are met), collectively known as 'value for money';'

4 In Council Regulations 15 of 2002 concerning the Audit and Scrutiny Committee (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended on 8 May 2003, 1 June 2006, 21 January 2010, 18 March 2010 and 23 September 2010, Gazette, Vol. 133, p. 1212; Vol. 136, pp. 1152-3; Vol. 140, pp. 444, 746; Vol. 141, p.3), delete existing regulation 3.11 (3) and renumber existing regulations 3.11 (4)-(24) as 3.11 (3)-(23).

5 These regulations shall be effective from 1 January 2011.

(B) SPORTS STRATEGY COMMITTEE

Explanatory Note

With the endorsement of the Conference of Colleges, the University has agreed new arrangements for the governance of sport in line with the relevant recommendation of the Report of the Committee to Review University Sport. The University has already instituted changes to the arrangements for the provision of student services and administration in the light of the formation of the Student Administration and Services section within the Academic Administration Division. Corresponding to this new management system, the Education Committee will exercise a broader range of responsibilities in relation to student-related matters and these will encompass oversight of the work of the Sports Strategy Subcommittee, which will report to the Education Committee. The membership and terms of reference for the Sports Strategy Committee have been amended to accommodate these changes.

Text of Regulations

In Council Regulations 15 of 2002, concerning committees reporting directly to Council (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), delete existing regulations 3.105–111, concerning the Sports Strategy Committee, and substitute:

'University Sports Strategic Subcommittee of the Education Committee

3.105. The University Sports Strategic Subcommittee of the Education Committee shall consist of:

- (1) a chairman appointed by the Vice-Chancellor from amongst the members of Education Committee;
- (2) one of the Proctors or the Assessor as may be agreed between them;
- (3), (4) two persons elected by the Conference of Colleges;
- (5) one person from amongst the four academic divisions as may be agreed between the divisions;
- (6) one person appointed by the Estates Directorate;
- (7) the President of the Men's Blues Committee;
- (8) the President of the Women's Blues Committee;
- (9) the President of the Sports Federation;
- (10) the Director of Sport;
- (11) the Head of Development–Sport;
- (12) the Director of Student Administration and Services;
- (13) a staff representative¹.

3.106. The subcommittee shall report to the Education Committee and shall meet not less than three times a year, normally at least once in each term.

3.107. Elected or appointed members shall hold office for a period of three years and shall be eligible to serve for a total period of six years. With the approval of the Education Committee on each occasion, the subcommittee may co-opt up to two additional members, who are alumni of the University and who shall be chosen so as to bring to the committee high-level expertise in sport or well-being. Co-opted members will hold office for two years and shall be eligible to serve for a total period of four years.

3.108. With the approval of the Education Committee, the subcommittee may establish such panels or groups in relation to operational matters as it deems necessary. It must establish a Sports Safety Panel meeting at least once a year.

3.109. The subcommittee shall be responsible to the Education Committee for the following matters:

- (1) to provide the strategic direction for the University's approach to sport;
- (2) to be responsible for the promotion and management of sport and recreation within the University;
- (3) operationally, to encourage closer sporting cooperation between the University and its colleges;
- (4) to promote and encourage the active participation in sport and physical activity for both students and staff;
- (5) to oversee the University's management of sport, and to ensure its accountability to both its funders and its users;
- (6) to be the forum for discussion and planning on existing and future sport provision.'

(C) DEPARTMENT OF SOCIAL POLICY AND SOCIAL WORK

Explanatory Note

These changes, made on the recommendation of the Social Sciences Board, change the name of the Department of Social Policy and Social Work to the Department of Social Policy and Intervention to reflect the full scope of the activities of the department.

Text of Regulations

1 In Council Regulations 16 of 2002, concerning divisions (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), in regulation 4, concerning the composition of the Social Sciences Division, delete existing paragraph (12) and substitute:

'(12) Social Policy and Intervention;'

2 In Council Regulations 17 of 2002, concerning divisional boards (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), in regulation 15 delete existing paragraphs (15)–(19) and substitute (new text underlined):

'(15)–(17) three persons elected on a rotational basis by and from academic members of the following units of the division, with each person serving a two-year period:

- (a) the Department of Economics;
- (b) the Department of Education;
- (c) the Faculty of Law;
- (d) the Department of Politics and International Relations;
- (e) the School of Geography and the Environment;
- (f) the Saïd Business School;

(18)–(19) two persons elected on a rotational basis by and from academic members of the following units of the division, with each person serving a two-year period of office:

- (a) the Department for International Development;
- (b) the School for Interdisciplinary Area Studies;
- (c) the Department of Sociology;
- (d) the Oxford Internet Institute;
- (e) the Department of Social Policy and Intervention;
- (f) the School of Anthropology;
- (g) the Institute of Archaeology and Research Laboratory for Archaeology and the History of Art;'

Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council

Changes in Regulations

The Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 24 December.

Buchan Reader in International Relations

Explanatory Note

These changes, made on the recommendation of the Social Sciences Board and the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council with the endorsement of the Board of Management for the Alastair Buchan Appeal Fund, propose the establishment of a permanent Alastair Buchan Professorship of International Relations, replacing the Buchan Readership in the same subject. The opportunity has also been taken to remove outdated references.

Text of Regulations

1 In Council Regulations 24 of 2002 concerning academic and other posts (Statutes, 2000, p. 442, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1461) delete § 143 and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

§143. Alastair Buchan Reader Professor of in International Relations

1. The University accepts with deep gratitude the covenanted and other moneys known as the Alastair Buchan Appeal Fund and held on behalf of the Oxford Committee for the appeal, together with any moneys subscribed to the fund in future, to be applied to the support of study, teaching, and research in International Relations in the University in memory of the Hon. Alastair Francis Buchan, C.B.E., M.A., sometime Montague Burton Professor of International Relations.

2. There shall be an Alastair Buchan Professorship of International Relations. To this end the fund shall be employed to establish an Alastair Buchan Readership in International Relations; provided that the income derived from £5,000 of the fund shall be placed at the discretion of the Board of the Faculty of Social Studies Department of Politics and International Relations for expenditure on the subsidiary purposes of the appeal, as defined in cl. regulation 5 below, and the Cyril Foster and Related Funds Committee shall administer and have oversight of this expenditure.

3. The reader professor shall engage in advanced study or research and shall lecture and give instruction in International Relations on such conditions and with such duties as the General Board Council shall from time to time determine.

4. The reader professor shall be elected by an electoral board consisting of:

(1) the Vice-Chancellor, or, if the head of the college specified in (2) of this regulation is Vice-Chancellor, a person appointed by Council;

(2) a person appointed by Council the head of the college with which the professorship shall be for the time being associated by Council, or, if the head is unable or unwilling to act, a person appointed by the governing body of the college;

(3) a person appointed by the General Board governing body of the college specified in (2) of this regulation;

(4)–(5) three two persons appointed by the Board of the Faculty of Social Studies Council;

(6) a person appointed by the Social Sciences Board;

(7)–(9) three persons appointed by the Department of Politics and International Relations.

(7) a person appointed by the Board of the Faculty of Modern History;

5. The subsidiary purposes of the fund are: to finance short term visits by outstanding exponents and practitioners in the field of International Relations and to facilitate longer visits; to provide facilities for research in the subject (including travel) and to attract research projects; to provide graduate scholarships in the subject; to advance the study of International Relations generally.

6. This decree ~~These regulations~~ may at any time be altered by Council provided always that the main purpose of the appeal, the support of study, teaching, and research in International Relations in the University in memory of Professor Buchan shall be observed.

2 In Schedule A of Council Regulations 3 of 2004, concerning statutory professorships, before 'Montague Burton Professor of International Relations' insert:

'Alastair Buchan Professor of International Relations'.

3 Feb.: 'Ethnic/religious-based admission criteria in British and Israeli Jewish schools—comparative perspectives.'

Dr Emma Abate, Rome

3 Mar.: 'Prayers from the Genizah: materials, texts and traditions of medieval Hebrew liturgy.'

Seminar on Jewish History and Literature in the Graeco-Roman Period

The following seminars will take place at 2.30 p.m. on Tuesdays in the Oriental Institute Faculty Room except where otherwise indicated. Convener: Professor Tessa Rajak.

Professor Sir Fergus Millar (room 314)

18 Jan.: 'Judaism and Christianity in South Arabia in late antiquity.'

Professor Geza Vermes, Professor Sir Fergus Millar and Professor Martin Goodman

1 Feb.: 'Emil Schürer a century after his death.' (Round Table)

Dr Holger Zellentin, Nottingham

8 Feb.: 'Jerusalem fell after Betar: Josephus, Bar Kokhba, Eusebius, and Rabbinic Memory'.

Professor William Horbury, Cambridge (room 314)

22 Feb.: 'Liberty in the coinage and documents of the Jewish Revolt.'

Professor Michael Graves, Wheaton College

8 Mar.: 'Jewish traditions in the commentaries of Jerome'.

Master Classes on Talmud

Professor Shamma Friedman, Jewish Theological Seminary, New York, will deliver master classes at 5 p.m. at the Oriental Institute on the days indicated.

21 Feb.: 'Now you see it, now you don't: can source-criticism perform magic on Talmudic passages about sorcery?'

22 Feb.: 'Maimonides and anthropomorphism—allowing the Aggadah to speak for itself.'

Seminar on Reading Talmud

Professor Shamma Friedman, Jewish Theological Seminary, New York, will lead a seminar at 5 p.m. at the Oriental Institute on 18 January, 26 January and 1 February.

Theology

WILDE LECTURES IN NATURAL AND COMPARATIVE RELIGION

Religion in public: re-alignments in state, society and market

Professor Linda Woodhead, Lancaster, will deliver the Wilde lectures in natural and comparative religion at 5 p.m. on Tuesdays in the Examination Schools.

18 Jan.: 'Theories, debates and controversies about "public religion".'

25 Jan.: 'Changing relations between religion, state, and law.'

1 Feb.: 'Religion and the market economy.'

8 Feb.: 'Can religion ever be a private matter?'

GOD'S PRESENCE: A CONTEMPORARY RECAPITULATION OF EARLY CHRISTIANITY

Frances Young, Emeritus Professor of Theology, Birmingham, will deliver the Bampton Lectures on Tuesdays at 5 p.m. in the University Church of St Mary the Virgin.

15 Feb.: 'From pondering scripture to the first principles of Christian Theology.'

22 Feb.: 'From cosmology to doxology: reading Genesis alongside Plato and Darwin.'

1 Mar.: 'From creation to re-creation: nature and the naked ape.'

8 Mar.: 'From image to likeness: incarnation and theosis'.

3 May.: 'From Adam and Eve to Mary and Christ: sin, redemption, atonement.'

10 May.: 'From inspiration to sanctification: the spirit of wisdom and holiness.'

17 May.: 'From the Church to Mary: towards a critical ecumenism.'

24 May.: 'From dogma to theoria: God as Trinity.'

MCDONALD CENTRE FOR THEOLOGY, ETHICS, AND PUBLIC LIFE

Dr Pete Ward, Senior Lecturer in Youth Ministry and Theological Education, King's College, London, and author of Gods Behaving Badly: Media, Religion, and Celebrity Culture, will deliver the following McDonald Centre lecture at 5 p.m. on Thursday, 27 January, in Christ Church, Lecture Room 1.

Subject: 'Gods Behaving Badly: Religion and Celebrity Culture.'

MCDONALD LECTURES

Ethics, Society, and the Place of Truth

John Haldane, Professor of Philosophy, St Andrews, will deliver the 2011 McDonald Lectures at 5 p.m. on the following days in the Examination Schools.

Wed. 23 Feb.: 'Politics in an age of uncertainty.'

Thurs. 24 Feb.: 'Religion in an age of doubt.'

Wed. 2 Mar.: 'Ethics in an age of scepticism.'

Thurs. 3 Mar.: 'Ethics and the recovery of nature.'

Wed. 9 Mar.: 'Religion and the recovery of the supernatural.'

Thurs. 10 Mar.: 'Politics and the recovery of the common good.'

IAN RAMSEY CENTRE SEMINAR

Professors John Hedley Brooke, Ronald L. Numbers, Wisconsin-Madison, Keith R. Benson, British Columbia, and Geoffrey Cantor, Leeds, will deliver the Ian Ramsey Centre seminar at 8.30 p.m. on Thursday, 27 January, in the Old Dining Room, Harris Manchester. Free and open to the public. Drinks reception at 8.15 p.m.

Subject: 'Science and religion around the world: a book launch.'

Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences

Lectures

Professor Camillo De Lellis, Zurich, will lecture at 4.30 p.m. on Friday, 28 January, in Lecture Theatre 2, the Mathematical Institute.

Subject: 'h-principle and fluid dynamics.'

Professor Arkani-Hamed, Institute for Advanced Study, will lecture at 4.30 p.m. on Friday, 4 March, in Lecture Theatre 2, the Mathematical Institute.

Subject: 'New mathematical structures in scattering amplitudes.'

Physical Chemistry Seminars

The following seminars will given at 2.15 p.m. on Mondays in the PTCL Large Lecture Theatre. All welcome. Conveners: Professor P.J. Hore and Dr S. Mackenzie.

Jeremy Hutson, Durham

17 Jan.: 'Molecules at millikelvin and below.'

Marshall Stoneham, University College, London

24 Jan.: 'Where the quantum meets biology.'

David Manolopoulos

31 Jan.: 'Ring polymer molecular dynamics.'

Eleanor Campbell, Edinburgh

7 Feb.: 'Fullerenes and nanotubes: from photionisation to NEMS.'

Mike Duncan, Georgia, USA

14 Feb.: 'Infrared spectroscopy of protonation and proton-transfer intermediates in the gas phase.'

Marc Vrakking, MBI, Berlin

21 Feb.: 'Ultrafast dynamics using harmonic-based and FEL-based XUV/X-ray experiments.'

James Durrant, Imperial College, London

28 Feb.: 'Molecules and nanostructures for solar energy conversion.'

Justin Benesh

7 Mar.: 'Elucidating the quaternary heterogeneity and dynamics of protein assemblies.'

Solid Mechanics and Materials Engineering Group Seminar Series

The following seminars will be given at 2 p.m. on Mondays in LR8, IEB Building, Department of Engineering Science.

Dr Chris Burgoyne, Cambridge

24 Jan.: 'Prestressing of ceramics.'

Dr Matthew Arthington

31 Jan.: 'Photogrammetric techniques for characterisation of anisotropic mechanical properties of Ti-6Al-4V.'

Professor Nicola Marzari

7 Feb.: 'Engineering thermal transport from first-principles.'

Andreas Schiffer

14 Feb.: 'The response of submerged structures to deep-water blast loading.'

Dr Ian Cullis, Qinetiq, Fort Halstead

21 Feb.: 'Material design for the twenty-first century.'

Dr Daniel Drodge

28 Feb.: 'Dynamic deformation of polymer bonded explosives and their simulants.'

Edward Grey Institute Seminars

The following seminars will be given at 4 p.m. on Fridays in D38, Edwards Grey Institute.

Adele Mennerat

21 Jan.: 'Natural selection in an artificial world: human-induced evolution of parasites.'

Olav Moberg, Bergen

28 Jan.: 'The trade-off between immunity and cognition: immunized individuals learn less!'

Jessica Metcalf, Princeton

4 Feb.: 'Serious challenges from a generally mild infection: dynamics, burden and control of rubella.'

Colin Garroway

11 Feb.: 'Social and genetic networks of EGI members, flying squirrels and fishers.'

Rich Grenyer

18 Feb.: 'Optimal area selection for vertebrate conservation: taxonomy and the can of worms.'

Wieslaw Babik, Jagiellonian

25 Feb.: 'Drift, selection and MHC variation.'

Max Burton

4 Mar.: 'Human cooperation in economic games.'

John Quinn

11 Mar.: 'Personality, plasticity and life history variation in the Wytham great tit population.'

Physical and Theoretical Chemistry Laboratory

SOFT MATTER, BIOMATERIALS AND INTERFACES SEMINARS

The following seminars will be given on Tuesdays at 4 p.m. in the John Rowlinson Seminar Room (PTCL). All welcome. Conveners: Dr R.P.A. Dullens and Professor R. Golestanian.

Dr William Sampson, Manchester

18 Jan.: 'Modelling interdependence of pore size and specific surface area in electrospun polymer fibre networks.'

Professor Stephen Mann, Bristol

25 Jan.: 'Integrative assembly of nanoscale constructs: from hybrid nanostructures to solvent-less proteins.'

Dr Marco Polin, Cambridge

1 Feb.: 'Locomotion of a green flagellate.'

Dr Peter Holmqvist, Forschungszentrum Jülich, Germany

8 Feb.: 'Dynamics in charged colloidal suspension in liquid, crystal and glass state.'

Professor Jens Eggers, Bristol

15 Feb.: 'The physics of receding contact lines.'

Dr Stephen Peppin

22 Feb.: 'Dynamics of colloidal particles in ice.'

Professor Seth Fraden, Brandeis

1 Mar.: 'Active emulsions.'

Professor Helmut Schiessel, Leiden

8 Mar.: 'Euler's elastica and their applications to DNA, nucleosomes and chromatin fibers.'

Oxford Physics Colloquia

The following lectures will be given at 4.15 p.m. on Fridays in the Martin Wood Lecture Theatre, Clarendon Laboratory. Tea will be served in the Common Room at 3.45 p.m. Conveners: J. March-Russell, R. Davies and P. Radaelli.

28 Jan.: To be confirmed.

Dr Ard Louis

4 Feb.: To be confirmed.

Professor Andrei Seryi

18 Feb.: 'Accelerators—giant and compact—for science, industry and society—future directions.'

Professor Ali Yazdani, Princeton

25 Feb.: 'Helical metals on the surfaces of topological insulators.'

Professor John Shepherd, Oceanography Centre, Southampton

4 Mar.: 'Geoengineering the climate: science, governance and uncertainty.'

Computational Mathematics and Applications Seminars

The following seminars will be held on Thursdays at 2 p.m. in Seminar Room RI.O.48, Gibson Building, Maths Institute, except for 27 January and 10 March, which will be held at 2 p.m. at the Rutherford Appleton Laboratory near Didcot. For updates see: <http://www.maths.ox.ac.uk/events/seminars/upcoming/P10Y1D/4/877>. For further information: lotti.ekert@maths.ox.ac.uk. Conveners: Professor Nick Trefethen and Dr Sue Thorne (RAL).

Professor Chris Budd, Bath

13 Jan.: To be announced.

Dr Sébastien Loisel, Heriot-Watt

20 Jan.: 'Optimized domain decomposition methods that scale weakly.'

Dr David Titley-Peloquin

27 Jan.: To be announced.

Professor Des Higham, Strathclyde

3 Feb.: 'Algorithms for evolving networks.'

Speaker to be announced

10 Feb.: To be announced.

Professor Raymond Spiteri, Saskatchewan

17 Feb.: 'Stiffness analysis of cardiac cell models.'

Dr Juan Vera, Tilburg

24 Feb.: 'Iterative valid polynomial inequalities generation for polynomial programing.'

Dr Selin Damla Ahipasaoglu, London School of Economics

3 Mar.: 'Analytical results on the PAUSE auction procedure.'

Professor David Silvester, Manchester

10 Mar.: To be announced.

Department of Plant Sciences research seminars

The following seminars will be given at 4 p.m. on Thursdays in the Large Lecture Theatre, Department of Plant Sciences. Convenor: Professor N. Harberd.

Dr Veronica Greiniesen, John Innes Centre
20 Jan.: 'Auxin: establishing morphogen gradients and interlocking cell polarities.'

Professor Ueli Grossniklaus, Zurich
27 Jan.: 'Cell-cell communication during fertilization in Arabidopsis: a surprising link to disease resistance.'

Dr Philip Poole, John Innes Centre
3 Feb.: 'From rhizosphere to nodule senescence, the birth and death of the Rhizobium-legume symbiosis.'

Professor Gilean McVean
10 Feb.: 'Population genetics from population-scale sequencing.'

Professor Stuart West
17 Feb.: 'Social evolution in bacteria.'

Professor Maurice Moloney, Rothamsted Research
24 Feb.: 'From construct to clinic: production, purification and human testing of recombinant human insulin from transgenic safflower seeds.'

Dr Colin Bird, BP Biofuels
3 Mar.: 'Field to wheel—fuelling transport with plants.'

Dr Mark Carine, Natural History Museum
10 Mar.: 'The Linnean shortfall and oceanic island biogeography.'

Physical and Theoretical Chemistry LaboratoryTHEORETICAL CHEMISTRY GROUP SEMINARS

The following seminars will be given on Mondays at 4.45 p.m. in the John Rowlinson Seminar Room (20.12), opposite the Main Lecture Theatre. All welcome. Convenor: Dr Mark Wilson.

Dr Dirk Aarts
24 Jan.: '2D is the new 3D: fluctuations in confinement.'

Dr Davide Ceresoli
7 Feb.: 'Ab-initio EPR spectroscopy of transition-metal complexes from the orbital magnetization.'

Dr Peter Bobbert, Technische Universiteit Eindhoven
21 Feb.: 'Mechanisms for magnetic-field effects in organic semiconductors.'

Professor Roy Johnston, Birmingham
7 Mar.: 'Nanoalloys: two metals can be better than one at the nanoscale.'

Mathematical Biology and Ecology Seminars

The seminars are held at 2 p.m. on Fridays in Lecture Room 1 at the Mathematical Institute. Convenor: Sara Jolliffe (email: cmb@maths.ox.ac.uk).

Professor Mark Sansom
21 Jan.: 'Multiscale molecular simulations of membrane proteins.'

Dr Edward Codling, Essex
4 Feb.: 'Modelling and analysis of animal movement behaviour.'

Professor Ben Simons, Cambridge
18 Feb.: 'Universal patterns of tissue stem cell fate.'

Dr Christina Cobbold, Glasgow
4 Mar.: 'From maladaptivity to adaptivity—the evolution of developmental timing.'

Information Security and Privacy Programme

The following inter-disciplinary research seminars will be given on Mondays in the Access Grid room at Oxford e-Research Centre, at 5 p.m. Conveners: Andrew Martin (Computing Laboratory) and Ian Brown (Oxford Internet Institute).

Dr Andrew Martin
17 Jan.: 'A vision for inter-disciplinary research in information security'.

Mr Colin Williams, SoftBox Limited
24 Jan.: 'Information assurance in the information age; towards an historical and social context'.

Dr George Danezis, Microsoft Research Cambridge
31 Jan.: 'Privacy-preserving smart-metering'.

Professor M. Angela Sasse, UCL
7 Feb.: Title TBC

Dr Gus Hosein, LSE/Privacy International
14 Feb.: Title TBC

Professor Peter Sommer, LSE/Open University
21 Feb.: 'Defining CyberWarfare'.

Dr Steve Marsh, Cabinet Office
28 Feb.: 'The UK Government's cyber security programme'.

The Rt Hon David Blunkett, MP
7 Mar.: Title TBC

Medical SciencesOxford Nutrition Group

The annual Oxford Nutrition Group Meeting will take place 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on 7 February at the Oxford Centre for Diabetes, Endocrinology and Metabolism, Churchill Hospital. This is a joint meeting organised by Oxford Brookes University, Oxford University and the University of Reading, with eight speakers covering broad topics. Please confirm your attendance at oxfordnutritiongroup@gmail.com.

Neuroscience Grand Round Guest Lectures

The following seminars will be given from 11.30–12.30 on Fridays in Lecture Theatre 1, Academic Block, John Radcliffe Hospital.

Professor Ammar Al-Chalabi, Director, King's MND Care and Research Centre, King's College, London
21 Jan.: 'ALS genetics untangled.'

Dr John Winer, Institute of Clinical Neurosciences, Bristol
11 Feb.: 'Guillain-Barré Syndrome—approaching the centenary.'

Sir William Dunn School of Pathology Departmental Research Seminars

The following seminars will be held on Thursdays at 4 p.m. in the Medical Sciences Teaching Centre Lecture Theatre.

Professor Peter Cook, Sir William Dunn School of Pathology
20 Jan.: 'A model for all genomes: the role of active RNA polymerases fixed in factories.'

Dr John F.X. Diffley, Cancer Research UK, London Research Institute, Clare Hall
27 Jan.: 'Mechanism and regulation of eukaryotic DNA replication.'

Dr Lars Steinmetz, EMBL, Heidelberg
3 Feb.: 'Systems genetics of complex traits.'

Dr Caetano Reis e Sousa, CRUK London Research Institute
10 Feb.: 'Innate regulation of adaptive immunity by dendritic cells.'

Dr Andrew N.J. McKenzie, MRC Laboratory of Molecular Biology, Cambridge
17 Feb.: 'New insights into innate cell regulation of type-2 immune responses.'

Professor Gerard Evan, Department of Biochemistry, Cambridge
24 Feb.: Title to be confirmed.

Professor Daniel J. Mueller, Biotechnology Centre, Dresden
3 Mar.: 'Probing individual proteins regulating the mechanics of cell division.'

Oxford Forum for Medical Humanities Lecture

Sir Iain Chalmers, Editor, James Lind Library, will deliver a lecture at 7 p.m. on Thursday, 20 January, in the T.S. Eliot Lecture Theatre, Merton College.
Subject: 'Gaza 1970, research evidence to inform practice, and Gaza 2010.'

Oxford Centre for Diabetes, Endocrinology and Metabolism seminars

The following seminars will be given at 12.45 p.m. on Wednesdays in the Robert Turner Lecture Theatre at OCDEM, Churchill Hospital.

Professor Michael Goran, Southern California

19 Jan.: 'Fizzyology: genetics, metabolic effects, health outcomes and politics of high sugar consumption in children.' Host: Professor Keith Frayn.

Professor Bart Staels, Lille

26 Jan.: 'Nuclear receptors in metabolism and cardiovascular disease.' Host: Professor Rury Holman.

Professor Thomas Mandrup Poulsen, Copenhagen

2 Feb.: 'Type 2 diabetes—an auto inflammatory disease.' Host: Professor Fredrik Karpe.

Dr Barbara Fielding, Oxford and Surrey

9 Feb.: 'Tracing the fate of dietary fat: metabolic studies in humans.' Host: Professor Keith Frayn.

Professor Antony Galione

16 Feb.: 'NAADP, acidic stores and calcium signalling: from fertilization to insulin secretion.' Host: Professor Raj Thakker.

Professor Neil Hanley, Manchester

23 Feb.: 'Early human pancreas development: the blueprint for making beta cells.' Host: Dr Anna Gloyn.

Dr Helen Murphy, Cambridge

2 Mar.: 'Technological insights into diabetic pregnancy.' Host: Dr Katharine Owen.

Professor Richard Holt, Southampton

9 Mar.: 'The double burden of diabetes and mental illness.' Host: Professor Stephen Gough.

Pharmacology, Anatomical Neuropharmacology and Drug Discovery Seminars

The following seminars will be given at 12 p.m. on Tuesdays in the Lecture Theatre, Department of Pharmacology. Convener: Professor Antony Galione.

Dr Iain Greenwood, Division of Biomedical Sciences, St George's, London

18 Jan.: 'Kv7 channels: new therapeutic targets for smooth muscle disorders?'

Dr Gareth Hathway, Faculty of Medicine and Health Sciences, Nottingham

25 Jan.: To be confirmed.

Dr François Georges, INSERM

1 Feb.: 'Neural bases for excitatory properties of morphine on dopaminergic neurons.'

Professor Howard Riezman, Department of Biochemistry, Geneva

15 Feb.: 'Lipid metabolism and function in model organisms and cells.'

Professor R. Leo Brady, School of Biochemistry, Bristol

22 Feb.: 'Lactate dehydrogenase: old enzyme, new drug target.'

Professor Paul Martin, School of Biochemistry, Bristol

1 Mar.: 'Parallels between wound healing and cancer.'

Simon Butt

8 Mar.: 'Electrophylogeny—when do neuronal subtypes become functional in the developing neocortex?'

Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics Seminar Series

The following seminars will be given at 1 p.m. on Fridays in the Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics, Sherrington Building Library. Convener: Dr D. Goberdhan.

Dr Sharon Tooze, Cancer Research UK, London Research Institute

21 Jan.: 'Molecular insights into mammalian autophagy.'

Dr Erin Schuman, Max Planck Institute for Brain Research, Frankfurt

11 Feb.: 'Local control at neuronal synapses.'

Dr Andrew Jackson, MRC Genetics Unit, Edinburgh

25 Feb.: 'Human disorders and brain size.'

Professor Andrew Halestrap, Biochemistry, Bristol

4 Mar.: Title to be confirmed.

Ludwig Institute for Cancer Research Signalling Pathways and Genetics of Cancer Seminars

The following seminars will be given at 11 a.m. on Wednesdays in the Ludwig/Jenner Seminar Room, Level -1, Old Road Campus Research Building. Convener: Dr G. Bond.

Professor Paul Luzio, Cambridge

12 Jan.: 'The delivery of endocytosed cargo to lysosomes.'

Professor Clemens Schmitt, Max-Delbrück-Center for Molecular Medicine

9 Feb.: Title to be confirmed.

Dr Gareth Inman, Dundee

9 Mar.: Title to be confirmed.

Professor Martin Eilers, Würzburg

23 Mar.: Title to be confirmed.

Social Sciences

Gareth Evans Memorial Lecture

Professor F. Recanatì will deliver a Gareth Evans Memorial Lecture at 5 p.m. on Tuesday, 18 January, in the Gulbenkian Lecture Theatre, St Cross Building.

Subject: To be confirmed.

Astor Fellowship Lecture

Professor Sondra Hale, Professor of Anthropology and Women's Studies, University of California, Los Angeles, will deliver a public lecture at 5 p.m. on Tuesday 25 January, at the Taylor Institution.

Subject: 'Gendered violence and the politics of memory in Sudan's conflict zones.'

Law in Perspective of History, Literature and Philosophy

Professor N. Lacey will lecture at 1 p.m. on Thursdays of weeks 5 to 8 in Room 19, St Cross Building.

Subjects: To be confirmed.

Law and Finance Seminars

Professor J. Armour and Professor P. Davies will lecture at 5.30 p.m. on Thursday, 27 January, in the Saïd Business School. For more information, see: http://www.law.ox.ac.uk/discussion_group/LFSS.

Subject: To be confirmed.

Oxford Intellectual Property Seminars

Professor G. Dinwoodie and Dr J. Pila will lecture at 11.30 a.m. on Tuesdays of weeks 1, 2, 7 and 8, at St Catherine's College.

Subjects: To be confirmed.

Senior Practitioner Lectures in Law and Finance

Mr D. Awrey will lecture at 5.30 p.m. on Wednesdays of weeks 2, 3, 5 and 7, in the Saïd Business School. For more information, see: http://www.law.ox.ac.uk/discussion_group/LFSS.

Subjects: To be confirmed.

Oxford Institute of Social Policy

APPROACHES TO COMPARATIVE SOCIAL POLICY: METHODS AND METHODOLOGIES

The following seminars will be given at 5 p.m. on Thursdays in the Violet Butler Room, Barnett House, Wellington Square. Conveners: Martin Seeleib-Kaiser, Emanuele Ferragina and Robert Walker.

Stuart White

20 Jan.: 'The three worlds of welfare capitalism: are any of them just?'

Anne Gauthier, Netherland's

Interdisciplinary Demographic Institute
27 Jan.: 'Family policies as national context: a demographic perspective.'

Michael Shalev, Hebrew University
3 Feb.: 'Number-crunching without alchemy in comparative welfare state research.'

Kees van Kersbergen, Aarhus
10 Feb.: 'Explaining welfare state change: functional pressures, ideas, and blame avoidance.'

Robert Walker and Elaine Chase
17 Feb.: 'Using qualitative methods in a cross-national comparative context.'

Jon Kvist, Southern Denmark
24 Feb.: 'Precise past, fuzzy future? Configurational comparative methods in ideal type analysis.'

Emanuele Ferragina, Martin Seeleib-Kaiser and Robert Walke
3 Mar.: 'Welfare regime theory: a house of cards?'

Jackie O'Reilly, Brighton Business School
10 Mar.: 'Indexes and gaps: international comparisons of gender and employment.'

Department of Politics and International Relations

COMPARATIVE POLITICAL ECONOMY RESEARCH SEMINAR

Dr P. Beramendi, Professor D.S. King and Professor D. Rueda will lecture at 2 p.m. on Thursday in weeks 1, 3, 5, 7 and 8 in the Swire Seminar Room, University College.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS RESEARCH COLLOQUIUM

Professor A. Hurrell will lecture at 12.30 p.m. on Thursdays in Seminar Room G, Manor Road Building.

ETHICS, LAW AND ARMED CONFLICT/ CHANGING CHARACTER OF WAR SEMINARS

The following seminars will be given at 1 p.m. in Seminar Room G, Manor Road Building.

Dr Cian O'Driscoll, Glasgow
18 Jan.: 'A "fighting chance" or fighting dirty? Michael Gross meets the Spartans.'

Dr Tamar Meisels, Tel Aviv
25 Jan.: 'Pre-emptive strikes—Israel and Iran.'

Professor Ian Clark, Aberystwyth, with Professor Christian Reus-Smit, European University Institute, Florence
1 Feb.: 'Special responsibilities in world politics.' (Please note this seminar will be at the earlier time of 12.30 p.m.)

Dr Paul Cornish, Chatham House
8 Feb.: 'Contemporary security challenges.'

Department of Politics and International Relations/Oxford Centre for the Study of Inequality and Democracy

THE HISTORICAL TURN IN THE STUDY OF DEMOCRACY

The following seminars will be given at 5 p.m. on the following days in the Department of Politics and International Relations. Conveners: Professor N. Bermeo and Professor G. Capocchia.

Jason Wittenberg, Berkeley
25 Jan.: 'What is a historical legacy? An analysis of new semocracies.' Seminar Room G.

Kathleen Thelen, MIT
9 Feb.: 'The future of egalitarian capitalism, in light of its past.' Seminar Room C.

Philosophy of Education Society of Great Britain (Oxford Branch) Seminars

The following seminars will be given at 5 p.m. on Wednesdays at the Department of Education, 15 Norham Gardens, Seminar Room D. Please email alis.oancea@education.ox.ac.uk to register. Conveners: Dr Alis Oancea, Dr Lorraine Foreman-Peck, and Janet Orchard, Bristol.

Professor David Beckett, Melbourne
19 Jan.: 'Beyond the chicken sexer: a distributional account of expertise, excellence and agency.'

Professor Chris Winch, King's College, London
16 Feb.: 'Vocational education and broad conceptions of agency.'

Transport Studies Unit Seminar Series

FUTURE RESEARCH IN TRANSPORT

The following seminars will be given at 5 p.m. on Wednesdays in the Lecture Theatre, School of Geography and the Environment. Convener: Dr M. Givoni.

Professor David Banister
19 Jan.: 'Distance, speed and time: the fundamentals of transport geography.'

Professor John Urry, Lancaster
26 Jan.: 'Does mobility have a future?'

Professor Anthony Perl, Simon Fraser
2 Feb.: 'Understanding the paths to post-carbon mobility: research needs for anticipating transport revolutions.'

Professor Kay Axhausen, Eidgenössische Technische Hochschule (ETH), Zurich
9 Feb.: 'Translating daily life into simulation: MATSim and its possibilities.'

Professor Ole B. Jensen, Aalborg
16 Feb.: 'More than A to B—transport and mobility research as cultural explorations.'

Professor Roger Vickerman, Kent
23 Feb.: 'Myth and reality in the search for the wider benefits of transport.'

Professor Robert Cervero, Berkeley
2 Mar.: 'Mobility, place-making, and economic competitiveness.'

Professor Andrew Goetz, Denver
9 Mar.: 'Investment in transport infrastructure and economic development: recent debates in the United States.'

Refugee Studies Centre Wednesday Seminar Series: Conceptual Problems in Forced Migration

The following seminars will be given at 5 p.m. on Wednesdays, in either Seminar Room 1, Department of International Development, Oxford (RSC), or Room EBG.08 East Building, Docklands Campus, University of East London (UEL), adjacent to Cyprus Station on the DLR. Conveners: Dr Philip Marfleet, UEL, and Dr Dawn Chatty.

Dawn Chatty
19 Jan.: 'Refugees, exiles and other forced migrants in the late Ottoman Empire.' (RSC)

Nira Yuval-Davis, UEL
26 Jan.: 'Citizenship, autochthony and the question of forced migration.' (RSC)

Ruba Salih, SOAS
2 Feb.: 'Reconciling integration and return: rethinking Palestinian refugeehood.' (UEL)

Philip Marfleet, UEL

Council of the University

Corrigendum: Regulations for Departments

When Council Regulations 3 of 2004, concerning the employment of University staff, were published (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4703, 14 July 2004), bringing together legislation governing employment-related matters, a cross-reference in the Regulations for Departments was not updated.

In Council Regulations 30 of 2002 concerning departments (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4629, 10 July 2002, p. 1451, as amended on 22 February 2007), delete regulation 1 and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

'1. Each department recognised by a divisional board under section 11 of Statute VII shall have a head of department, whose appointment shall be in accordance with arrangements laid down by Council by regulation (see the Regulations for Academic and other Posts Employment of University Staff).'

General Purposes Committee of Council

Changes in Regulations

The General Purposes Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 28 January.

VAUGHAN MORGAN PRIZES

Explanatory Note

These changes, approved by the board of management of the Violet Vaughan Morgan Fund, remove the requirement for a viva voce examination and allow the prize to be awarded for the best dissertation (under the English Faculty's new syllabus); and remove the requirement for the prize to be awarded only to someone who 'shows promise of becoming a loyal citizen of the British Commonwealth'.

Text of Regulations

In Part 2 of Council Regulations 25 of 2002, concerning trusts (Statutes, 2000, p. 737, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002), delete existing § 359 and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

'§ 359. Vaughan Morgan Prizes

1. There shall be prizes in English Literature which shall be called 'The Violet Vaughan Morgan Prizes' in memory of Maud Violet Caroline Vaughan Morgan.

2. The Board of the Faculty of English Language and Literature shall be the board of management of the prizes.

3. ~~The prizes shall be open to members of the University, whether men or women, residing with the University on the date fixed for the examination. The prize shall be awarded for the best dissertation or dissertations, awarded the highest marks by the examiners for the Final Honours School in English Language and Literature in that academic year.~~

4. No person shall be eligible for a prize who, on the date of submission of the dissertation, will have exceeded nine terms from matriculation.

5. Each prize-winner shall be presented with a bronze medal having on one side a profile of Maud Violet Caroline Vaughan Morgan and on the other side an engraved statement of the origin of the prizes.

6. All expenses incurred in connection with the award of the prizes, including the bronze medals, examiners' fees, and expenses of administration, shall be met from the income of the fund.

~~7. In awarding a prize, in addition to scholastic acquirements, the character of the candidates shall be taken into consideration so far as they can be judged from a examination and also from their records at college, and a prize shall not be awarded to anyone who, in the opinion of the examiners, does not show promise of becoming a loyal citizen of the British Commonwealth. The board of management shall, subject to the conditions specified in regulations 3, 4, and 5, and 7 above, make such regulations for the award and value of the prizes as it shall deem fit.~~

8. Surplus income arising from vacancies or from any other cause may at the discretion of the board of management either be invested in augmentation of the capital of the fund or be used for the award of a postgraduate studentship for the study of English Literature.

9. Council shall have power from time to time to alter this regulation, provided always that the prizes shall always bear the title of 'The Violet Vaughan Morgan Prizes' and that the conditions specified in ~~clauses 5 and 7~~ regulation 5 above are adhered to.'

Congregation

Consultative notices

Green Templeton College: revised statutes

The Committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the amendment to the Statutes of Green Templeton College, to update the cross-references in Statute
 2.3, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7(2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendment to the Statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least twenty members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 24 January.

Hertford College: revised statutes

The Committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the amendment to the Statutes of Hertford College, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7(2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendment to the Statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least twenty members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 24 January.

The amendments relate to the following:

- (i) compliance with Charity Commission requirements relating to articulation of charitable objects and the responsibilities of trustees;
- (ii) simplification of the statutes to address core governance issues and removal of other items better treated in bye-laws or other ways;
- (iii) Statute X on employment law provisions relating to academic staff has been moved to an appendix of the statutes.
 Minimal amendments have been made to better reflect current employment law

- (iii) Statute X on employment law provisions relating to academic staff has been moved to an appendix of the statutes. Minimal amendments have been made to better reflect current employment law but without altering any of the substantive terms set out in the Statute, as agreed with the University;
- (iv) the term of office of the Principal is limited to a fixed term of five years in the first instance, which may be extended by the Governing Body. This replaces the current statute in which a Principal is appointed until his/her 67th birthday;

(v) removal of the Visitor's right to annul bye-laws or decisions of Governing Body he/she judges to be repugnant to the statutes;

(vi) removal of the requirement for the College to appoint a Chaplain or for the Chaplain to perform divine service according to the liturgy of the Church of England during term time.

The Distinguished Friend of Oxford Award

Nominations are invited for the Distinguished Friend of Oxford Award. The award is made to those who have served as volunteers for the benefit of any part of the collegiate University. This service can entail introducing Oxford to opinion formers or donors, serving Oxford on committees, either internal or external, representing the University to the wider world, being part of a long-term effort to raise funds, or undertaking a significant project for a particular part, or parts, of the collegiate University. Past recipients include Thelma Holt for her work in establishing the Cameron Mackintosh Chair and for University Drama more generally, David Hopkinson for his thirty-seven years' service on St Anne's Finance Committee and Sir David Akers-Jones for his involvement with the Hong Kong Advisory Group, the China-Oxford Scholarship Fund and his long support of Brasenose College and the wider University.

Nominees need not be alumni of the University, but must not be employees. The award recognises volunteer service, rather than financial donations.

The closing date for nominations is Thursday, 20 January. The award/s will be made by the Vice-Chancellor at a special ceremony during the Oxford Alumni Weekend (16-18 September).

The Distinguished Friend of Oxford scheme is administered by the Alumni Office. Please see our website for further details: www.alumni.ox.ac.uk/dfo. Enquiries should be addressed to the Acting Director of Alumni Relations, Caroline Cain, at caroline.cain@alumni.ox.ac.uk.

Guidance notes for the holding of outside appointments and the conduct of outside work

This Guidance Note should be read in conjunction with Council Regulations 5 of 2004.

(1) PROCEDURES FOR APPLYING FOR APPROVAL TO HOLD OUTSIDE APPOINTMENTS

(a) Applicants must complete an application form available at: <http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/ps/staff/codes/outsidecov.shtml>.

(b) Applicants whose salaries are funded from externally-funded research grants or contracts, or who are Principal Investigators or Co-Investigators on outside-sponsored projects, must adhere to the terms and conditions stipulated by or agreed with the sponsor and, if necessary, seek written approval from the sponsor¹. If you are in any doubt, please contact Research Services staff for advice on the terms and conditions of externally-funded research grants and contracts held by the University (tel. (2)70143).

(c) Applicants must obtain the approval of their direct line manager where relevant.

(d) When the necessary approvals have been obtained from the relevant line manager or sponsor (as appropriate), applicants should submit the completed form to their head of department², who will be asked to sign to confirm that he/she is content to approve the outside commitment in the context of the applicant's university duties. Heads of department who themselves wish to accept outside commitments must submit their application forms to their head of division for approval. Heads of Division should submit applications to the Vice-Chancellor.

(e) Applicants must ensure that they are familiar with the University's policy and procedure on conflict of interest (<http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/rso/integrity/#conflict>). If they have any concerns about potential conflicts implicit in their proposed arrangements they should approach the secretary of the Conflict of Interest Committee (currently Mrs Frances Barnwell, email: frances.barnwell@admin.ox.ac.uk, telephone: (2)70138).

(f) If the outside appointment is arranged via Oxford University Consulting (see section 2 below) and approval is granted for the outside appointment, the applicant will enjoy a measure of protection under the University's insurance arrangements (see <http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/finance/insurance/liability.shtml>). If the outside appointment is arranged privately the individual (or the company) will need to hold their own insurance cover.

(2) OXFORD UNIVERSITY CONSULTING

The University's wholly-owned subsidiary company, Isis Innovation Limited, has a division, Oxford University Consulting (<http://www.isis-innovation.com/consulting/index.html>), to help members of the University to market their expertise to outside bodies, to negotiate commercial terms and payment on behalf of individuals, and to manage the administration associated with consultancy. OUC offers a professional service for academics and departments throughout the University, which will identify consultancy and related opportunities with local, national and international companies and organisations. Details of this service may be obtained by telephone ((2)80829) or by email (consulting@isis.ox.ac.uk).

Members of the University choosing to use the services of OUC must still follow the internal procedures for University approval of their outside appointments as outlined in this Guidance Note; OUC will, however, assist the process on behalf of the individuals concerned. Please see the University's Consulting Policy and Procedures (<http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/rso/oxonly/consultingactivity/procedure.shtml>).

(3) CONSULTANCIES WITHIN RESEARCH GRANT APPLICATIONS AND CONTRACTS

The holding of a consultancy may be included where appropriate within research grant applications and contracts. Where consultancies are included in this way and provision is made through the payroll to pay staff for such work, the Outside Grants (OG) form should itemise, among the costs of the project, the costs of the consultancy payment (including employer's on-costs). Indirect costs should also be calculated on the total cost of the project, including the fee for the consultancy. Research Services (tel. (2)70143) will be able to advise on the most appropriate form of agreement to cover consultancies attached to research grants or contracts. Time spent on such consultancies will count towards the 30-day limit.

If a department wishes to make personal payments to a University of Oxford staff member from a research account, these payments must go through the University payroll. Departments should use the Payroll Change Form (stocks are held in each department). The form entitled 'Payment to Academic or Academic-related staff in respect of consultancy and/or services to industry' is no longer in use.

(4) SERVICES TO INDUSTRY AND OUTSIDE BODIES

Not all work for outside bodies is governed by a contract with an external sponsor under the University's research grants and contracts procedures. Some is likely to be 'service' work, i.e. the provision of a service to an external organisation which is not of academic benefit but which makes use of spare capacity in a department (most often specialist facilities/equipment) in return for payment. Such arrangements should nevertheless be covered by an agreement approved by the head of department which is drawn up in consultation with the departmental administrator and (for tax reasons) with the Finance Division. Customers must be made aware of the University's standard conditions of sale and supply (available from the Legal Services Office (LSO)), which must be incorporated into all contracts (subject to any variations required on a case-by-case basis, and drafted or endorsed by the LSO).

A department may well wish to engage Oxford University Consulting to arrange these service agreements with third parties (see <http://www.isis-innovation.com/consulting/index.html>).

Where appropriate a payment may be made through the payroll to individuals for the additional work undertaken in performing the services. It is expected that the head of department will decide on an appropriate fee to be paid to the individual based on the time spent (which again will count towards the 30-day per year limit). In such cases, where an agreement has been made with the University in respect of the service, it is not expected that a further personal consultancy agreement with the academic concerned will be necessary.

(5) FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS FOR OUTSIDE APPOINTMENTS

The University does not generally (except in the case of consultancies for which the information is requested for the annual HE-BCI survey) seek details of remuneration which applicants are to receive in return for outside commitments, but reserves the right to request to be provided with such details in certain circumstances, e.g. in the light of any potential conflict of interest with the outside commitment. Applicants wishing exceptionally to make a case to spend a total of more than 30 days in any one year on outside commitments will be required to provide details of remuneration.

(6) MONITORING AND REPORTING OF OUTSIDE APPOINTMENTS

(a) Heads of department are responsible, through their departmental administration, for keeping records of the number of days spent on outside commitments by all staff (regardless of staff group) in their departments.

(b) Departments and divisions are responsible for reporting the details of all outside commitments held by staff via the OpenDoor system by the end of September each year.

¹The Wellcome Trust's grant conditions, for example, include stringent conditions relating to the holding of consultancies and these apply equally to individuals who are in receipt of Wellcome Trust research grants, as well as to those whose salaries are paid from Wellcome Trust grants.

²Throughout this document, the term 'head of department' should be taken to include chairman of faculty board.

Continuation charge for postgraduate research students: change in regulations

Draft explanatory note

Council has decided to introduce a university continuation charge, to be paid by research students who start their programme of study in or after September 2011, and who exceed the standard period of university fee liability. Such a charge is currently levied by a significant proportion of colleges, and by many other universities. The charge will provide a contribution to the costs arising from continuing students. In parallel with the introduction of this charge, Education Committee is working with divisions to ensure that procedures to oversee the supervision and monitoring of students are effectively implemented across the University, with the aim of improving completion rates. Divisions will be required to set a minimum level of provision for bursaries to support students.

The continuation charge will be levied on a termly basis to students who are admitted in or after September 2011 to study for a DPhil or other research programme and who reach the end of the standard period of fee liability¹, until and including the term of submission. The charge will be made for the first time to certain students² in 2013–14, and to most DPhil students in 2014–15.

The details of this policy are currently being finalised, with the charge expected to be in the range of £250–£500 per term. The same rate will apply to all students (regardless of Home/EU or Overseas fee status). Bursary schemes are being developed to which students may apply for support towards these charges. The level of the charge for 2013–14 will be set in the course of 2011: further information will be published on the University website as soon as it is available, at <http://www.ox.ac.uk/feesandfunding/fees/information/>.

Draft regulation

(1) In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 1116, after l. 44, insert:

'§7 Continuation charge

A candidate admitted to graduate research study (that is, a student for the DPhil, EngD, MLitt, MSc(Res), or any other programme of study designated as a research programme) who commenced their current programme of study in or after September 2011 and who has reached the end of the period of fee liability, as defined at §6, cl. 4, and who thereafter remains registered as a graduate research student, shall pay a continuation charge for each subsequent term up to and including the term in which the thesis is submitted. Candidates whose thesis has been referred back shall pay no further composition fee or continuation charge, but shall pay the fee prescribed in §2 above when they apply for re-examination.

A student who is paying composition fees in respect of any given term shall not be liable for a continuation charge in the same term.

The continuation charge will first become payable in 2013–14, and the level of the charge for that year will be set by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee in due course.'

(2) Ibid., ll. 1 and 24, renumber §7 and §8 as §8 and §9.

¹For details of periods of fee liability, see <http://www.ox.ac.uk/feesandfunding/fees/information/maxlib/#d.en.12070>

²Mainly MScRes, MLitt, and DPhil students who have a reduced fee liability having previously completed an MPhil, BPhil or MSt in Legal Research.

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations

Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 4 February.

(A) ATTENDANCE AT COUNCIL

Explanatory Note

The following changes extend the coverage of rules governing Council attendance to ex officio members.

Text of Regulations

Council Regulations 13 of 2002 (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended on 8 May 2003, 14 and 21 January 2010, Gazette, Vol. 139, p. 1244, 11 June 2009; Vol. 140, pp. 405 and 444), delete regulations 1–2, substitute the following and renumber existing regulations 3–11 as 2–10:

~~'1. If a member of Council elected serving under the provisions of section 4 (6) or (15)–(25) of Statute VI, or co-opted under the provisions of section 6, has attended fewer meetings than eight less the number of any meetings which have been cancelled in the course of any academic year, his or her seat shall at the close of that year be declared by the Vice-Chancellor to be vacant and shall then immediately be vacated, subject to the following conditions:~~

~~(1) A person elected or co-opted to fill a casual vacancy shall only be required to attend the same proportion of meetings due to be held subsequent to the date of his or her election or co-optation as eight bears to the total number of meetings due to be held in the academic year, any fraction being reckoned to the nearest unit, and the resulting number then being reduced by the number of any meetings cancelled which were due to be held subsequent to the date of his or her election or co-optation. (a) A member shall only be required to attend the same proportion of meetings due to be held subsequent to the commencement date of his or her term as eight bears to the total number of meetings due to be held in the academic year, any fraction being reckoned to the nearest unit, and the resulting number then being reduced by the~~ number of any meetings cancelled which were due to be held subsequent to that commencement date.

(b) The applicable commencement date is:

(i) the date of election or co-optation for a person elected or co-opted to fill a casual vacancy;

(ii) the date of the approval by Congregation of the nomination for a person nominated to fill a casual vacancy;

(iii) the date of appointment to the relevant office for a person serving ex officio.

(2) If a member of Council has been dispensed from his or her prescribed university or college duties for not less than one term in any year, he or she shall be deemed to have satisfied the requirements of this regulation if he or she has attended in that year at least six meetings less the number of any meetings which have been cancelled, or in the case of a person elected or co-opted to fill a casual vacancy joining Council after the beginning of an academic year, if he or she has attended such lesser number as shall have been calculated in proportion to six by the method (with any necessary substitutions) prescribed under paragraph (1) above.

(3) A member of Council whose minimum attendance requirement has not been reduced under paragraph (2) above may, at the discretion of the Vice-Chancellor, be deemed to have satisfied the requirements of this regulation if in any year he or she has attended, but for good reason has been prevented from attending more than, six meetings less the number of any meetings which have been cancelled, or in the case of a person elected or co-opted to fill a casual vacancy joining Council after the beginning of an academic year, if he or she has attended, but for good reason has been prevented from attending more than, such lesser number as shall have been calculated in proportion to six by the method (with any necessary substitutions) prescribed under paragraph (1) above.

~~2. If a member of Council nominated under the provisions of section 4 (7)–(10) of Statute VI has attended fewer meetings than eight less the number of any meetings~~

~~which have been cancelled in the course of any academic year, his or her seat shall at the close of that year be declared by the Vice-Chancellor to be vacant and shall then immediately be vacated, subject to the following conditions:~~

~~(1) A person nominated to fill a casual vacancy shall only be required to attend the same proportion of meetings due to be held subsequent to the date of the approval by Congregation of his or her nomination as eight bears to the total number of meetings due to be held in the academic year, any fraction being reckoned to the nearest unit, and the resulting number then being reduced by the number of any meetings cancelled which were due to be held subsequent to the date of such approval.~~

~~(2) Such a member may, at the discretion of the Vice-Chancellor, be deemed to have satisfied the requirements of this regulation if in any year he or she has attended, but for good reason has been prevented from attending more than, six meetings less the number of any meetings which have been cancelled, or in the case of a person nominated to fill a casual vacancy has attended, but for good reason has been prevented from attending more than, such lesser number as shall have been calculated in proportion to six by the method (with any necessary substitutions) prescribed under paragraph (1) above.~~

(B) SERVICE ON COMMITTEES

Explanatory Note

The following changes (i) clarify the operation of provisions concerning membership of committees and Council as they apply to the Proctors and Assessor; and (ii) enable the Chairman of the Personnel Committee to exercise discretion in connection with appointments to the General Purposes Committee after retirement from a university or college post.

Text of Regulations

1 In Council Regulations 14 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4634, 16 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 225, as amended on 21 October 2004 and 30 November 2006, Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 245; Vol. 137, p. 458) delete regulation 6 and substitute (inserted text underlined, deleted text struck through):

'6. Existing membership of all committees including Council shall terminate automatically on taking office as Proctor or Assessor. 6-(1) A person who becomes Proctor or Assessor shall (unless he or she resigns) remain a member of all the committees of which he or she was formerly a member, and his or her place on each of those committees shall remain vacant until he or she resumes it on laying down office, or until his or her normal period of office as a member of the committee comes to an end, whichever is the earlier.'

(2) A Proctor or Assessor whose normal period of office on a committee comes to an end during his or her tenure of the Proctorship or Assessorship may, subject to any restriction on eligibility, be reappointed or re-elected.'

2 Ibid., delete regulation 2 and substitute:

'2. (1) No person appointed, elected, or serving as a member of a committee while holding any academic post of the University or any other of the university or college posts specified in section 3 (6)-(9) of Statute IV shall continue to serve on that committee after having retired from that post (or, in the case of a person retiring at different dates from those university and college posts previously held by him or her, after the date of the later of those retirements), unless the General Purposes Committee of Council or, in cases falling within the Personnel Committee's delegated authority or cases concerning the membership of the General Purposes Committee, the Chairman of the Personnel Committee, shall otherwise determine in an individual case.

(2) No person who has previously retired from any of the university or college posts specified in section 3 (6)-(9) of Statute IV, and who does not continue to hold another such post, shall be appointed or elected a member of a committee, unless the General Purposes Committee of Council or, in cases falling within the Personnel Committee's delegated authority or cases concerning the membership of the General Purposes Committee, the Chairman of the Personnel Committee, shall otherwise determine in an individual case.

(3) No other person appointed, elected, or serving as a member of a committee while not holding such a university or college post shall continue to serve on that committee, and no such person shall be appointed or elected a member of a committee, after the 30 September immediately preceding his or her 66th birthday, unless the General

Purposes Committee of Council or, in cases falling within the Personnel Committee's delegated authority or cases concerning the membership of the General Purposes Committee, the Chairman of the Personnel Committee, shall otherwise determine in an individual case.'

(C) COLLEGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Explanatory Note

The following changes, made on the recommendation of the College Contributions Committee after consultation with the Oxford colleges, (i) confirm that the tax regime to be applied to the accounts for the 2009/10 financial year, under which contributions will be payable in March 2011, will be the same as for the previous year; and (ii) raise the tax threshold from £30m to £35m in respect of the accounts for 2010/11 and the contributions payable in March 2012. The change to the tax threshold is being made to reflect inflation. The College Contributions Committee will continue to review taxation annually but has undertaken to conduct a review of the tax regime in 2013, for report to Council in January 2014.

Text of Regulations

1 In Council Regulations 1 of 2009 concerning college contributions (Gazette, Vol. 139, 23 April 2009, p. 904, as amended on 21 January 2010, Vol. 140, p. 444), delete regulation 3(4) and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text struck through):

'(4) The bands and rates for the contributions payable in 2009/10 ~~2009/10~~ 2010/11 based on the 2008/9 ~~2009/10~~ accounts shall be as follows:

On the first £30m of taxable assets	NIL
On the next £3m	0.10 per cent
On the next £3m	0.20 per cent
On the next £3m	0.30 per cent
On taxable assets over £39m	0.36 per cent

At the same time as submitting its annual financial statements under section 8, each college shall also submit a statement in the form set out in the Schedule to these regulations.'

2 The change in regulations in paragraph 1 above shall have immediate effect.

3 Ibid., delete regulation 3(4) and substitute (new text underlined):

'(4) The bands and rates for the contributions payable in 2011/12 based on the 2010/11 accounts shall be as follows:

On the first £35m of taxable assets	NIL
On the next £3m	0.10 per cent
On the next £3m	0.20 per cent
On the next £3m	0.30 per cent
On taxable assets over £39m	0.36 per cent

At the same time as submitting its annual financial statements under section 8, each college shall also submit a statement in the form set out in the Schedule to these regulations.'

4 The change in regulations in paragraph 3 above shall come into effect on 1 January 2012.

(D) COMMITTEE FOR THE COUNCIL DEPARTMENTS

Explanatory Note

Following rationalisation of the departments within the Council Departments sector over a number of years, and developments in the University's organisational structure and funding mechanisms, it has been agreed that the Council Departments sector is no longer required. This change therefore disbands the Committee for the Council Departments, the primary purpose of which was to distribute funding to the Council Departments and to monitor the application of that funding.

Text of Regulations

In Council Regulations 15 of 2002, concerning committees reporting directly to Council (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), delete existing regulations 3.47-3.49, concerning the Committee for the Council Departments and renumber existing regulations 3.50-3.142 as 3.47-3.139.

(E) JOINT COMMITTEE WITH STUDENT MEMBERS

Explanatory Note

Following changes to the membership of the Joint Committee and recent developments in the status of OUSU, these changes amend the composition and terms of reference of the Joint Committee of Council with Student Members, and establish it as a subcommittee of the Education Committee.

Text of Regulations

1 In Council Regulations 15 of 2002, concerning committees reporting directly to Council (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), delete existing regulations 3.130-3.133, concerning the Joint Committee with Student Members, and substitute:

'Joint Subcommittee of the Education Committee with Student Members'

3.130. The Joint Subcommittee with Student Members shall be a subcommittee of the Education Committee.

3.131. The Joint Subcommittee with Student Members shall consist of:

(1) a chairman (who shall be the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Education) or a member of Education Committee appointed by the Pro-Vice-Chancellor);

(2) one of the Proctors or the Assessor as may be agreed between them;

(3)–(5) three members of Congregation appointed by Education Committee, of whom at least two shall be members of Education Committee;

(6), (7) two members appointed by the Conference of Colleges;

(8) the President of the Oxford University Student Union;

(9) the Vice-President (Graduates) of the Oxford University Student Union;

(10) the Vice-President (Access and Academic Affairs) of the Oxford University Student Union;

(11) one student member appointed by the Executive of the Oxford University Student Union from among their own number;

(12), (13) two student members elected by the Council of the Oxford University Student Union, of whom one shall be a student member who is a graduate.

3.132. With the approval of the Education Committee on each occasion, the subcommittee may co-opt up to two additional senior members who shall hold office for one year and shall be eligible to serve for a total period of four years.

3.133. The subcommittee shall receive on behalf of Council (through its Education Committee) all reports, budget estimates, constitutional amendments, and other business under Part A of Statute XIII and shall make recommendations to Council, save that only those members appointed under regulation 3.131 (1)–(7) and 3.132 above may vote on business under Part A of Statute XIII.

3.134. The subcommittee shall receive all proposed variations to the terms of the University's annual grant to OUSU and make recommendations to the Budget Subcommittee.

3.135. The subcommittee shall consider and advise Council through its Education

Committee on any University matter which affects student members other than matters which fall within the scope of the joint committees of any of the University bodies set up under Statute VII or of the Curators of the University Libraries, or of the Rules Committee.

3.136. The subcommittee shall have power to consider matters which fall within the terms of reference of any joint committee other than those specified in regulation 3.135 above or of any committee which contains representatives of student members, but only if they have first been considered by that committee.'

2 Ibid., renumber existing regulations 3.134–42 as 3.137–45.

3 In Council Regulations 13 of 2002, concerning Council (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, amended on 8 May 2003, Gazette, Vol. 139, p. 1244, 11 June 2009, 14 January 2010 and 21 January 2010) in regulation 10 delete 'Joint Committee of Council with Student Members' and insert 'Joint Subcommittee of the Education Committee with Student Members'.

Congregation

8 February 2 p.m.

Undergraduate Funding and Support from 2012/13: Topic for Discussion

A Congregation Discussion will be held at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, 8 February, 2011 in the Sheldonian Theatre. The topic will be undergraduate funding and support (including the level of the Home/EU undergraduate fee) from 2012/13 in the context of the new financial arrangements for higher education approved by Parliament in December 2010 (with further legislative decisions by Parliament to follow). Views expressed at the Discussion will be taken into account by Council when it deliberates on these matters at its meeting in week 9 (14 March). Factual information to facilitate the Discussion will be provided on the Congregation website at www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting. In accordance with the regulation governing topics for discussion, no vote will be taken but Council will be required to give consideration to the remarks made.

As the University's Access Agreement for 2012/13 must be submitted to the Office of Fair Access (OFFA) by 31 March 2011, the timetable within which to decide upon a fee level and the associated student support and access arrangements is tight. Notwithstanding this limitation, Council agreed at its meeting on 17 January 2011 that all those within the collegiate University wishing to contribute to the deliberations should be given an opportunity to do so, and that a Congregation Discussion would be central to this consultation process.

After the Congregation Discussion, the issues will be developed through College and Divisional structures. In terms of the fee level, the Conference of Colleges, Divisional Boards, Planning and Resource Allocation Committee (PRAC) and Education Committee will reflect on the issues in the second half of Hilary term. PRAC will then synthesise the views expressed in each of these fora and will make recommendations for decision by Council at its meeting in week 9 (14 March); and the necessary regulation will be published in the Gazette on 17 March 2011. The Education Committee will undertake a similar exercise in respect of student financial support and widening access arrangements and will draft the terms of Oxford's Access Agreement, also for approval by Council in week 9, and for submission to OFFA by 31 March 2011.

Those wishing to speak in the Discussion will be expected to limit their contributions to five minutes. As the Discussion will close at 4.30 p.m., it may not be possible to call all those who wish to speak. If you wish to speak in the Discussion, you are asked to indicate this intention in advance by emailing congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk. It would be helpful if you also explain briefly (in no more than twenty-five words) what issues you wish to cover. Names of those who have indicated a wish to speak, together with the issues they wish to raise, will be published on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting) as they are received. This sharing of information may be of use both to other speakers and to those considering attending; it will also be used to provide some logical structure to the order in which speakers are called. Speakers are asked to provide their information as soon as possible, and by noon on Friday, 4 February, at the latest, if they wish to be scheduled to speak. If time permits, those who have not indicated in advance an intention to speak will still be free to do so. The Vice-Chancellor will also invite nominated representatives of the Oxford University Student Union (OUSU) to speak.

It is intended that a verbatim transcript of the Discussion will be published in the Gazette on 17 February and, as soon as practicable after the Discussion, on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting). It is also intended to make a downloadable recording available on the same site. As a result of time constraints, it will not be possible to check the verbatim report of the proceedings with individual speakers before publication. Speakers are therefore asked to provide their written texts, if available, to Mrs Ceri Benton, Council Secretariat, on the day of the Discussion, or to email them to her (congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk) by 5 p.m. on 9 February.

Attendance at the Discussion is open to members of Congregation and to those nominated representatives of OUSU confirmed by the Vice-Chancellor as speaking at the Discussion. Admittance to the Theatre will be on the production of valid University card and will be on a first-come, first-served basis (places will be reserved for scheduled speakers). The doors of the Sheldonian Theatre will open at 1.30 p.m.; there will be a live audio broadcast of the meeting in the Cecil Jackson Room (in the basement of the Sheldonian Theatre) for attendees who do not gain admittance to the main Theatre (subject to space). The wearing of gowns is optional on this occasion.

Note on procedures in Congregation

¶ Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

Notices

Consultative notices

Keble: revised statutes

The Committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the revised Statutes of Keble College, approved by the Governing Body at meetings on 22 June and 15 December 2010, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7(2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendments to the Statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least twenty members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 31 January.

The effects of the amendments are: to make minor alterations to the day-to-day administration of the College and to ensure compliance with changes relating to the responsibilities of trustees of registered charities.

General notices

Joint Division/Education Committee Review of the Department of Education

Terms of Reference for the Review

1 To review the quality of academic activities in the department, by reference to:

- international standards of excellence;
- action taken since the last review of the faculty/department;
- planning statements at faculty/department and divisional level, and in the context of the University's mission statement and corporate plan.

In particular:

- (a) the quality of the research of the faculty/department, including its participation in inter-departmental, inter-divisional and inter-disciplinary activities, its research profile and strategy, and future challenges and opportunities;
- (b) the quality of graduate programmes and their delivery and related issues, including:

- access and admissions
- curriculum design and programme structure
- teaching, learning and assessment
- the relationship between teaching and research
- academic and pastoral support and guidance
- the provision and use of learning resources (including staff resources)
- specific arrangements for the pursuit of graduate studies (including research degrees and research training and provision for part-time study)
- relationships with colleges
- quality assurance mechanisms;

(c) the organisation of the faculty/department, its management structures and the relationship between the faculty/department and the Division, including such matters as:

- strategic planning (including relationship to the divisional five-year plans and the University's Corporate Plan)
- academic and non-academic staff planning and recruitment
- student number planning
- terms of appointment for academic staff, including career development and equal opportunities issues
- accommodation and future space needs
- fundraising;

(d) the relationship (structural and operational) between units within the faculty/department, and between the faculty/department and cognate subject areas and colleges to which it is linked in teaching and research.

2 To consider the current and long-term financial position of, and funding arrangements for, the faculty/department, and its financial strategy.

The review committee would welcome written comments on matters falling within its terms of reference. These should be sent to the secretary of the review committee, c/o Helen Passey (helen.passey@socsci.ox.ac.uk), Social Sciences Division, Hayes House, 75 George Street, Oxford OX1 2BQ, by Monday, 21 February.

HUMANITIES DIVISIONAL BOARD

Vacancy: One

Dr S.L. Mapstone, St Hilda's MT 2011

One member of Congregation elected by Congregation elected by and from among the members of the Faculty of English Language and Literature.

For further information regarding the board, please contact the Secretary (marie.drummond@humanities.ox.ac.uk).

General notes:

Where it is specified in the above list that the nominee must be from among certain persons 'working in' a department or other institution, both the nominee and the nominators must be persons so working at the time of the election.

Nominations in writing for the election on 10 March, by four members of Congregation other than the candidate, will be received by the Elections Office, at the University Offices, Wellington Square, up to 4 p.m. on Thursday, 10 February 2011.

Council has decided that nominations should show for each signatory the name and college or department in block capitals. Any names which are not so shown may not be published.

At least one nomination in respect of each candidate must be made on an official nomination form.

Copies of the form are available from the 'Forms' section of the Elections Office website.

Candidates are invited to include with their nomination forms, a written statement of no more than 250 words, setting out his or her reasons for standing and qualifications for the office being sought. In the event of contested election to the vacancies in question, these statements will be available online and published in the Gazette dated 24 February. Voters may wish to wait until they have read these notes before returning their ballot papers.

Ballot papers will be sent out to members of Congregation as soon as possible after the closing date for nominations. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 10 March 2011.

For further information about the committee or body concerned, please contact the individual Secretary, either via the email links above, or as listed in the University Calendar, 2010–11. For further information concerning these, or other, elections by Congregation, please contact the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

Changes in Regulations

The Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 11 February.

HARMSWORTH PROFESSOR OF AMERICAN HISTORY

Explanatory Note

The following change amends the composition of the electoral board of the Harmsworth Professor of American History, by increasing the number of members appointed by the History Faculty from one to two, to reflect the academic importance of this visiting professorship to the Faculty. It also replaces reference to 'decrees' with reference to 'regulations' and removes reference to the General Board.

Text of Regulations

In Sect. III of Council Regulations 24 of 2002, concerning individual professorships (Statutes, 2000, p. 432, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1461), in § 119 delete existing regulations 4 and 5 and substitute:

'4. The professor shall be elected by an electoral board consisting of:

(1) the Chancellor of the University of Oxford (provided always that the Chancellor may appoint the Vice-Chancellor to act for him or her);

(2) the Ambassador from the United States of America to the Court of St James at the time of election, or a deputy appointed by the Ambassador to act from time to time;

(3) a person appointed by Council;

(4) Viscount Rothermere for his life, and thereafter each successive holder of the Viscounty or an elector appointed by him as his representative at the election; but if the Viscounty should have become extinct or the holder thereof be a minor or otherwise disqualified from acting as an elector or appointing a representative, then the Lord Chief Justice of England shall be the fourth elector;

(5), (6) two persons appointed by the governing body of the college to which the professorship shall be for the time being allocated by Council under any regulation in that behalf;

(7), (8) two persons appointed by the Board of the Faculty of History.

5. The professor shall be subject to the General Provisions of the regulations concerning the duties of professors and to those Particular Provisions of the same regulations as to residence which are applicable to this chair. He or she shall give not less than thirty-six lectures or classes in the year, provided that this obligation may be reduced in exceptional circumstances with the approval of the faculty board concerned.'

Congregation

Congregation

8 February 2 p.m.

Undergraduate Funding and Support from 2012/13: Topic for Discussion

A Congregation Discussion will be held at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, 8 February, 2011 in the Sheldonian Theatre. The topic will be undergraduate funding and support (including the level of the Home/EU undergraduate fee) from 2012/13 in the context of the new financial arrangements for higher education approved by Parliament in December 2010 (with further legislative decisions by Parliament to follow). Views expressed at the Discussion will be taken into account by Council when it deliberates on these matters at its meeting in week 9 (14 March). Factual information to facilitate the Discussion will be provided on the Congregation website at www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting. In accordance with the regulation governing topics for discussion, no vote will be taken but Council will be required to give consideration to the remarks made.

As the University's Access Agreement for 2012/13 must be submitted to the Office of Fair Access (OFFA) by 31 March 2011, the timetable within which to decide upon a fee level and the associated student support and access arrangements is tight. Notwithstanding this limitation, Council agreed at its meeting on 17 January 2011 that all those within the collegiate University wishing to contribute to the deliberations should be given an opportunity to do so, and that a Congregation Discussion would be central to this consultation process.

After the Congregation Discussion, the issues will be developed through College and Divisional structures. In terms of the fee level, the Conference of Colleges, Divisional Boards, Planning and Resource Allocation Committee (PRAC) and Education Committee will reflect on the issues in the second half of Hilary term. PRAC will then synthesise the views expressed in each of these fora and will make recommendations for decision by Council at its meeting in week 9 (14 March); and the necessary regulation will be published in the Gazette on 17 March 2011. The Education Committee will undertake a similar exercise in respect of student financial support and widening access arrangements and will draft the terms of Oxford's Access Agreement, also for approval by Council in week 9, and for submission to OFFA by 31 March 2011.

Those wishing to speak in the Discussion will be expected to limit their contributions to five minutes. As the Discussion will close at 4.30 p.m., it may not be possible to call all those who wish to speak. If you wish to speak in the Discussion, you are asked to indicate this intention in advance by emailing congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk. It would be helpful if you also explain briefly (in no more than twenty-five words) what issues you wish to cover. Names of those who have indicated a wish to speak, together with the issues they wish to raise, will be published on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting) as they are received. This sharing of information may be of use both to other speakers and to those considering attending; it will also be used to provide some logical structure to the order in which speakers are called. Speakers are asked to provide their information as soon as possible, and by noon on Friday, 4 February, at the latest, if they wish to be scheduled to speak. If time permits, those who have not indicated in advance an intention to speak will still be free to do so. The Vice-Chancellor will also invite nominated representatives of the Oxford University Student Union (OUSU) to speak.

It is intended that a verbatim transcript of the Discussion will be published in the Gazette on 17 February and, as soon as practicable after the Discussion, on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting). It is also intended to make a downloadable recording available on the same site. As a result of time constraints, it will not be possible to check the verbatim report of the proceedings with individual speakers before publication. Speakers are therefore asked to provide their written texts, if available, to Mrs Ceri Benton, Council Secretariat, on the day of the Discussion, or to email them to her (congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk) by 5 p.m. on 9 February.

Attendance at the Discussion is open to members of Congregation and to those nominated representatives of OUSU confirmed by the Vice-Chancellor as speaking at the Discussion. Admittance to the Theatre will be on the production of valid University card and will be on a first-come, first-served basis (places will be reserved for scheduled speakers). The doors of the Sheldonian Theatre will open at 1.30 p.m.; there will be a live audio broadcast of the meeting in the Cecil Jackson Room (in the basement of the Sheldonian Theatre) for attendees who do not gain admittance to the main Theatre (subject to space). The wearing of gowns is optional on this occasion.

Note on procedures in Congregation

¶ Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

Notices

General notices

University of Oxford Bicycle Loan Scheme

The University is now offering staff interest-free loans, to the value of the employee's monthly net pay (or a maximum of £1,000, whichever is the lower), to assist with the purchase of a bicycle and associated safety equipment for personal use. For full details please see the website: <http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/estates/travel/sssbike.shtml>.

Green Templeton College

Following the formation of Green Templeton College the University has applied to the Charity Commission for a scheme to govern the trust property involved. The Charity Commission's notice concerning the proposed Scheme is reprinted below.

CHARITY COMMISSION

Notice CSD-1161A

Charity: Trust Property in connection with Green College Oxford and the Morris Trust

Reference: 4047411/C-2759686-VJNJ

A Scheme is a legal document made by the Charity Commission. It is proposed to make a Scheme for these charities which will amalgamate them and enable the new charity to support Green Templeton College within the University of Oxford.

A copy of the draft Scheme can be seen at: University of Oxford, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford, OX1 2JD or by visiting our website at: www.charitycommission.gov.uk, or a copy can be obtained by sending a stamped addressed envelope to: Charity Commission Direct, PO Box 1227, Liverpool, L69 3UG quoting the above reference number.

Comments or representations on these proposals can be made to the Charity Commission within one month from the date of this notice, either by letter or by completing the form on our website.

Mansfield College: Visiting Fellowship 2011–2012

Mansfield College

VISITING FELLOWSHIP 2011–2012

The College Governing Body proposes to elect a Visiting Fellow for all or part of the academic year 2011–2012. The purpose of the Fellowship, which is non-stipendiary, is to provide a congenial base for visiting scholars, either from abroad or from the UK, to conduct research in Oxford, to have access to Oxford libraries, and to use the College as a means of establishing contact with other scholars in the College and the University. Applications from scholars whose interests lie within the range of subjects represented in the Senior Common Room will be particularly welcome.

Visiting Fellows will be full members of the Senior Common Room. The Fellowship covers the Common Room subscription and entitlement to free lunches and dinners. The College is unable to provide study space or residential accommodation.

Application forms are available on the College website (<http://www.mansfield.ox.ac.uk/about/vacancies.html>) or may be obtained from the Academic Administrator, Mansfield College, Oxford, OX1 3TF (tel.: 01865 270982, email: helen.etty@mansfield.ox.ac.uk). Five copies of the application form and curriculum vitae should be returned by Friday, 11 March 2011.

Congregation

Congregation

8 February 2 p.m.

Undergraduate Funding and Support from 2012/13: Topic for Discussion

A Congregation Discussion will be held at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, 8 February 2011 in the Sheldonian Theatre. The topic will be undergraduate funding and support (including the level of the Home/EU undergraduate fee) from 2012/13 in the context of the new financial arrangements for higher education approved by Parliament in December 2010 (with further legislative decisions by Parliament to follow). Views expressed at the Discussion will be taken into account by Council when it deliberates on these matters at its meeting in week 9 (14 March). Factual information to facilitate the Discussion will be provided on the Congregation website at www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting. In accordance with the regulation governing topics for discussion, no vote will be taken but Council will be required to give consideration to the remarks made.

As the University's Access Agreement for 2012/13 must be submitted to the Office of Fair Access (OFFA) by 31 March 2011, the timetable within which to decide upon a fee level and the associated student support and access arrangements is tight. Notwithstanding this limitation, Council agreed at its meeting on 17 January 2011 that all those within the collegiate University wishing to contribute to the deliberations should be given an opportunity to do so, and that a Congregation Discussion would be central to this consultation process.

After the Congregation Discussion, the issues will be developed through College and Divisional structures. In terms of the fee level, the Conference of Colleges, Divisional Boards, Planning and Resource Allocation Committee (PRAC) and Education Committee will reflect on the issues in the second half of Hilary term. PRAC will then synthesise the views expressed in each of these fora and will make recommendations for decision by Council at its meeting in week 9 (14 March); and the necessary regulation will be published in the Gazette on 17 March 2011. The Education Committee will undertake a similar exercise in respect of student financial support and widening access arrangements and will draft the terms of Oxford's Access Agreement, also for approval by Council in week 9, and for submission to OFFA by 31 March 2011.

Those wishing to speak in the Discussion will be expected to limit their contributions to five minutes. As the Discussion will close at 4.30 p.m., it may not be possible to call all those who wish to speak. If you wish to speak in the Discussion, you are asked to indicate this intention in advance by emailing congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk. It would be helpful if you also explain briefly (in no more than twenty-five words) what issues you wish to cover. Names of those who have indicated a wish to speak, together with the issues they wish to raise, will be published on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting) as they are received. This sharing of information may be of use both to other speakers and to those considering attending; it will also be used to provide some logical structure to the order in which speakers are called. Speakers are asked to provide their information as soon as possible, and by noon on Friday, 4 February, at the latest, if they wish to be scheduled to speak. If time permits, those who have not indicated in advance an intention to speak will still be free to do so. The Vice-Chancellor will also invite nominated representatives of the Oxford University Student Union (OUSU) to speak.

It is intended that a verbatim transcript of the Discussion will be published in the Gazette on 17 February and, as soon as practicable after the Discussion, on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting). It is also intended to make a downloadable recording available on the same site. As a result of time constraints, it will not be possible to check the verbatim report of the proceedings with individual speakers before publication. Speakers are therefore asked to provide their written texts, if available, to Mrs Ceri Benton, Council Secretariat, on the day of the Discussion, or to email them to her (congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk) by 5 p.m. on 9 February.

Attendance at the Discussion is open to members of Congregation and to those nominated representatives of OUSU confirmed by the Vice-Chancellor as speaking at the Discussion. Admittance to the Theatre will be on the production of a valid University card and will be on a first-come, first-served basis (places will be reserved for scheduled speakers). The doors of the Sheldonian Theatre will open at 1.30 p.m.; there will be a live audio broadcast of the meeting in the Cecil Jackson Room (in the basement of the Sheldonian Theatre) for attendees who do not gain admittance to the main Theatre (subject to space). The wearing of gowns is optional on this occasion.

Congregation 22 February 2 p.m.

¶ Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 14 February, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose one or more of the legislative proposals below, or to speak or ask a question concerning the Annual Review of the University (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the legislative proposals shall be carried and the Annual Review shall be declared presented, and the meeting may be cancelled.

1 Voting on Legislative Proposal: quorum of Council and committees of Council

Explanatory Note

The following Legislative Proposal, submitted by Council under Part 2 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 161, as amended on 12 October 2004, 7 March 2006 and 14 October 2008 (Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; Vol. 137, p. 669; Vol. 139, pp. 4–8), proposes the establishment of a quorum requirement for Council, in accordance with the unanimous recommendation made by the Audit and Scrutiny Committee in its report to Council (the ‘Governance Report’), prepared in response to eight questions posed by HEFCE (Gazette, Vol. 139, p. 551, 29 January 2009, and published online at www.ox.ac.uk/governance, recommendation 3.8, p. 69). Recognising that the quorum rules were likely to operate infrequently, Council has agreed that the quorum rules should be kept as simple as possible. The corresponding changes in regulations also introduce a quorum requirement for committees of Council.

WHEREAS it is expedient to establish a quorum requirement for Council, NOW THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD, in exercise of the powers in that behalf conferred upon it by the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923, and of all other powers enabling it, ENACTS, subject to the approval of Her Majesty in Council, AS FOLLOWS.

1. In Statute VI concerning Council (Supplement (1) to the Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, as amended), insert new section 19 below and renumber existing sections 19–23 as 20–24:

‘19. (1) No business shall be transacted at any meeting of Council unless a quorum is present.

(2) Council shall lay down by regulation the definition of, and the application of rules governing, its quorum.’

2. This statute shall be effective from the date on which it is approved by Her Majesty in Council.

Regulations to be made by Council if the Statute is approved by Her Majesty in Council

1. In Council Regulations 13 of 2002 (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended on 8 May 2003, 14 and 21 January 2010, Gazette, Vol. 139, p. 1244, 11 June 2009; Vol. 140, pp. 405 and 444), insert the heading and new regulations 1–2 below and renumber existing regulations 1–11 as 3–13:

‘Quorum

1. (1) In accordance with section 19 of Statute VI, no business shall be transacted at any meeting of Council unless a quorum is present.

(2) A quorum is one third plus one of those members eligible to vote upon Council business (rounded to the nearest integer).

(3) A member who is participating in a meeting by telephone, video-conference or any other means of communication which permits all members simultaneously to hear one another, shall be considered present and therefore shall count towards the quorum.

2. If:

(1) a quorum is not present within half an hour from the time appointed for the meeting; or

(2) during a meeting a quorum ceases to be present

the business or remaining business of that meeting shall be deferred to another meeting, whether already scheduled or to be scheduled, or shall be dealt with by the Vice-Chancellor acting under delegated authority in accordance with Council’s Standing Orders.’

2. In Part 1 of Council Regulations 15 of 2002 concerning committees reporting directly to Council or one of its main committees (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), after existing regulation 1.5 insert new regulations 1.6–1.7 as follows:

‘1.6. (1) No business shall be transacted at any meeting of a committee reporting directly to Council or one of its main committees unless a quorum is present.

(2) In the absence of provision in these regulations for a larger quorum, a quorum is one third of those members eligible to vote upon the business of the committee in question (rounded to the nearest integer).

(3) A member who is participating in a meeting by telephone, video-conference or any other means of communication which permits all members simultaneously to hear one another, shall be considered present and therefore shall count towards the quorum.

1.7. If:

(1) a quorum is not present within half an hour from the time appointed for the meeting; or

(2) during a meeting a quorum ceases to be present

the business or remaining business of that meeting shall be deferred to another meeting, whether already scheduled or to be scheduled, or shall be dealt with by the chairman acting under delegated authority in accordance with the committee’s standing orders.’

3. Ibid., in Part 3 concerning the Finance Committee, after existing regulation 3.60 insert new 3.61 below:

‘3.61. Regulations 1.6 and 1.7 in Part 1 apply to this committee except that the quorum is one third plus one of those members eligible to vote upon the business of the committee (rounded to the nearest integer).’

4. Ibid., in Part 3 concerning the Socially Responsible Investment Review Committee, after existing regulation 3.109 insert new 3.110 below:

‘3.110. Regulations 1.6 and 1.7 in Part 1 apply to this committee except that the quorum is one third plus one of those members eligible to vote upon the business of the committee (rounded to the nearest integer).’

5. Ibid., in Part 3 concerning the Joint Committee with Student Members, after existing regulation 3.131 insert new 3.132 below:

'3.132. Regulations 1.6 and 1.7 in Part 1 apply to this committee except that the quorum is one third plus one of those members eligible to vote upon the business of the committee (rounded to the nearest integer).'

6. Ibid., renumber existing regulations 3.61–3.142.

2 Voting on Legislative Proposal: removal of Council members

Explanatory Note

The following Legislative Proposal, submitted by Council under Part 2 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 161, as amended on 12 October 2004, 7 March 2006 and 14 October 2008 (Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; Vol. 137, p. 669; Vol. 139, pp. 4–8), proposes that Council is given power to remove a member of Council, in accordance with the unanimous recommendation made by the Audit and Scrutiny Committee in the Governance Report. However, Council has decided that the power to remove a member should also be applicable to ex officio members, as an individual might be removed from Council membership for reasons that would not necessarily cause his or her removal from office.

For the avoidance of doubt, the amendments also transpose to Statute VI provisions concerning membership of committees that are currently in Council Regulations 14 of 2002 but are equally applicable to Council.

A tracked changes version of Statute VI is available online (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/council/C10191tracked.pdf).

WHEREAS it is expedient to give Council power to remove members of Council, NOW THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD, in exercise of the powers in that behalf conferred upon it by the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923, and of all other powers enabling it, ENACTS, subject to the approval of Her Majesty in Council, AS FOLLOWS.

1. In section 4 of Statute VI concerning Council (Supplement (1) to the Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, amended with effect from 8 May 2003, 7 February 2007, 1 October 2008, 16 December 2008, 8 April 2009 and 10 February 2010 (Gazette, Vol. 133, p. 1335, 29 May 2003; Vol. 137, p. 788, 22 February 2007; Vol. 138, p. 991–2, 1 May 2008; Vol. 139, p. 458, 11 December 2008,

p. 932, 23 April 2009; Vol. 140, p. 748, 18 March 2010), delete 'sections 5 and 8 of this statute' and substitute 'sections 5 and 8–12 of this statute'.

2. Ibid., delete sections 6–10 and substitute:

'6. Council may, but is not obliged to, co-opt up to three members of Congregation as additional members of Council.

7. The Vice-Chancellor, or, in his or her absence, a member of Council deputed by the Vice-Chancellor, shall take the chair at all meetings of Council and have a second or casting vote in the event of equality of voting.

8. (1) Elected or nominated members of Council Members of Council elected under section 4 (15)–(25) or appointed as an external member under section 4 (7)–(10) above shall serve for a period of four years and shall be eligible to serve for a second consecutive period of four years.

(2) The member of Council elected under section 4 (6) shall serve for such period as may be determined under the regulations of the Conference of Colleges.

(3) Members of Council co-opted under section 6 may serve for a period of up to four years and shall be eligible to serve for a second consecutive period of up to four years.

(4) A member who has served two consecutive periods of four years under sub-sections (1) or (2) above shall not be eligible to serve as an elected nominated or co-opted member of Council earlier than four years after the end of his or her period of service.

(25) Casual vacancies Vacancies caused other than by expiry of term as a member shall be filled for the remaining period of office of the member replaced in the same manner as that member took up office except on termination of Council membership under section 9 (1) of an ex officio member serving under section 4 (1)–(5) or (11)–(14), when the vacancy shall be filled in accordance with section 10.

(36) A person who is elected or nominated to fill a casual vacancy under sub-section (2) above shall be eligible to serve as an elected or nominated external member of Council after the expiry of the period referred to in sub-section (2) above for a period of four years and shall be eligible to serve for a second consecutive period of four years.

(4) Co-opted members of Council may serve for a period of up to four years and shall be eligible to serve for a second consecutive period of up to four years:

(5) A member who has served two consecutive periods of four years under this section shall not be eligible to serve as an elected nominated or co-opted member of Council earlier than four years after the end of his or her period of service.

(6) This section does not apply to the members of Council referred to in section 4 (1)–(5) or (11)–(14) above.

9. (1) If an elected member of Council ceases to be a member of Congregation, his or her membership of Council shall end immediately.

(2) If a nominated member, having been appointed under the provisions of section 4 (7)–(10) of this statute, becomes the resident holder of a teaching, research, or administrative post in the University or in any college, society, or Permanent Private Hall, his or her membership of Council shall end immediately.

10. Council may determine by regulation that if an elected, nominated, or co-opted member of Council has attended fewer than a prescribed number of meetings in any academic year, his or her membership of Council shall end at the close of that year.

9. (1) Membership of Council shall terminate:

(a) automatically on disqualification from acting as a Trustee by virtue of section 72 of the Charities Act 1993 or any statutory re-enactment or modification of that provision;

(b) for good cause, defined as behaviour incompatible with the member's duties as a Trustee of the University;

(c) automatically at the close of an academic year for absence without permission from a prescribed number of meetings in that year, as determined by regulation;

(d) automatically on a member elected under section 4 (15)–(25) ceasing to be a member of Congregation;

(e) automatically on an external member appointed under section 4 (7)–(10) becoming the resident holder of a teaching, research, or administrative post in the University or in any college, society, or Permanent Private Hall;

(f) automatically for an existing appointed, elected or co-opted member on taking office which entitles him or her to serve as an ex officio member of Council;

(g) in accordance with section 8 above on expiry of term;

(h) in accordance with section 11 below unless the General Purposes Committee of Council shall determine otherwise in an individual case;

(i) on acceptance by Council of the resignation of a member.

(2) The decision to remove a member under sub-section (1)(b) above shall only be made by unanimous ballot of all Council members entitled to vote (not including the member whose removal is the subject of the ballot) in accordance with a procedure laid down by Council by standing order.

10. (1) On termination of Council membership under section 9 (1) above of an ex officio member other than the Vice-Chancellor, the appropriate body shall appoint a replacement Council member who shall serve with voting rights but that appointment shall cease automatically on a new appointment to the underlying post;

(2) for the purposes of sub-section (1) above, the appropriate body shall be as follows:

(a) under section 4 (2), the Conference of Colleges;

(b) under section 4 (3)-(4), a substitute qualified under section 17 of Statute IX shall be appointed by the head of the college or society that elected the Proctor in question, or, if the head is absent or the headship is vacant, the viceregent;

(c) under section 4 (5), a substitute qualified under section 17 of Statute IX shall be appointed by the head of the college or society that elected the Assessor, or, if the head is absent or the headship is vacant, the viceregent;

(d) under section 4 (11)-(14), the relevant divisional board.

(3) On termination of Council membership under section 9 (1) above of the Vice-Chancellor, one of the Pro-Vice-Chancellors shall be appointed chairman by the Chancellor or, in default of appointment by the Chancellor, by Council.

11. (1) No person appointed, elected, or serving as a member of Council while holding any academic post of the University or any other of the university or college posts specified in section 3 (6)-(9) of Statute IV shall continue to serve on Council after having retired from that post (or, in the case of a person retiring at different dates from those university and college posts previously held by him or her, after the date of the later of those retirements), unless the Chancellor shall otherwise determine in an individual case.

(2) No person who has previously retired from any of the university or college posts specified in section 3 (6)-(9) of Statute IV, and who does not continue to hold another such post, shall be appointed or elected a member of Council, unless the Chancellor shall otherwise determine in an individual case.

(3) No other person appointed, elected, or serving as a member of Council while not holding such a university or college post shall continue to serve on Council, and no such person shall be appointed or elected a member of Council, after the 30 September immediately preceding his or her 66th birthday, unless the Chancellor shall otherwise determine in an individual case.

12. (1) If at any time a vacancy arises through an appointing or electing body having failed to make an appointment or, in the case of an election, through insufficient nominations having been received by the due date or for any other reason, the Vice-Chancellor and Proctors shall appoint a person to the vacancy.

(2) This section shall apply to vacancies arising on termination of Council membership which in the opinion of Council have not been filled within a reasonable time by the appropriate body under section 10 (2)(b) and (c), such opinion to be determined by a two-thirds majority of those present and voting.

3. Ibid., renumber existing sections 11-23 as 13-25.

4. In section 6 of Statute I (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 97, amended on 10 February 2010, Vol. 140, p. 748, 18 March 2010) insert new paragraph (12):

'(12) 'ex officio' means by virtue of office, for example, a person serving on a committee by virtue of his or her office.'

5. In section 2 (2) of Statute IV concerning Congregation (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 100, amended with effect from 8 April 2009, Gazette Vol. 139, p. 932, 23 April 2009), delete 'Statute VI (sections 1-18 only)' and substitute 'Statute VI (sections 1-20 only)', in section 1 (4) delete 'section 17' and substitute 'section 18', and in section 6 (5) delete 'Sections 13-18' and substitute 'Sections 15-20'.

6. In section 19 (2) of Statute XVI concerning property, contracts and trusts (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, as amended), delete 'sections 13-18' and substitute 'sections 15-20'.

7. These Statutes shall be effective from a date following their approval by Her Majesty in Council, to be announced by prior notice in the Gazette.

Regulations to be made by Council if the Statute is approved by Her Majesty in Council

1. In Council Regulations 14 of 2002¹ (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4634, 16 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 225, as amended on 21 October 2004 and 30 November 2006, Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 245; Vol. 137, p. 458) delete regulation 1 and substitute (new text underlined and deleted text scored through):

'1. These regulations shall apply both to Council and to any 'committee' of the University as defined in section 6 (3) of Statute I.'

2. In Council Regulations 21 of 2002 concerning university officers (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, Vol. 132, p. 1417, as amended on 24 February 2005, 23 March 2006, 19 March 2008 and 26 June 2009, Gazette, Vol. 135, pp. 686, 837; Vol. 138, pp. 837-8, Vol. 140, p. 1300) delete regulation 7 and substitute (new text underlined):

'7. (1) In the event of the incapacity or the initiation of the removal procedure under Part G of Statute XII or absence from Oxford of the Vice-Chancellor, or in the event of a vacancy in the Vice-Chancellorship, one of the Pro-Vice-Chancellors shall be appointed Acting Vice-Chancellor.

(2) In the event that the Vice-Chancellor's membership of Council is terminated under section 9 (1) of Statute VI, one of the Pro-Vice-Chancellors shall be appointed chairman of Council.

¹A further change will be necessary to delete the reference to Council from regulation 6 of Council Regulations 14 of 2002 (see p. 333).

Notices

(23) The appointment shall be made:

(a) by the Vice-Chancellor in the event of incapacity or absence, if the incapacity or absence is unlikely to be longer than two months;

(b) by the Chancellor if the incapacity or absence is likely to be for longer than two months, or the removal procedure under Part G of Statute XII has been initiated, or membership of Council has been terminated, or after an appointment under (a) has lasted for two months, or in the event of a vacancy in the Vice-Chancellorship;

(c) by Council in default of an appointment under (a) or (b);

A Brave New World: The Student Perspective on Oxford post-Browne

Oxford has changed forever. The raising of the cap on tuition fees to £9000 and the introduction of a market in Higher Education will have a profound material and ideological effect on how prospective and current students view an Oxford education. The University must be ready to respond to these changes in order to ensure that our ideals of a world-class and unique education accessible and affordable to all are upheld. Here are just a few factors which Congregation should consider at its Discussion next Tuesday.

The Fee Level

There is a real danger that the sudden rise in fees will deter students from poor backgrounds from applying to Universities with the highest fee levels. It will take time to educate schoolchildren about the benefits of the new system, as Oxford recognised in its submission to the Browne Review when it promised to phase in any fee rises. Amongst all Universities, Oxford is in a unique position due to its access to philanthropic resources to honour that promise.

Fee Waivers

All the available evidence suggests that those from the lowest income households are the most likely to be debt-averse. Oxford should consider putting in place an aggressive fee waiver scheme for the poorest students which will dramatically challenge preconceptions about what kind of a place Oxford is and who is welcome here.

Bursary Provision

Bursary provision that allows students from every background to live comfortably in Oxford during term-time without having to work is an absolute must. This means that a bursary system needs to be designed which is not only generous in terms of headline figures but which can guarantee that students will not fall into hardship no matter where in the Collegiate system they find themselves. That is not an easy task, and should not be rushed simply to meet arbitrary Government deadlines.

Freedom and availability of Information on College costs

A huge key to designing a working bursary system will be to uncover the true nature of College costs for undergraduate students. For many years now most Universities have been entirely up front about living costs. Oxford, on the other hand, remains impenetrable in the way Colleges advertise their accommodation, food and other costs. That has got to change under a national market system in which prospective students will be expected to choose their University as rational economic actors. In reality this will be a great PR exercise for the University, because for most Oxford students rent and food are heavily subsidised by their College. However, College charges which do not provide well-defined and direct benefits to students cannot and will not survive in a system in which students are paying a vastly increased proportion of the costs of their course.

College Best Practice

Gross inequality of provision between Colleges simply will not be accepted by students under any new fees system. Serious structural efforts need to be put in place immediately to ensure that best practice on issues such as academic discipline, welfare provision and complaints procedures are taken up by all Colleges.

Careers Information, Advice and Support

Universities will become increasingly judged not simply on their ability to educate, but on their ability to prepare students for lucrative and fulfilling careers. Oxford lags behind its competitor institutions in terms of its funding and support for its Careers Service, and whilst an Oxford education equips students with many key skills, others – such as teamwork and business understanding – are structurally neglected.

With debts of over £20,000, there is a real danger that Oxford graduates will begin to make career choices based on financial considerations rather than personal and social ones. The University should consider a loan repayment assistance programme similar to the one operated by Duke Law School, whereby graduates that go on to teach in primary and secondary schools are assisted by the University in paying back their student loans. This could form a major platform of any new fundraising drive to support students in the new fees system.

Postgraduate Access and Quality of Provision

A combination of the Government's plans on immigration and the reality of undergraduates leaving Oxford with significant debts will lead to a crisis in Oxford's graduate provision. For too long Oxford has given graduate students the impression that they are cash-cows, and the internationally competitive nature of postgraduate study will ensure that such a situation cannot continue. A full-scale postgraduate teaching review must be initiated at once, and schemes to give undergraduates more experience of research should be considered to boost top-quality applicants at graduate level.

Student Representation and Common Room Funding

There is a real danger that University students in the UK will begin to see themselves as consumers, and as such will demand increased rights. The only way to counter this perception is to give students a real and meaningful stake in the decisions which affect their lives in Oxford, not as consumers but as co-producers of their own education and as real and valued members of the College and University community. That means opening up more financial and confidential material to elected student representatives. It also means sustainable and significant funding for Common Rooms and for the Student Union, so that students have more of a stake in where their money is being spent.

Undergraduate Funding and Support from 2012/13: Topic for Discussion

A Congregation Discussion was held at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, 8 February 2011 in the Sheldonian Theatre on the topic of undergraduate funding and support (including the level of the Home/EU undergraduate fee) from 2012/13 in the context of the new financial arrangements for higher education approved by Parliament in December 2010 (with further legislative decisions by Parliament to follow). Views expressed at the Discussion will be taken into account by Council when it deliberates on these matters at its meeting in week 9 (14 March).

A downloadable recording of the discussion is available on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting). A verbatim transcript of the Discussion will be published in the Gazette on 17 February and available on the Congregation website before then.

Congregation

Congregation

22 February 2 p.m.

¶ Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 14 February, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose one or more of the legislative proposals below, or to speak or ask a question concerning the Annual Review of the University (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the legislative proposals shall be carried and the Annual Review shall be declared presented, and the meeting may be cancelled.

1 Voting on Legislative Proposal: quorum of Council and committees of Council

Explanatory Note

The following Legislative Proposal, submitted by Council under Part 2 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 161, as amended on 12 October 2004, 7 March 2006 and 14 October 2008 (Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; Vol. 137, p. 669; Vol. 139, pp. 4–8), proposes the establishment of a quorum requirement for Council, in accordance with the unanimous recommendation made by the Audit and Scrutiny Committee in its report to Council (the ‘Governance Report’), prepared in response to eight questions posed by HEFCE (Gazette, Vol. 139, p. 551, 29 January 2009, and published online at www.ox.ac.uk/governance, recommendation 3.8, p. 69). Recognising that the quorum rules were likely to operate infrequently, Council has agreed that the quorum rules should be kept as simple as possible. The corresponding changes in regulations also introduce a quorum requirement for committees of Council.

WHEREAS it is expedient to establish a quorum requirement for Council, NOW THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD, in exercise of the powers in that behalf conferred upon it by the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923, and of all other powers enabling it, ENACTS, subject to the approval of Her Majesty in Council, AS FOLLOWS.

1. In Statute VI concerning Council (Supplement (1) to the Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, as amended), insert new section 19 below and renumber existing sections 19–23 as 20–24:

‘19. (1) No business shall be transacted at any meeting of Council unless a quorum is present.

(2) Council shall lay down by regulation the definition of, and the application of rules governing, its quorum.’

2. This statute shall be effective from the date on which it is approved by Her Majesty in Council.

Regulations to be made by Council if the Statute is approved by Her Majesty in Council

1. In Council Regulations 13 of 2002 (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended on 8 May 2003, 14 and 21 January 2010, Gazette, Vol. 139, p. 1244, 11 June 2009; Vol. 140, pp. 405 and 444), insert the heading and new regulations 1–2 below and renumber existing regulations 1–11 as 3–13:

‘Quorum

1. (1) In accordance with section 19 of Statute VI, no business shall be transacted at any meeting of Council unless a quorum is present.

(2) A quorum is one third plus one of those members eligible to vote upon Council business (rounded to the nearest integer).

(3) A member who is participating in a meeting by telephone, video-conference or any other means of communication which permits all members simultaneously to hear one another, shall be considered present and therefore shall count towards the quorum.

2. If:

(1) a quorum is not present within half an hour from the time appointed for the meeting; or

(2) during a meeting a quorum ceases to be present

the business or remaining business of that meeting shall be deferred to another meeting, whether already scheduled or to be scheduled, or shall be dealt with by the Vice-Chancellor acting under delegated authority in accordance with Council's Standing Orders.'

2. In Part 1 of Council Regulations 15 of 2002 concerning committees reporting directly to Council or one of its main committees (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), after existing regulation 1.5 insert new regulations 1.6–1.7 as follows:

1.6. (1) No business shall be transacted at any meeting of a committee reporting directly to Council or one of its main committees unless a quorum is present.

(2) In the absence of provision in these regulations for a larger quorum, a quorum is one third of those members eligible to vote upon the business of the committee in question (rounded to the nearest integer).

(3) A member who is participating in a meeting by telephone, video-conference or any other means of communication which permits all members simultaneously to hear one another, shall be considered present and therefore shall count towards the quorum.

1.7. If:

(1) a quorum is not present within half an hour from the time appointed for the meeting; or

(2) during a meeting a quorum ceases to be present

the business or remaining business of that meeting shall be deferred to another meeting, whether already scheduled or to be scheduled, or shall be dealt with by the chairman acting under delegated authority in accordance with the committee's standing orders.'

3. Ibid., in Part 3 concerning the Finance Committee, after existing regulation 3.60 insert new 3.61 below:

'3.61. Regulations 1.6 and 1.7 in Part 1 apply to this committee except that the quorum is one third plus one of those members eligible to vote upon the business of the committee (rounded to the nearest integer).'

4. Ibid., in Part 3 concerning the Socially Responsible Investment Review Committee, after existing regulation 3.109 insert new 3.110 below:

'3.110. Regulations 1.6 and 1.7 in Part 1 apply to this committee except that the quorum is one third plus one of those members eligible to vote upon the business of the committee (rounded to the nearest integer).'

5. Ibid., in Part 3 concerning the Joint Committee with Student Members, after existing regulation 3.131 insert new 3.132 below:

'3.132. Regulations 1.6 and 1.7 in Part 1 apply to this committee except that the quorum is one third plus one of those members eligible to vote upon the business of the committee (rounded to the nearest integer).'

6. Ibid., renumber existing regulations 3.61–3.142.

2 Voting on Legislative Proposal: removal of Council members

Explanatory Note

The following Legislative Proposal, submitted by Council under Part 2 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 161, as amended on 12 October 2004, 7 March 2006 and 14 October 2008 (Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; Vol. 137, p. 669; Vol. 139, pp. 4–8), proposes that Council is given power to remove a member of Council, in accordance with the unanimous recommendation made by the Audit and Scrutiny Committee in the Governance Report. However, Council has decided that the power to remove a member should also be applicable to ex officio members, as an individual might be removed from Council membership for reasons that would not necessarily cause his or her removal from office.

For the avoidance of doubt, the amendments also transpose to Statute VI provisions concerning membership of committees that are currently in Council Regulations 14 of 2002 but are equally applicable to Council.

A tracked changes version of Statute VI is available online (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/council/C10191tracked.pdf).

Corrections to be made under the slip rule

Regulation 1.17 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Regulations of Congregation for the Conduct of Business in Congregation) gives the Vice-Chancellor the power, after consultation with the Registrar and the Proctors, to correct any clerical error, slip or omission in the text of a legislative proposal which has been made.

After consultation, the Vice-Chancellor has agreed to the amendment of the legislative proposal below, to correct the following errors, and the text of the legislative proposal has been amended accordingly.

1. In new section 8 (4) of Statute VI, the cross-reference should be to 'sub-sections (1 or (3)' not 'sub-sections (1) or (2)', and should apply to 'elected external or co-opted' members, not 'elected nominated or co-opted' members.

2. In new section 9 (1)(b), the cross-reference to section 11 should refer to the determination of the 'Chancellor', not the 'General Purposes Committee of Council'.

3. In new section 12 (2), the cross-reference should be to 'section 10 (2)(b) and (3)', not 'section 10 (2)(b) and (e)'.
WHEREAS it is expedient to give Council power to remove members of Council, NOW THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD, in exercise of the powers in that behalf conferred upon it by the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923, and of all other powers enabling it, ENACTS, subject to the approval of Her Majesty in Council, AS FOLLOWS.

1. In section 4 of Statute VI concerning Council (Supplement (1) to the Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, amended with effect from 8 May 2003, 7 February 2007, 1 October 2008, 16 December 2008, 8 April 2009 and 10 February 2010 (Gazette, Vol. 133, p. 1335, 29 May 2003; Vol. 137, p. 788, 22 February 2007; Vol. 138, p. 991–2, 1 May 2008; Vol. 139, p. 458, 11 December 2008, p. 932, 23 April 2009; Vol. 140, p. 748, 18 March 2010), delete 'sections 5 and 8 of this statute' and substitute 'sections 5 and 8–12 of this statute'.

2. Ibid., delete sections 6–10 and substitute:
'6. Council may, but is not obliged to, co-opt up to three members of Congregation as additional members of Council.
7. The Vice-Chancellor, or, in his or her absence, a member of Council deputed by the Vice-Chancellor, shall take the chair at all meetings of Council and have a second or casting vote in the event of equality of voting.

2. Ibid., delete sections 6–10 and substitute:
'6. Council may, but is not obliged to, co-opt up to three members of Congregation as additional members of Council.

7. The Vice-Chancellor, or, in his or her absence, a member of Council deputed by the Vice-Chancellor, shall take the chair at all meetings of Council and have a second or casting vote in the event of equality of voting.

8. (1) Elected or nominated members of Council Members of Council elected under section 4 (15)–(25) or appointed as an external member under section 4 (7)–(10) above shall serve for a period of four years and shall be eligible to serve for a second consecutive period of four years.

(2) The member of Council elected under section 4 (6) shall serve for such period as may be determined under the regulations of the Conference of Colleges.

(3) Members of Council co-opted under section 6 may serve for a period of up to four years and shall be eligible to serve for a second consecutive period of up to four years.

(4) A member who has served two consecutive periods of four years under sub-sections (1) or (3) above shall not be eligible to serve as an elected external or co-opted member of Council earlier than four years after the end of his or her period of service.

(25) Casual vacancies Vacancies caused other than by expiry of term as a member shall be filled for the remaining period of office of the member replaced in the same manner as that member took up office except on termination of Council membership under section 9 (1) of an ex officio member serving under section 4 (1)-(5) or (11)-(14), when the vacancy shall be filled in accordance with section 10.

(36) A person who is elected or nominated to fill a casual vacancy under sub-section (2) above shall be eligible to serve as an elected or nominated external member of Council after the expiry of the period referred to in sub-section (2) above for a period of four years and shall be eligible to serve for a second consecutive period of four years.

(4) Co-opted members of Council may serve for a period of up to four years and shall be eligible to serve for a second consecutive period of up to four years.

(5) A member who has served two consecutive periods of four years under this section shall not be eligible to serve as an elected nominated or co-opted member of Council earlier than four years after the end of his or her period of service.

(6) This section does not apply to the members of Council referred to in section 4 (1)-(5) or (11)-(14) above.

9. (1) If an elected member of Council ceases to be a member of Congregation, his or her membership of Council shall end immediately.

(2) If a nominated member, having been appointed under the provisions of section 4 (7)-(10) of this statute, becomes the resident holder of a teaching, research, or administrative post in the University or in any college, society, or Permanent Private Hall, his or her membership of Council shall end immediately.

10. Council may determine by regulation that if an elected, nominated, or co-opted member of Council has attended fewer than a prescribed number of meetings in any academic year, his or her membership of Council shall end at the close of that year.

9. (1) Membership of Council shall terminate:

(a) automatically on disqualification from acting as a Trustee by virtue of section 72 of the Charities Act 1993 or any statutory re-enactment or modification of that provision;

(b) for good cause, defined as behaviour incompatible with the member's duties as a Trustee of the University;

(c) automatically at the close of an academic year for absence without permission from a prescribed number of meetings in that year, as determined by regulation;

(d) automatically on a member elected under section 4 (15)-(25) ceasing to be a member of Congregation;

(e) automatically on an external member appointed under section 4 (7)-(10) becoming the resident holder of a teaching, research, or administrative post in the University or in any college, society, or Permanent Private Hall;

(f) automatically for an existing appointed, elected or co-opted member on taking office which entitles him or her to serve as an ex officio member of Council;

(g) in accordance with section 8 above on expiry of term;

(h) in accordance with section 11 below unless the Chancellor shall determine otherwise in an individual case;

(i) on acceptance by Council of the resignation of a member.

(2) The decision to remove a member under sub-section (1)(b) above shall only be made by unanimous ballot of all Council members entitled to vote (not including the member whose removal is the subject of the ballot) in accordance with a procedure laid down by Council by standing order.

10. (1) On termination of Council membership under section 9 (1) above of an ex officio member other than the Vice-Chancellor, the appropriate body shall appoint a replacement Council member who shall serve with voting rights but that appointment shall cease automatically on a new appointment to the underlying post;

(2) for the purposes of sub-section (1) above, the appropriate body shall be as follows:

(a) under section 4 (2), the Conference of Colleges;

(b) under section 4 (3)-(4), a substitute qualified under section 17 of Statute IX shall be appointed by the head of the college or society that elected the Proctor in question, or, if the head is absent or the headship is vacant, the viceregent;

(c) under section 4 (5), a substitute qualified under section 17 of Statute IX shall be appointed by the head of the college or society that elected the Assessor, or, if the head is absent or the headship is vacant, the viceregent;

(d) under section 4 (11)-(14), the relevant divisional board.

(3) On termination of Council membership under section 9 (1) above of the Vice-Chancellor, one of the Pro-Vice-Chancellors shall be appointed chairman by the Chancellor or, in default of appointment by the Chancellor, by Council.

11. (1) No person appointed, elected, or serving as a member of Council while holding any academic post of the University or any other of the university or college posts specified in section 3 (6)-(9) of Statute IV shall continue to serve on Council after having retired from that post (or, in the case of a person retiring at different dates from those university and college posts previously held by him or her, after the date of the later of those retirements), unless the Chancellor shall otherwise determine in an individual case.

(2) No person who has previously retired from any of the university or college posts specified in section 3 (6)-(9) of Statute IV, and who does not continue to hold another such post, shall be appointed or elected a member of Council, unless the Chancellor shall otherwise determine in an individual case.

(3) No other person appointed, elected, or serving as a member of Council while not holding such a university or college post shall continue to serve on Council, and no such person shall be appointed or elected a member of Council, after the 30 September immediately preceding his or her 66th birthday, unless the Chancellor shall otherwise determine in an individual case.

12. (1) If at any time a vacancy arises through an appointing or electing body having failed to make an appointment or, in the case of an election, through insufficient nominations having been received by the due date or for any other reason, the Vice-Chancellor and Proctors shall appoint a person to the vacancy.

(2) This section shall apply to vacancies arising on termination of Council membership which in the opinion of Council have not been filled within a reasonable time by the appropriate body under section 10 (2)(b) and (3), such opinion to be determined by a two-thirds majority of those present and voting.'

3. Ibid., renumber existing sections 11–23 as 13–25.

4. In section 6 of Statute I (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 97, amended on 10 February 2010, Vol. 140, p. 748, 18 March 2010) insert new paragraph (12):

'(12) 'ex officio' means by virtue of office, for example, a person serving on a committee by virtue of his or her office.'

5. In section 2 (2) of Statute IV concerning Congregation (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 100, amended with effect from 8 April 2009, Gazette Vol. 139, p. 932, 23 April 2009), delete 'Statute VI (sections 1–18 only)' and substitute 'Statute VI (sections 1–20 only)', in section 1 (4) delete 'section 17' and substitute 'section 18', and in section 6 (5) delete 'Sections 13–18' and substitute 'Sections 15–20'.

6. In section 19 (2) of Statute XVI concerning property, contracts and trusts (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, as amended), delete 'sections 13–18' and substitute 'sections 15–20'.

7. These Statutes shall be effective from a date following their approval by Her Majesty in Council, to be announced by prior notice in the Gazette.

Regulations to be made by Council if the Statute is approved by Her Majesty in Council

1. In Council Regulations 14 of 2002¹ (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4634, 16 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 225, as amended on 21 October 2004 and 30 November 2006, Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 245; Vol. 137, p. 458) delete regulation 1 and substitute (new text underlined and deleted text scored through):

'1. These regulations shall apply both to Council and to any 'committee' of the University as defined in section 6 (3) of Statute I.'

¹A further change will be necessary to delete the reference to Council from regulation 6 of Council Regulations 14 of 2002 (see Gazette No. 4940, 20 January 2010, Vol. 141, pp. 332–333).

2. In Council Regulations 21 of 2002 concerning university officers (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, Vol. 132, p. 1417, as amended on 24 February 2005, 23 March 2006, 19 March 2008 and 26 June 2009, Gazette, Vol. 135, pp. 686, 837; Vol. 138, pp. 837–8, Vol. 140, p. 1300) delete regulation 7 and substitute (new text underlined):

'7. (1) In the event of the incapacity or the initiation of the removal procedure under Part G of Statute XII or absence from Oxford of the Vice-Chancellor, or in the event of a vacancy in the Vice-Chancellorship, one of the Pro-Vice-Chancellors shall be appointed Acting Vice-Chancellor.

(2) In the event that the Vice-Chancellor's membership of Council is terminated under section 9 (1) of Statute VI, one of the Pro-Vice-Chancellors shall be appointed chairman of Council.

(23) The appointment shall be made:

(a) by the Vice-Chancellor in the event of incapacity or absence, if the incapacity or absence is unlikely to be longer than two months;

(b) by the Chancellor if the incapacity or absence is likely to be for longer than two months, or the removal procedure under Part G of Statute XII has been initiated, or membership of Council has been terminated, or after an appointment under (a) has lasted for two months, or in the event of a vacancy in the Vice-Chancellorship;

(c) by Council in default of an appointment under (a) or (b).'

Fax: 01865 (2)70178

Post: Gazette Advertisements,
Public Affairs Directorate,
University Offices,
Wellington Square,
Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline

Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges

Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £22.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in 'Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements' below.)

External advertisers: £27.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.

For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length

The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment

Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit-card or debit-card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

Note. Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the website. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque

Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note. Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency. If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General

1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be emailed automatically to the email address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges

6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at <http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm>.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer

7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers' Warranty and Indemnity

13. The advertiser warrants:

(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.

Undergraduate Funding and Support from 2012/13: Topic for Discussion

The following is the text of the Discussion in Congregation on 8 February on the topic of undergraduate funding and support (including the level of the Home/EU undergraduate fee) from 2012/13 in the context of the new financial arrangements for higher education approved by Parliament in December 2010 (with further legislative decisions by Parliament to follow).

VICE-CHANCELLOR: The business before Congregation is the presentation of a Topic for Discussion, on the subject of undergraduate funding and support from October 2012. Would you please be seated.

Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen. The topic for today's discussion will be undergraduate funding and support (including the level of the Home/EU undergraduate fee) from October 2012, in the context of the new financial arrangements for higher education approved by Parliament in December 2010 (with further legislative decisions by Parliament to follow).

As noted on the agenda for this meeting in the University Gazette, the University's Access Agreement for 2012 to 2013 must be submitted to the Office of Fair Access (OFFA) by 31 March, and therefore the timetable within which to decide upon a fee level and the associated student support and access arrangements is tight. Notwithstanding this limitation, Council agreed at its meeting on 17 January that all those within the collegiate University wishing to contribute to the deliberations should be given an opportunity to do so, and so that a Congregation Discussion would be central to this consultation process.

After today's discussion, the issues will be developed through college and divisional structures. In terms of the fee level, the Conference of Colleges, Divisional Boards and the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee will reflect on the issues in the second half of Hilary term. PRAC will then synthesise the views expressed in each of these fora, and will make recommendations for decision by Council at its meeting on 14 March; and the necessary regulation will be published in the Gazette on 17 March. The Education Committee will undertake a similar exercise in respect of student financial support and widening access arrangements, and will draft the terms of Oxford's Access Agreement, also for approval by Council on 14 March, and for submission to OFFA by 31 March.

In accordance with the regulation governing topics for discussion, no vote will be taken at this meeting, but Council will be required to give consideration to the remarks made and will do so at Council's meeting on 14 March.

Before turning to the procedure to be followed at this afternoon's discussion, I should add that, whilst this discussion is for members of Congregation, the student view on these issues will of course be an important element in Oxford's deliberations. I have therefore invited three student representatives from OUSU to speak today, and they are accompanied by a group of their student colleagues. Members of the student press have also been invited to attend, so that they can report on the proceedings as soon as practicable. Furthermore, the student representatives who attend meetings of Council, PRAC, the Education Committee and the Divisional Boards will be able to contribute to the consideration these bodies give to the issues. Finally, for those who are unable to attend today's meeting in person, an audio broadcast will be available on the University's website later today; and a transcript of the meeting will appear as a Gazette supplement as soon as possible, and I hope in the issue published on 17 February, but it will be on the University website prior to that.

The procedure for today's discussion will be as follows. I shall ask Professor Tony Monaco, Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Planning and Resources), to introduce the discussion and give an overview of the main factors to be considered. The matter will then be open to the house. At the end of the discussion, I shall ask Professor Monaco to make any final points. I intend to close this afternoon's meeting at about 4.30 p.m. I would ask all speakers to come forward and to speak into the microphone, first giving their name and college or department. Speakers from the floor of the house should please follow the usual convention of not speaking for more than five minutes. May I draw the attention of speakers to the device positioned to the side of the lectern. This anti-loquitor device has green, amber and red lights to help speakers with the timing of their speeches. The amber light shows one minute remaining and should encourage speakers to begin to wind up their remarks. Red means speakers are out of time and must conclude their remarks. I shall have to ask speakers to bring their remarks to an end if they extend beyond five minutes. A number of members of Congregation have indicated a wish to speak, and I will endeavour to call on all of them, but I cannot guarantee that I will be able to do so. Priority will be given to those who have indicated in advance that they wish to speak, and I would ask that additional speakers rise from their seats to indicate their wish to speak only if they have new points to add which have not already been raised by the other speakers.

In accordance with health and safety guidelines, the stenographer who is helping us to transcribe today's proceedings is entitled to a break after an hour and a half. Therefore, if speeches are still being made at 3.30 p.m., I shall call for a five-minute break.

I would be grateful if any speaker who uses a written text would afterwards provide a copy of that text to Mrs Benton, the officer who is collecting such speeches, as this will be of assistance in preparing the published record of the discussion in the Gazette.

I would now ask Professor Monaco to introduce the discussion.

Professor Tony Monaco (Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Planning and Resources), Merton College)

There are a few points that I would like to make as we discuss the issues around fees and student support. Firstly, all universities are losing a substantial amount of funding from the government for teaching. Because of these cuts in government funding, both for teaching and for capital infrastructure, we would have to charge around £8,000 just to maintain the status quo. Anything else would mean we have to lose money or have to find, with immediate effect, funds from elsewhere. If the latter, those funds would be additional to the roughly £80 million per year we already spend subsidising the undergraduate teaching system from other sources within the collegiate University.

There are three things that we need to consider and that will be talked about today. Firstly, there are the financial considerations. Secondly, there's Oxford's commitment to access. A world-leading University must be able to recruit the very best students, regardless of their finances or background. Aiming for that is not just the right thing to do, it is in our own interests. Thirdly, there are the conditions likely to be demanded by government for any institution charging above £6,000 a year. This is related to Oxford's commitment to access, but it is not the same.

There are two aspects to consider in setting the fee: financial considerations and Oxford's commitment to access. Mike Nicholson will address the latter in the next talk. On financial considerations, we have had reductions from HEFCE in the T grant four times over this year and last, for almost £10 million to the collegiate University. Estimates suggest a fee of £7,600 per annum in 2012/2013 prices is required to match the current combination of fee and grant. In addition, HEFCE received a seventy per cent cut in capital funding for the next three years—funding which is vital for our investment in our estate. This amount on average comes to several hundred pounds per student, and brings our stand-still position to almost £8,000 per student per annum. The next factor to consider is the actual cost of delivering an Oxford undergraduate education—estimates based on the TRAC return and a survey of college costs suggests on average £16,000 per student per annum.

In trying to discuss these issues internally in the University, there has been a lack of clarity from government to underpin our decision-making process, particularly on the Access Agreement and the National Scholarship Programme, yet we have been set an aggressive timetable, with decisions required by the end of March. We must also consider the reaction to the fee level that Oxford charges from our actual and potential donors, given what we state about our costs. This will be discussed by Nick Rawlins and others today.

Next I would like to discuss the Oxford bursary scheme for maintenance. Bursaries are to cover living costs. Living costs do not change with the fee levels, but as part of our commitment to access, we must make sure we have got the bursary provision right. Our aim is to make sure that no student is deterred from coming to Oxford and they can all afford the living costs when here, and without taking a job in term time. Government guidelines state that bursaries should no longer be top-sliced from fee income. In other words, we should fund bursaries from our own resources. I would agree. The levels of government grants and loans have increased, so a student will be able to cover their costs with a lower Oxford cash bursary. That would allow us to give more students bursaries, extending support to EU students and middle-income families. We are currently reviewing a revised Oxford bursary scheme, with a proposal to split costs equally between the University and its colleges.

I would now like to briefly discuss potential fee waivers. Under the government's changes, no student pays up front. The education is, in that sense, free to all at the point of entry. So the concern is not whether students from poorer families can afford their fees because of their background—they do not need to pay them until they are earning a salary, and then in an income-linked way. Instead, the concern is about debt aversion—whether debt aversion is more of an issue among students from poorer backgrounds. That is where possible fee waivers come in. Draft guidance from government to OFFA indicates institutions should be required to offer fee waivers. If we raised fees to £9,000 per annum, and we assume £7,600 of that is simply replacing the fee income and direct support from government for teaching, then the effective extra income to the collegiate University at steady state would be around £14 million a year. Schemes have been modelled for fee waivers of £9,000, £6,000 and £3,000 to lower-income students if fees were set at £9,000. For example, a £3,000 fee waiver would charge annual fees of £6,000 for students from lower-income families. The message to them would be: it is no more costly to attend Oxford than any other higher education institution in the UK. This would cost around £4.9 million, over a third of the additional fee income. This would be the equivalent of charging every student, on average, £8,500 instead of £9,000. We would hope to raise a substantial portion of fee waiver support from alumni and friends of Oxford in time, which longer term would reduce the amount of additional fee income used. We would also need to comply with the National Scholarship Programme.

In conclusion, there are various ways of putting in place support for students from lower-income families. Both living-cost bursaries and fee waivers will almost certainly need to play a part. As I said at the beginning, our decisions need to be informed both by financial considerations and by access considerations. Thank you for your attention.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. The discussion is now open to the house, and I will ask Mr Mike Nicholson to speak first.

Mr Mike Nicholson (Director of Undergraduate Admissions)

The University already has significant experience and expertise in undertaking outreach work, and a record of activity which most other universities would envy. In 2010, the college and university staff have had direct contact with seventy-six per cent of all UK secondary schools and colleges with post-sixteen provision. We have done over 1,550 events and have had contact with 3,005 schools and colleges. Many of those involve students from primary up to eighteen, and also work, of course, with mature students.

The two main areas of activity that we engage in in access are both efforts to encourage students and support those applying to Oxford, particularly from non-traditional backgrounds, and we also of course have a social responsibility to widen participation in higher education, and we do that particularly by working locally, with pre-sixteen students, including those in upper primary, with no expectation that this will increase our pool of applicants, but it will raise aspirations to participate in higher education, and also encourage social mobility.

We have, however, through OFFA, heard that we will have to give much clearer indications of outcomes and milestones. Activity alone will not satisfy the government or OFFA. We have put in place the necessary monitoring and tracking to satisfy OFFA for 2012/2013, in my opinion, and in the big ticket projects, UNIQ and teacher conferences, which involve staff from across the collegiate University, we have a range of material and activity to demonstrate success. We also have local widening participation projects, whether it be the Oxford Young Ambassadors Scheme, Young Carers or the work that OUSU are doing with students in care, which have clear aims and objectives and trackable outcomes. Recent work has included the regionalisation project, where all aspects of the UK are linked to colleges and there is a point of contact for schools who previously have had little experience of Oxford. What marks these initiatives is that they involve collaboration across the University: colleges, departments and central University staff and resources are dedicated to this. Many more schemes and programmes exist across the University and it is incumbent upon us to ensure that, where possible, they have clear aims and objectives and outcomes that can be demonstrated to show that they are meeting with objectives to include students applying to Oxford and develop social mobility.

We therefore, in my opinion, for 2012/2013 shouldn't feel the need to invest in a whole range of new activity or reinvent the wheel. We have been strongly advised by OFFA to let the dust settle and build upon our existing success. The UNIQ summer residential scheme, for example, which this year just took over 500 students from state schools and colleges, had participants for twenty different academic programmes, resulting in 348 applicants to Oxford this year, of whom 137 have had an offer. That's a success rate of almost double anything we have previously done through the Sutton Trust. Included in that are forty-three students who have had offers from schools where, in any given year, there may be only one applicant to Oxford, and with very little traditional history of successful applications. For 2011, we already have 650 places and an additional five subject areas committed. We obviously do need to think beyond 2012 and already there are discussions being led by the Admissions Executive of the University, and also involving Education Committee, to look at longer-term initiatives. New initiatives will require careful planning and investment, and if they are to be effectively embedded in the University's activity, we shouldn't feel we have to compromise the quality or outcomes because of political expediency.

All of this links into the concept of fair admissions. Oxford already has a process that seeks to identify those with the greatest academic ability and potential, irrespective of their background, which is achieved through the close collaboration of colleges and departments, using the Common Framework for Undergraduate Admissions as a point of reference and guidance and in which, each year, involves very active engagement and input from tutors, utilising a considerable range of information to make informed and considered decisions. It is in the University's best interests that we have the best students, irrespective of background, if we are to be a world-class institution. We are not complacent, and we constantly monitor, scrutinise and look at our admissions processes, and recent innovations, such as use of contextual information, and greater information technology use is all very important in developing our process. This commitment to access and fair admissions doesn't come cheaply and we are fortunate that we can call upon significant resources from our donors and alumni, but with the reduction in the teaching grant, if we are at least to maintain and preferably grow and develop our access activity, we need to ensure that we have a sound financial base from 2012 onwards. Thank you very much.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Dr Frances Lannon to speak.

Dr Frances Lannon (Principal of Lady Margaret Hall, Chair of the Conference of Colleges)

I thought it might be helpful if I outlined two key issues that have emerged in preliminary discussions about UK and EU undergraduate fees and funding within Conference and its Steering Committee, following the government's Comprehensive Spending Review, and Parliament's decision in December on fees. Nothing in our discussions has assumed that government policies are the ones we would have chosen. Nor is there any implication that we cannot argue for different policies in the future, but we have concentrated on the task in hand, which is working out how best to respond to the reality of government policy and parliamentary legislation as they are today.

The first issue for Conference is ensuring that Oxford is open to the most able students, regardless of their financial situation. The second, just as important, is sustaining excellence in research-informed teaching and learning. We are passionate about both. The current debate in Oxford is of singular importance to colleges. Colleges rely heavily, though not exclusively, on academic income to support teaching and learning. Colleges also contribute directly to supporting students from lower-income families, by funding just over half of the Oxford Opportunity Bursary Scheme and providing additional bursaries and hardship payments.

Conference representatives are actively engaged with the academic divisions and University officers in preparing the most generous possible new scheme of bursaries and fee waivers. We are fully committed to supporting these. It would be abhorrent to us to create an Oxford that was accessible only to those with the ability to pay or that unintentionally dissuaded some able students from applying. We are equally committed to sustaining the kind of undergraduate education that is characteristic of Oxford, and here the strains are already showing rather badly. Many of the academic departments with large numbers of undergraduate students are in deficit. There is a substantial cross-subsidy from research to teaching that is simply not sustainable indefinitely. Also, an alarmingly large number of what should be joint posts between departments and colleges that are absolutely crucial for undergraduate teaching are frozen on the University side. In these circumstances, colleges have taken on extra burdens to keep teaching provision going, and this has been very challenging. Many colleges are struggling to avoid deficits, and have adopted coping mechanisms, such as under-spending on infrastructure. These also cannot continue indefinitely. We need more income, not less, to ensure excellence in teaching and learning.

I think everyone here is well aware that the actual cost of an Oxford undergraduate education is substantially greater than the highest fee level permissible for universities in England from 2012. Even at that level of £9,000, Oxford would continue to provide a universal subsidy to all UK and EU undergraduates of several thousand pounds per annum, regardless of income or need. If we were to extend that universal subsidy by charging a fee lower than £9,000, our ability to sustain academic excellence and provide fee waivers and bursaries would be proportionately lessened. It seems clear that we need to target additional resources where they are most needed. We cannot choose a lower fee income and, at the same time, support excellence and access in the way we passionately wish to do.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Mr David Barclay.

Mr David Barclay (President of the Oxford University Student Union, Worcester College)

It's a great honour to be asked to address you today as the representative of Oxford students. My intention is nothing less than the total recasting of the debate around undergraduate funding and support through a new understanding of the true nature of the crisis that we confront together today. The tone that I have heard in committees so far on this issue has cast the crisis as one of regulation and finances. I can't tell you of the numbers and acronyms that I have heard: £16,000; seventy per cent; OFFA, BIS and TRAC. We all know that this University is not rolling in cash, but the bottom line is this: the idea that, by playing the new system right and maximising our resources from students we can bring back the economic good times, is a total chimera. Our margin for new action may not be great, but it is real, and by restricting ourselves to just jumping through the HEFCE hoops, we are giving in to the comforting myth that the only crisis we face is one of securing our current way of life against stricter rules and tighter budgets. No, the real crisis Oxford faces is one of community, and by that I mean two things: firstly, how our community is understood and accessed by those outside it; and secondly, how the key relationship within our community—that between tutors and students—is being undermined.

On the first issue of access, let's not be mistaken. Oxford's image amongst young adults in Britain is nowhere near what we need it to be. The status quo is simply not good enough, and the status quo has gone forever. We all know that this new system, through poor design and shocking PR, will put the poorer students off applying to university. The argument I keep hearing is that those students who will no longer come to university will never be Oxford's problem, because they would never have the brains to come here anyway. That argument sickens me to the core. The day we give up on students who would never have before thought of coming to university, coming here to Oxford, is the day we abandon any pretence of seeking academic talent wherever it may be found. Can't every single person in this room think of someone who has come to Oxford as the first member of their family to have accessed higher education? This is a time when image really matters. Oxford must phase in any fee rises to shield its students and tell the world that we will not let them suffer the full consequences of this unprecedented change. We must put in place an extraordinary fee waiver scheme that allows us to say to the poorest students that we value your academic talent so much we will make it free for you to study here, and we must increase spending on bursaries and peg it to the most expensive college, so that we can assure every student, wherever they are in the collegiate University, that they will be able to live comfortably in Oxford during term time without having to find employment.

That is the bare minimum that this University must do and that's not the full story. I'm sure many of you will have seen the news last week of the student who is suing Oxford over our teaching. This is a clear sign of the fundamental danger of the new system in turning this place into one of consumers and producers of knowledge. I believe we are not consumers and producers but a community of intellectuals, engaged in the common task of investigating the world around us and understanding the human condition. The only way to avoid a transactional and confrontational relationship between students and tutors is to engage whole-heartedly in a co-operative and co-equal one. Again, we cannot pretend that status quo is good enough; not when colleges try to sneak student charges in the back door to make ends meet, and not when senior University appointments are made with no student representation whatsoever. OUSU and the Common Rooms across Oxford are ready to take our seats at the table, to face the big issues that affect us all, but until the colleges and the University are ready to listen to our voice, and sacrifice to turn it into action, the seats at the negotiating tables will become the pews of the courts, to the detriment of us all.

So, Congregation, please don't allow University Council to be wooed by the proud and miserly voice which says we must charge what we can and spend only what we have to. The real crisis we face has got very little to do with the University's wallet and everything to do with how our community draws in talent from every background and gives them real power over their experience here. The students of Oxford have sent me here today to ask some of the greatest minds in the world to set themselves to the task of answering that challenge, and to answer the question which the whole nation will be asking: what will Oxford do now?

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Professor Susan Cooper.

Professor Susan Cooper (Department of Physics, St Catherine's College)

In the Browne report, and in the ensuing discussion, there have been a lot of very emotional words that have little to do with the actual numbers proposed. When it comes to paying, it's the numbers that matter. The graduate payments are a requirement to pay an additional income tax of nine per cent above a personal exemption of £21,000 for up to thirty years. This adds a tax band between the standard twenty per cent above £7,000 and forty per cent above £43,000, so that it becomes twenty, twenty-nine and forty-nine.

No-one likes paying more tax, but it is a far cry from the claimed 'risk of having a large debt hanging over your head.' It is not a risk to students. Risk means you don't know what will happen. Students can conservatively plan on paying nine per cent of their income above £21,000 for thirty years. In this one place, the government does use the proper word—the loan is forgiven after thirty years, without the bad connotation of defaulting on a loan. The risk is to the government in not knowing how many loans they will need to forgive. It is not pushing graduates into higher-earning careers, any more than income tax does. Nor does it interpret the benefits of a university education only in terms of personal economic benefit—personal benefit, yes, and paying for it if it also brings economic benefit. Since the nine per cent tax is only on income above £21,000, it's a smaller percentage of total income.

Graduates only need to earn slightly more as a result of their university education to come out ahead in financial terms. Unless they earn significantly more, the government will pay much of the cost. It isn't even a cut in government funding; it just comes to students in a different guise of forgiving loans after thirty years, depending on their earnings. Since the government will pay the fees up front in full for everyone, the flow of government funding into universities doesn't change; it just comes under a different label. It may even be a bit more, reducing somewhat the deficits we already have in many of our academic departments. This is not a harm to the Humanities. Their real problem is in the reduction to their research funding. What it is, is financial hocus-pocus that turns the government support into loans that sit on a different balance sheet. I do not approve of such financial tricks, but in the context of the government's insistence on reducing the national debt, if they hadn't done this, universities would have been hard hit by cuts. Students would suffer, as the quality of education would decline sharply. It is more progressive than the current flat subsidy to everyone. It is not a pure and simple tax, as high-earning graduates stop paying nine per cent to the government when they have paid off their total; the government only gets back what it paid the university in the first place. Not that we intend to let our high earners off scot-free afterwards—we will try to persuade them to make donations to Oxford to support the next generation of students. It is a clever graduate tax.

The scrapping of the EMA and Aim Higher are real blows to access. The new scheme of fees only harms access because the government has done such an appalling job of explaining it. Apparently spin doctors only know how to obscure the truth, not reveal it. Oxford needs to do better, first, in understanding it ourselves, and then explaining it to prospective students. After such a bad start, it isn't easy. I have already put in a lot of effort, and I'm still finding bits of brainwashing left in my head that I need to throw out.

Once we can see the scheme for what it really is, we can think constructively about how to deal with it. Fee waivers are an inefficient use of our funds, as they just subtract from the government's forgiveness after thirty years. What students from disadvantaged backgrounds most need, after a decent explanation of the scheme, is sufficient maintenance support, so they can devote themselves to their studies, rather than needing to earn money in every spare minute. We could also do more to support students with extra tuition before their first year at Oxford, allowing us to take more of a risk on admitting students who are obviously bright, but somewhat lacking in preparation. That costs money and effort, but could yield real benefits. If we apply our brains to it as a community, some good could even come out of this. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Professor David Norbrook.

Professor David Norbrook (English Faculty, Merton College)

I have been a member of this University for most of the last forty years, and this is the first time I have felt impelled to speak in Congregation. I have been disturbed and perplexed by the gap between the dismaying philistinism of the Browne review and the enthusiasm with which Russell Group universities have rushed to praise and accept it. As a parent, in contact with parents of vehement young opponents of the spending review, I have been equally perplexed to explain my University's position to outsiders. Susan Cooper's work suggests there's less cause for alarm than I'd feared, but the higher education settlement is still in progress, and as we head into further phases, we can use this occasion, as our colleagues at Cambridge are also trying to do, to take stock of some larger goals of higher education that are maybe getting lost along the way.

I would like to start with a thought experiment. Suppose a representative of British universities defended them in these terms: universities form part of a network of public services, ranging from the NHS through libraries to the BBC which, for all their faults, make Britain a civilised place to live. The universities foster critical and independent-minded debate and scrutiny of the evidence, whatever the particular subject matter. Academics generally get on with doing their work, without needing to be babied and coddled with perks and bonuses. In proceeding through co-operation as well as competition, they bring together key qualities of public and private enterprises. These qualities of critical independence are valuable at every level of society, as the foundations of a strong democracy, but universities offer spaces where they can be cherished and a bulwark against strong counter-forces. The strong public interest in their continuance means they need strong and secure public funding. I framed that as a thought experiment because people tend not to talk like this, because it seems embarrassing and self-aggrandising, and when neither the public nor the politicians are receptive, spokespersons for universities tend to fall into apologetic mode. But years of having to translate our own values into those which we think our audience hold have led to a kind of atrophy. Universities see themselves as a drain on public finance, despite the relatively low level of government spending on higher education in this country. As far as I can tell, Oxford's official position is that taxpayers will never, under any circumstances, think it worthwhile to fund higher education to a higher degree than now. We are sorry, we cost too much; our salvation must come from fees and private donors.

These positions are routinely presented as something that barely needs arguing, bowing to the inevitable, but they involve unacknowledged choices and priorities. Yes, we do have an economic crisis; yes, widening numbers of students have placed new strains on the system, but the new higher education settlement, as is by now emerging, rests on imperfectly argued assumptions about market dynamism in education, and won't ease public spending nearly as much as is claimed. What it will do is further the perverse combination of a marketising rhetoric and heightened state control that characterises a welfare state that dare not speak its name. Access, of course, is a major problem, and it's good to hear how much is being done in this University, but it does seem clear that the rhetoric of access is, to a large degree, being used as one more stick to beat universities with. Closing down large numbers of public libraries in socially deprived areas will have major consequences for admissions, but we are the ones who will be saying sorry. The questions of fees and admissions are linked with wider patterns in our academic culture—the constant mechanism of prods and pushes that's deemed necessary to force universities into market models. On the Browne review's model, universities transmit narrowly defined skills but don't need to encourage a passion for truth, honesty, or independent-mindedness. It's far from clear these are qualities that governments of any colour actually want, since they involve values inimical to top-down government. Democracy simply doesn't figure anywhere in the Browne committee's deliberations. A body like Congregation is clearly inimical to its core values.

We are now seeing worrying signs of new top-down pressures on scholarship. Traditionally there have been recognised constraints on government control of research through the Haldane principle, but BIS has recently declared that this principle needs diluting. In the same document it lists 'communities and big society' as an urgent strategic priority for Humanities research. With breathtaking speed, a slogan for one political party has become translated into a central intellectual agenda for the academy. As far as I can see, this has passed without protest—after all, we are used to apologising that our research doesn't serve politicians' needs. Now we are happy to oblige. Well, let's not be. Let's stand up for what a university should be and let's stop apologising.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Mr Roger Boden, please.

Mr Roger Boden (Bursar of Keble College, Chair of the Estates Bursars' Committee)

As the Chair of the Conference of Colleges has said, the colleges are committed both to ensuring that Oxford is open to the most able students, regardless of their financial situation, and to sustaining excellence in teaching and learning. I should like, as Chair of the Estates Bursars' Committee, to say something about the financial challenges confronting colleges as they try to honour both commitments.
